GARY RIOT CALLS TROOPS

KIN CLEARED OF SHARE IN PURCELL MAZE

Inquiry Shows All Away at Time of Mystery Death.

No member of the family of Elias H. Purcell, found dead in his apartment at 61 Roscoe street Monday, Sept. 22, had the physical opportunity of being present at the time of his death, or of arranging the "camouflage breakfast" and other stage settings which have made this mystery one of the greatest in the annals of Chicago.

This fact apparently has been established by THE TRIBUNE, following a investigation, which started shortly after the finding of the body. Whether Purcell came to his death by murder or suicide, it was not in the presence of his wife, Mrs. Lovie Purcell; of his son, Thomas V. Purcell, or of his daughter and her husband, Lieut. and Mrs. John Sheehy. Neither did any one of them, according to their undisputed stories, appear at the scene of the tragedy after the death and prior to the finding of the body by the present house janitor.

Facts Back All "Alibis."

TRIBUNE reporters journeyed to every point mentioned in the alibis given by each member of the family. In each case competent witnesses were found to testify as to the truth of the statements.

From Friday afternoon, Sept. 19, when Purcell was last seen at his home, until the relatives' arrival in Chicago after the finding of the body, there is not an hour of their time which has not been accounted for and not a movement which is not known—so far as can be established.

Unless later investigation succeeds in overthrowing the wall of material evidence built around the members of the family by their own actions, that wall of evidence frees them from all suspicion as to their bodily presence during the police at the scene of the crime.

Mystery Grows Deeper.

With this elimination the mystery surrounding the death of Purcell grows ever deeper. Slight contradictions in the stories told by members of the family have led to a suspicion in certain official quarters that evidence of vital importance may be suppressed for various reasons. These contradictions are now being investigated by the authorities.

For instance:

Thomas Purcell, the dead man's son, purchased copies of Chicago afternoon papers telling of his father's death for his sweetheart when she left for Joliet, Ill., shortly after noon Monday, Sept. 22, the day the body was found. But Tom, according to his first story, did not see the papers until shortly before 3 o'clock that afternoon.

Changes His Story.

Following revelation in THE TRIBUNE yesterday morning, Tom admitted his sweetheart had returned to the city and bolted him of his father's death while he was in the Illinois Central office before 3 o'clock.

Copies of the noon editions of the Chicago afternoon papers of that date bore staring headlines telling of the finding of the body, with the stories so prominently displayed that one could hardly fail to notice them.

When Purcell's body was found, the door of the apartment building normally had a key sticking from the outside lock of the kitchen door. This proved to be a skeleton key of the variety which can be purchased at any 5 and 10 cent store.

Key Stories Differ.

Sergts. Mallow and Cudmore of the Town Hall police station, who conducted the police investigation, declared last night that Mrs. Lovie Purcell, the widow, had identified the key as one which always had been in the door.

During a conversation in the apartment a week later the key was produced by members of the family with the assertion that no one ever had seen it before, and that the police had been told of it and had paid no attention.

The janitor, his wife, and neighbors were unable to identify it.

The police at Town Hall station last night denied having taken the key or having possession of it.

Flaw in Food Story Too.

Investigators in the early part of the week were told by members of the family that Purcell, on the Saturday before his death, had stored up the

BOTH PARTIES IN BAY STATE WANT LEAGUE CHANGED

G. O. P. Asks Reservations; Democrats for Amendments.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 4.—The Republicans of Massachusetts in their state convention today declared in favor of the prompt ratification of the treaty of peace, "without amendment," but with specified reservations, and condemned the action of the peace commissioners in the matter of Fiume, Thrace, and Shantung.

At the same time the Democrats in their state convention, after a heated debate, went on record favoring ratification of the treaty, including the league of nations covenant, by the United States senate, "provided the covenant is so amended as to give to no other nation more votes than the United States, to protect the sovereignty of the American people, to protect the right of self-determination, and to refrain from adding to the burden of peoples wanting to be free and independent."

Endorse Lodge's Course.

The Republican convention declared "its pride in the statesmanship of Henry Cabot Lodge" and endorsed "his efforts to bring about prompt action on the treaty."

Interest in the Republican resolutions centered in the attitude to be taken toward the league of nations. The committee, which began its work yesterday afternoon, did not complete its report until early today.

The reservations specifically favored were for the right of the United States to withdraw from the league upon due gress shall so direct; for complete connotice; for no obligation to employ American soldiers or sailors unless control of domestic questions, such as the tariff and immigration, by the United States, and for the United States to be the sole judge in interpreting the Monroe doctrine.

For Two Main Changes.

In approving the platform Senator Lodge said too much emphasis had been placed on the difference between an amendment and a reservation. There were, he said, two more amendments of consequence now before the senate. One was that striking out the provision regarding Shantung, which he described as "morally indefensible as well as politically short sighted."

Discussing the necessity for reservations, Senator Lodge said without them the "treaty is dead."

"Three days ago," he added, "that would have been merely my assertion. But on Thursday we demonstrated it. The Fall amendments were simply intended to take our commissioners out of thirty or forty commissions to settle boundaries—to take them out of the commissions in regard to business which did not concern us, which were not vital. They will all be adopted in the reservations."

Fight Made for Ireland.

In the state Democratic assemblage the clash over the treaty and the league centered about an amendment introduced by John L. Donovan of Boston, which was finally rejected. This amendment demanded that the treaty of peace and the covenant of the league of nations "be considered and acted upon as separate and distinct documents," that the senate refuse to approve any such document "which does not give self-determination to all small nations, whether opposed by the victor or vanquished, especially Ireland, to whose sons and daughters these United States owe a debt of gratitude which can never be fully repaid," and that the senate "shall ever keep before its mind the fact that we are not ruled by autocrat or emperor, and that not even the president of the United States may usurp their functions."

The convention extended sympathy to President Wilson in his illness and "cordial wishes for his immediate restoration to good health." The platform expressed "hearty commendation of his administration."

Differ on Police Strike."

As to the recent Boston police strike, the Republican convention indorsed Gov. Coolidge "for his ready and fearless service for the enforcement of law and order."

The Democratic platform said: "While we do not condone the policemen who left their post of duty, we condemn Gov. Coolidge for his inaction and culpability in failing to protect the lives and property of the people of Boston."

INJUN SUMMER'S COME AGAIN

Republished by Request. Published originally in the autumn of 1907.

[Copyright: 1912: By John T. McCutcheon.]

Yep, sonny, this is sure enough Injun summer. Don't know that that is, I reckon, do you?

Well, that's when all the homesick Injuns come back to play. You know, a long time ago, long afore yer granddaddy was born even, there used to be heaps of Injuns around here—thousands—millions, I reckon, far as that's concerned. Reg'lar sure 'nough Injuns—none o' yer cigar store Injuns, not much. They wus all around here—right here where you're standin'. Don't be skeered—hain't none around here now, leastways, no live ones. They been gone this many a year. They all went away and died, so they ain't no more left.

But every year, long about now, they all come back, leastways, their sperrits do. They're here now. You can see 'em off across the fields. Look real hard. See that kind o' hazy, misty look out yonder? Well, them's Injuns—Injun sperrits marchin' along an' dancin' in the sunlight. That's what makes that kind o' haze, that's everywhere—it's jest the sperrits of the Injuns all come back. They're all around us now. See off yonder, see them tepees? They kind o' look like corn shocks from here, but them's Injun tents, sure as you're a foot high. See 'em now? Sure, I knowed you could. Smell that smoky sort o' smell in the air? That's the campfires a-burnin' and their pipes a-goin'. Lots o' people say it's jest leaves burnin', but it ain't. It's the campfires, an' th' Injuns are hoppin' 'round 'em t' beat the old Harry.

You jest come out here tonight when the moon is hangin' over the hill off yonder an' the harvest fields is all swimmin' in th' moonlight, an' you can see the Injuns and the tepees jest as plain as kin be. You can, eh? I knowed you could after a little while.

Jever notice how the leaves turn red 'bout this time o' year? That's jest another sign o' redskins. That's when an old Injun sperrit gits tired dancin' an' goes up an' squats on a leaf t' rest. Why, I kin hear 'em rustlin' an' whisperin' an' creepin' round among the leaves all the time; an' ever' once in a while a leaf gives way under some fat old Injun ghost and comes floatin' down to the ground. See—here's one now. See how red it is? That's the war paint rubbed off'n an Injun ghost, sure's you're born.

Purty soon all the Injuns'll go marchin' away agin, back to the happy huntin' ground, but next year you'll see 'em troopin' back—th' sky jest hazy with 'em and their campfires smolderin' away jest like they are now.

THE 'INJUN SUMMER' CARTOON

THE editor has asked me to write a short piece about the "Injun Summer" cartoon, which is again reprinted today.

It made its first appearance on Sept. 30, 1907, at a time when a succession of beautiful autumn days inspired one to poetic thoughts. The country was hazy with the fires from burning leaves, and it was not a difficult flight of imagination to "pretend" that the haze was really the spirits of the departed Injuns of long ago, trooping back to their earthly hunting grounds.

This thought was the starting point of the cartoon and around it was built the completed structure. The shocks of corn naturally suggested the tepees of the Indians, the burning leaves suggested the campfires and the red of the autumn leaves the red paint of the warriors.

The cartoon evidently made lasting friends, if one may judge by the numbers of letters which each year request its republication.

Since its first appearance, it has been reprinted a number of times. It has appeared in colors on a calendar, and, on one occasion, it was printed in tints in the rotogravure section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. At one of the banquets of the Indiana society the gold room of the Congress hotel was decorated in a reproduction of the cartoon, and at the present time a large Chicago department store is exhibiting it in tableau form.

The original of the cartoon is in the possession of Mr. Howard F. Gillette of Chicago.

HINDENBURG FOR PRESIDENT, CRY ON HIS BIRTHDAY

BERLIN, Oct. 2.—[Delayed.]—"Hindenburg for president!" This slogan, which had its inception some months ago, was revived today, the field marshal's seventy-second birthday. The Hindenburg boom was given new impetus. His backers proclaimed his renown in the following advertisement, flaringly displayed:

"May God give you long life, health, and strength. Germany needs you and waits for you.

"Millions of Germans build upon you the hope that they may be rescued from the swamp of humiliation and shame. We have only one Hindenburg. Good luck!"

HAMILTON CLUB PLANS ADDITION TO ITS QUARTERS

Plans for a larger and greatly improved Hamilton club were initiated at a general meeting last night. The plan is to make the present building, located at 20 South Dearborn street, a fifteen story structure with accommodations for 1,000 additional members.

The board of directors was authorized to issue $750,000 in bonds to finance the reconstruction work. A plan for refunding the present outstanding indebtedness was also announced.

All of the top floor of the new structure will be used for a modern gymnasium, which will include a running track. The dining room facilities will be materially increased and 100 sleeping rooms added to the present dormitory equipment.

At the conclusion of the meeting A. N. Marquis, the president, announced that the directors will do everything possible to expedite the building plans, which will provide ample facilities to accommodate 3,000 members.

STEEL STRIKE SITUATION

5,000 strikers riot in Gary. Forty to fifty hurt and as many arrested. Eleven companies of Indiana state troops ordered to Gary and Indiana Harbor. Mills report more men returning to work throughout Chicago area.

In the east the senate committee adjourned to meet later in Pittsburgh. Steel corporation employes testified yesterday that the union organizers "were trying to sovietize the mills." Both sides claimed gains in the Pittsburgh areas. The companies are preparing to reopen many plants tomorrow. Bethlehem strike leaders are said to have admitted their defeat.

MONKEYSKIN AND CAT FUR LATEST IN FRENCH GARB

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Monkey skin robes and cat hats are the newest fad launched by leading dressmakers who are boosting the leather garment fashion for the coming winter.

Tremendous prices are asked for garments made of monkey skin and fashion creators are wondering where they will get monkeys to obtain the skins if the style becomes popular and there are big demands made for monkey skins. Leather trimmed tailor made dresses, hats, and coats were in evidence yesterday at the horse racing owing to cool weather.

Women who have already purchased leather garments found trouble keeping them fresh and clear, as they get dull and rusty looking after being worn automobiling. Consequently leading Rue de la Paix shops for women decided to open a sort of de luxe shining parlor, only instead of shining shoes, suits, and coats will be cleaned and shined up for customers. Twenty dollars will be charged for cleaning skinned leather sets and $50 for coats.

At Biarritz chic males now wear monocles while bathing and strolling beach bathing suits. Men who don't wear monocles at any other time put one in their eye during the bathing hour, just before noon.

HOSPITALS AND JAIL FILLED AS 5,000 BATTLE

Sight of Riot Guns Calms Mob of Strikers.

BULLETIN.

The steel company will make no effort to get men into the mills today. Only the workers already inside will be employed until after the troops have taken charge of the situation.

BULLETIN.

John Lazar, a striker, called at the home of Gustave Barr in Gary late last night to persuade Barr not to go back to work. He and Mrs. Barr got into an argument, in Barr's absence, and Lazar, the police charge, grabbed an air rifle belonging to Mrs. Barr's son and shot and beat her with it. Her leg was broken.

Ephraim Schewchyj, a striker, was arrested at the South Shore railroad and Buchanan street in Gary early today, charged with inciting to riot.

Eleven companies of Indiana state troops are being rushed to Gary and Indiana Harbor by Gov. James P. Goodrich. They are expected to reach the strike zone at 6 o'clock this morning.

They were ordered out last night after Gary had been swept for two hours by rioting strikers and sympathizers. It was the most serious outbreak since the strike was called on Sept. 22.

Scores were arrested and the hospitals were filled with wounded following a pitched battle between 5,000 strikers and several hundred policemen and special deputy sheriffs.

Riot Guns Quell Disorder.

The disturbance was quelled only after two squads of policemen had been ordered out with riot guns and fire companies stood ready to charge the mobs with high pressure streams of water.

Not a shot was fired by either side during the fighting. Paving stones, bottles, bricks, and clubs were the weapons used by the strikers, and there was hardly a member of the Gary police force who escaped being struck. Missiles were rained down on their heads by strike sympathizers from second story windows.

The trouble was started by pickets returning from a massmeeting at which the strikers had been inflamed by the report that the steel mills would attempt to break the strike tomorrow. Plans also had been made at the meeting for a demonstration of strength by all the strikers and their families in the streets of Gary at 10 o'clock tonight.

Race Question a Factor.

Bitterness over the race question also developed and the strikers leav-

PROFESSOR DIES OF AUTO CRASH AS KIN SEEK HIM

Visitor Struck Friday, Relatives Find Him After Death.

Prof. Leonard Blakey of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, died yesterday in the county hospital. He was struck by an automobile Friday night at Ashland avenue and Monroe street. W. C. Yippman, 5242 South Ashland avenue, owner and driver of the car, was not arrested.

Wrote Book on Living Cost.

Prof. Blakey had come to Chicago to make arrangements with A. W. Shaw & Co. for the publication of his book, which deals with the high cost of living. He had completed all but a few chapters.

He had been staying with his brother, A. R. Blakey, 145 North Paulina street, senior at Rush Medical college, and his sister, Dorothy. He had gone out to have some manuscript typed when he was run down.

Worried Kin Hunt in Vain.

His brother and sister, worried because he did not return, tried to find out if anything had happened to him. But the Warren avenue police had no record of the accident. The Desplaines street police had handled the case. It was not until Prof. Blakey was dead that his brother was notified.

GENTLEMEN OF LEISURE WRECK HOME, GET $12,700

Burglars got into the home of William S. Pace, 5133 Sheridan road, Thursday and stole $12,700 worth of jewels. Capt. Max Danner of the Summerdale station suppressed the facts, but the details were learned last night.

The men got in through an icebox that opens on the porch for the convenience of the iceman. They ransacked the house. They tore pictures off the walls looking for a wall safe, tore up the carpets, turned the mattresses upside down, pulled out drawers and scattered their contents over the floor, and threw everything off the shelves. They were in no hurry.

In the loot was an oval shaped platinum barpin with a diamond in the center and thirty-six smaller diamonds around it valued at $3,000, a platinum lavalliere valued at $1,100, two diamond and platinum rings valued at $5,000. Much cheaper jewelry was left and apparently nothing but gems were taken.

ONLY DEMOCRATS CAN ENJOY THE LUX'REESH O' LIFE

"Talk about 2.75 per cent beer," said the city chemist, "this contains 2.81 per cent. Where did it come from?"

Detective Sergeants Enright and Hielman of the central station answered that it came from the Chicago Home Rule Democratic club, 81 West Randolph street.

Capt. Morgan Collins told them to get a warrant under the search and seizure law and raid the club. They did. They arrested the manager, Albert Mangler, and, they say, confiscated seventy-two quarts of whisky and a case of beer.

Boy Shoots Self Handling Gun He Thought Unloaded

While handling a revolver he believed to be not loaded, Charles Miller, 19, 1747 West Fourteenth street, accidentally shot himself in the lung last night. He was taken to the county hospital in a serious condition. Two young companions of Miller were taken into custody by the police and held as witnesses. They are Charles Haderly, 736 South Marshfield avenue, owner of the weapon, and Joseph Schorvit, 1657 Washburne avenue.

Baby, 18 Months Old, Shot by a Boarder

Edward Zeleuiter, 18 months old, 933 West Thirty-third street, was accidentally shot late last night in his home. A boarder whose name the police did not learn was cleaning a revolver when it was discharged, and the bullet struck the boy while he was playing on the floor. The police could not find the boarder. The child will live.

Three Shot, Two Hurt, in California Strike Battle

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 4.—Three men were shot and two more injured today as the result of attempts to prevent the operation of street cars on the lines of the San Francisco-Oakland Terminal railway. The platform men of the company struck Wednesday.

WILSON SHOWS IMPROVEMENT; HAS A FAIR DAY

Change for Better Is Not Decisive, Says Grayson.

BULLETIN.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—(Special.)—At 10:20 tonight Dr. Cary T. Grayson issued the following bulletin on President Wilson's condition:

"The president has passed a more encouraging day. The improvement is slight, but not decisive. GRAYSON."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—President Wilson's illness is causing increasing alarm in official Washington notwithstanding the fact that Dr. Grayson's bulletin at 10:50 o'clock this morning reported his condition more favorable. The alarm is over the prospect that his incapacity will be protracted and that his convalescence will require longer than had been hoped, rather than actual fear that the illness will terminate fatally.

Another consultation of physicians and experts was held at the White House today. Participating in the consultation with Dr. Grayson were Dr. F. X. Dercum, the Philadelphia neurologist, who was first called into the case on Thursday; Dr. George E. Schweinitz, the president's oculist, also from Philadelphia; Dr. Sterling Ruffin of Washington, and Dr. E. R. Stitt.

Physicians Are Silent.

No statements were made by any of the specialists following the consultation.

The second visit to the president of the Philadelphia nerve and eye specialists within two days has given rise to increasing alarm on the part of the president's friends and government associates.

They feel that the president's condition is more grave than the public has thus far been permitted to know, their fears being based on the fact that the specialists are keeping such close watch of the patient.

Cabinet Meeting Called.

The issuance of a call for a cabinet meeting for Monday by Secretary of State Lansing has also given rise to uneasiness over the president's condition, officials being convinced that the meeting has been called because of the illness.

It is the general belief here among officials and senators who learned of the coming meeting of the cabinet without the president and without the call of the president that no doubt a serious view of the president's illness was held by members of his official family and that it was intended to attempt to devise ways and means of permitting the routine of executive business to continue.

If the president is to be completely laid up for any length of time it is necessary that the vice president be empowered to sign bills and perform other such duties.

Foreign Affairs in Balance.

Not only routine business of the government but foreign affairs of the utmost moment are left dangling at loose ends by the illness of the chief executive.

The question of the final settlement of the Fiume issue, the possibility of recognition of the Esthonian nation preparatory to warring on bolshevik Russia, the involved shipping relations of the United States with foreign nations, particularly England, and a score of other similar considerations are "up in the air" and must receive executive attention, it was pointed out.

Question for His Advisers.

The question of a possible temporary passing of power is said to be engaging the attention of lawyers connected with the administration. The cabinet may consider it. Granting that it should be necessary—and the physicians give hope that it will not be—there arises the question as to whether the president himself would proclaim his physical inability to carry on the work for a time, or whether this would be done by his physicians and advisers.

However, the reticence of the doctors is not generally regarded as discouraging, and the happier view is that a few weeks will see Mr. Wilson recovered and back at his desk.

Tonight Dr. Grayson said that the president's temperature and blood pressure continued normal, and that his mind was active, although his appetite was not good, and that he had taken sparingly of nourishment. The chief obstacle in the treatment of the patient is to overcome his desire to take up official business.

When Dr. Grayson told the president today that his temperature was normal, the president retorted that his temper would not remain normal much longer unless he was permitted to resume his work.

The president's anxiety to get back to the great affairs confronting the country is handicapping his physicians to some extent, although they have succeeded in impressing upon the president thus far the absolute necessity for rest. But that he chafes under this restraint his physicians do not deny.

Drs. Dercum and De Schweinitz returned to Philadelphia this afternoon satisfied, they said, that Dr. Grayson is pursuing the proper course of treatment for the president. They were able to note some slight improvement during the forenoon, as the president seemed to be in better spirits than he has been since he returned from his western trip.

McAdoo Returns to New York.

William McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury and son-in-law of the president, returned to New York this evening after having passed the night at the White House. He did not see the president until today, and then only a few minutes. Mrs. McAdoo will remain here, as will the president's other daughters, Miss Margaret Wilson and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, who arrived from Cambridge, Mass., last night.

Many more messages of regret and sympathy reached the White House today. There were also many callers, including members of the foreign diplomatic corps, senators and representatives and public men, including Associate Justice Brandeis of the United States Supreme court.

Many Messages of Sympathy.

Among the messages of sympathy made public at the White House was one from James E. Deery, national president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians of America, who wired Secretary Tumulty from Indianapolis the following:

"Please assure the president that our sincere prayer is that his recovery be speedy."

Senators Smoot and King of Utah sent the president a letter inclosing copies of prayers for his recovery pronounced at the semi-annual convention of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints in the Mormon tabernacle at Salt Lake City.

Among other messages received at the White House was the following wire from Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore:

"I beg to express my heartfelt sympathy for the president in his hour of illness and will pray for his early recovery."

BROTHER ENCOURAGED

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 4.—Joseph R. Wilson, President Wilson's only brother, today expressed himself as feeling that there is "no immediate cause for alarm concerning the president's condition." Mr. Wilson was in Washington yesterday.

"I was not summoned to the president's bedside," Mr. Wilson said. "I called up the White House, and felt encouraged by what I was told. Of course, the president is very sick and one cannot tell what the developments may be, but I am hoping that his recuperative powers will bring him through all right.

"I have always considered that these were strong, though they have not before been put to such a test as at present.

"His condition is the result of long months of overwork. The wonder is that he stood the strain as long as he did. Regarding his illness, I have accepted the diagnosis of Dr. Grayson as correct."

Prayer by Episcopals.

New York, Oct. 4.—Bishop-elect Charles S. Burch of the New York diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, announced today that special prayers would be offered in all the churches of the diocese tomorrow for the speedy recovery of President Wilson.

PARIS FEELS CONCERN

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Special prominence is given by all newspapers here to Washington dispatches relative to the illness of President Wilson, and editorial comments reflect the concern felt in Paris over his condition.

The Echo de Paris says that the president's illness "means the American senate will be left to itself, which perhaps is a good thing, as the opposition, losing a counter party, loses, if not some force, at least some of its violence."

"The eclipse of such a great factor," says the Journal, "is an event full of consequences, as no one can replace Mr. Wilson. His most intimate collaborators, Col. E. M. House and Secretary of State Robert Lansing, were in many points far from approving all the initiatives of their chief while in Paris."

SEE CALIFORNIA MADE TREATY FOE BY JOHNSON

Anti-Administration Men in the Senate Receive Encouragement.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Senator Hiram Johnson, by his receptions in California during the last week, has furnished evidence to the treaty foes in the senate that he is in mastery of the situation in his home state and that he has counteracted the effect of President Wilson's visit to the Pacific coast states.

Despite the confidence in administration circles that Mr. Wilson had completely won California to the league of nations, Senator Johnson's supporters insist that the events of the last four days have demonstrated that California was merely showing its hospitality to the president.

The meager news dispatches from the coast have given little information of the character of the reception given to Senator Johnson by his constituents, but advices received by senators describe the Johnson meetings as the greatest ever held in the history of the state.

Shantung Vote this Week.

The senate rested in the treaty fight today and both sides took advantage of the truce to take stock of the situation.

The Shantung amendment is the next in order to be voted on by the senate and a showdown on this point will be reached some time next week, it is believed. The amendment, according to present indications, will be defeated. Leaders again expressed the belief that the treaty would be finally disposed of early in November.

Affected by President's Illness.

The president's serious illness is having considerable effect on developments. Information came to Democratic senators today that it might be three months before the president would be able to attend to business. Notwithstanding the fact that almost his last public utterance was a declaration of unalterable opposition to the identical reservations which the senate expects to adopt, it seems likely now that Senators Hitchcock, Swanson, and other of the administration spokesmen will take the matter into their own hands and endeavor to come to some sort of an understanding as to a compromise. It is understood they virtually agree with ex-President Taft that reservations must be accepted.

Another effect of the president's illness is an apparent speeding up of the treaty, partly because many senators think they should get it out of the way and partly because less speech making results when there is no necessity for replying to the president's attacks on the treaty opponents.

Foes Somewhat Disarmed.

The president's sickness has placed the treaty foes at a disadvantage in a sense. In the coming debate on the Shantung amendment they were primed with powerful ammunition to attack the president's position, and were prepared with newly acquired evidence to assail him unmercifully for making the decision to turn Shantung over to Japan. Now they are confronted with the necessity of toning down their attacks, fearing that sentiment of the country would not approve of striking at the president when he is unable to strike back.

Johnson Regrets Wilson's Illness.

Oxnard, Cal., Oct. 4.—Sympathy for President Wilson in his illness was expressed today by United States Senator Hiram W. Johnson, who is en route to San Francisco from Los Angeles. Senator Johnson issued the following statement:

"I think I can understand the president's illness and I deeply sympathize with him. Few people realize the tremendous strain and the great fatigue of a trip such as he has recently taken.

"I can sincerely feel for the president in his present sickness, and it is my hope that he may speedily and fully recover. He has, of course, in his illness the best wishes and the sympathy of all Americans."

Not Called Back, Johnson Says.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 4.—Senator Johnson on his arrival here late tonight denied reports he had been advised by Republican leaders to abandon his speaking tour and return to Washington.

THE MILITARY SITUATION IN RUSSIA

1. The White Russian army, which has been recently fitted out with American and British supplies, is reported to have begun an advance on Pskoff, with Petrograd as the ultimate objective. Good progress is being made, it is reported.

2. A British fleet is co-operating with the White Russians, and is expected to open the way for an attack on Petrograd by water.

3. Representatives from the three independent states of Lithuania, Latvia, and Esthonia have assembled in the town of Dorpat, Esthonia, to begin peace negotiations with the bolsheviki.

4. The Baltic states are shown in a darker shade on the map. If they make peace, they will be the first nations to recognize soviet Russia as a sovereign state.

5. In spite of the withdrawal of allied troops from the Archangel front, Gen. Yudenitch, in command there, has begun a vigorous offensive. He is aiming his thrust at Petrograd as an ultimate goal.

CITY'S CHURCHES TO PRAY TODAY FOR PRESIDENT

Special services will be held today in the churches throughout Chicago, irrespective of creed, to ask divine aid for the recovery of President Wilson. Similar services will be held generally throughout the country.

Prayers for the president's recovery were offered yesterday by the Jews in Chicago, New York and many other cities at the opening of their Yom Kippur services, which will be continued today. Just before the opening of the morning services at the Sinai congregation, Grand boulevard and Forty-fourth street, Dr. Emil G. Hirsch said:

"Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, on which the Jews appeal to the Creator for the favor most desired, will be devoted in great part to seeking the help of God for President Wilson in his present crisis."

Methodist ministers throughout the city will co-operate in the services, according to Dr. Fred Stone, superintendent of the Chicago western district.

Bishop Samuel Fallows will devote his services in the Reformed Episcopal church to the president. While no arrangements have yet been made for special services in the Roman Catholic churches, instructions will be issued by Archbishop Mundelein for prayer services if President Wilson's condition becomes grave.

Former Gridiron Stars Banquet, Elect Officers

Business men, professional men, and men of public affairs, once star performers on the gridiron, starred last night at the annual banquet of the Arlington club in the Great Northern hotel.

The club was organized in the early '90s by Woodlawn students attending the University of Chicago.

J. E. McShane, assistant state's attorney, was elected president for the coming year. He was known as the "Flying End" of the club's eleven in 1908. S. P. Grant, another attorney, who was the tackle of the squad, was elected secretary, and M. T. Smith, secretary of the Kerr Wire Products company, who was a half back, was elected vice president.

Dr. F. S. Ryan, outgoing president, was toastmaster.

WILSON'S GIFTS ABROAD SHRINK IN REPORT LIST

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—Gifts received by President Wilson while in Europe were of "very insignificant" value, Secretary Tumulty said today in announcing that he had prepared and would submit today an answer to the resolution of Representative Rodenberg, Republican, Illinois, asking as to reports that the gifts were valued at $1,000,000.

Mr. Tumulty said the president received no gifts which would have required an act of congress for him to accept, and that in every case where it was made known that he was to receive a present he consulted Secretary Lansing and the attorney general as to whether he could legally accept.

The most valuable present, Mr. Tumulty said, was a gold casket which contained a certificate of citizenship from the city of London. The King of Italy presented the president with two old guns, and the King of England gave him a book.

RAID ARKANSAS OFFICE OF NEGRO SECRET SOCIETY

Little Rock, Ark., Oct. 4.—Headquarters at Winchester, Ark., of the secret organization of Negroes held responsible for the Elaine race riots were raided this morning, according to a dispatch from the Arkansas Democrat's correspondent.

Dr. V. E. Powell, an organizer of the Negroes, was arrested and has been taken to Arkansas City, and later will be turned over to Helena officials.

The dispatch says the headquarters were in the offices of Robert Hill, president of the organization, but does not state what has become of Hill.

FAVORS WORLD LEAGUE MEETING IN WASHINGTON

Clemenceau Urges Call in November; Capital Says "Unlikely."

PARIS, Oct. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—Premier Clemenceau has written Col. E. M. House, a member of the American peace delegation, urging that a meeting of the league of nations be held in Washington under the chairmanship of President Wilson early in November. The premier's letter, which outlines his reasons for the calling of such a meeting, was officially published today. It was written Sept. 4, and a similar letter was sent to Premier Lloyd George.

In it Clemenceau says: "I would suggest the meeting be held the first week of the coming November, and would propose the invitation of the greatest possible number of statesmen whose names were associated with the creation of the society of nations. Undoubtedly there would be only a small amount of current business to transact, but the program would have this capital advantage: It would put in action the society, which still exists on paper.

"Born at Call of Wilson."

"No man is better qualified than President Wilson to remind the peoples at the opening of the first assembly that the society of nations will have prestige and influence in times of peace only if it succeeds in maintaining and developing the feeling of international solidarity from which it was born during the war at the call of Mr. Wilson.

Discussion of the treaty of peace with Germany will begin in the senate next Thursday and probably will last two or three days. The belief is expressed that the pact will be ratified late in the week.

Not Probable, Capital Says.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—Administration officials said today there was no probability of a meeting of the league of nations in Washington until after the peace treaty had been ratified by the senate. None would hazard a guess as to when this might be, but Republican senate leaders said they expected a final vote by Nov. 1.

Even if ratification of the treaty were completed during November, it is not expected that the league would be called to meet here until early next year.

AIRMEN'S BODIES PROVE MURDERS DONE IN MEXICO

Nogales, Ariz., Oct. 4.—Lieuts. Frederick Waterhouse and Cecil H. Connolly, American aviators lost in Mexico, were apparently murdered after landing near Los Animos bay, Mexico, according to members of the San Francisco geological survey party, which arrived from Los Animos bay today with corroboration of the statement of Joseph Allen Richards, who claimed to have located the bodies of the American aviators.

J. Vandergraft and H. R. Crane of the geological survey party, brought teeth back from the skulls of the two bodies found by their party near Los Animos bay. These were delivered to army dental surgeons for identification. They said one of the skulls was badly crushed and that the body showed evidences of stab wounds on the arms.

The relaxed position of one of the bodies indicated death had come while the men were asleep, while the other indicated by tensed muscles that a fight had preceded the murder of the two Americans, the geologists said. The airplane flown by the aviators was found twenty miles inland. It is believed the aviators were forced to land, abandoned their plane, and walked to the seacoast in the hope of flagging a passing steamer, when they were killed.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 4.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS are making no effort to conceal their anxiety over President Wilson's physical condition, notwithstanding that his physicians, after another consultation today, reported him slightly improved. While the general belief is that the president is in no imminent danger, there is anxiety lest his recovery from the nervous exhaustion which has afflicted him will be so slow that it may be a long time before he can resume active participation in important affairs.

SENATORS who are opposing the treaty have received encouraging reports from Senator Johnson's meetings in California, where the president was reported to have gained such strong support for the treaty and league covenant.

SAMUEL GOMPERS, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the house interstate commerce committee that the American workingman would not obey an anti-strike law even if congress should incorporate such a provision in pending railroad legislation. Such a law, he said, was un-American, and would tend to make law breakers of the best citizens.

FORMER PRESIDENT TAFT and Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass urged the house budget committee today to devise a budget system for the United States which would put responsibility for government financial affairs upon the president. Secretary Glass said the government is being run at a great loss and that congress must curb expenditures.

REED DEFEATS HECKLER; HALTS TOUR AT DENVER

Denver, Col., Oct. 4.—Senator Reed of Missouri, speaking here before a large crowd at the Municipal auditorium, argued against the "league of nations."

"This is not a one man country," he said; "it is a 110,000,000 men country."

Efforts of some one in the gallery to heckle him brought the retort:

"The braying of one ass ought not to break up a great meeting."

Mentioning the meeting at Ardmore, Okla., where a volley of eggs and the cutting of light wires stopped his meeting, he said:

"I never voted for suffrage, but at that meeting, when 1,000 women sat quiet when the lights were cut off, I about came to the conclusion that they were good enough to vote."

The senator paid a tribute to the character of President Wilson and expressed the wish for his early recovery.

Senator Reed announced that he would abandon his tour and return to Washington.

ANTI-REDS, FED, CLOTHED, DRIVE ON PETROGRAD

Sweep Forward from the Archangel District, Capital Hears.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—Simultaneously with the renewal of the offensive against the bolsheviki on the eastern front by the Kolchak forces, Gen. Yudenitch has begun an advance toward Petrograd from the Archangel district.

Advices received at the Russian embassy today said that in spite of the withdrawal of the allied forces from northern Russia Gen. Yudenitch's forces, operating under the Tchaikovsky government of Archangel, had been stimulated to greater exertion and were prepared to carry the fight to a successful conclusion if furnished food, coal, and munitions by the allied and associated powers.

DOWN KOLCHAK, CRY.

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 15.—[Delayed.]—[By the Associated Press.]—Ivan Yakusheff, president of the first Siberian duma, which was dissolved by Admiral Kolchak, head of the all-Russian government at Omsk last fall, signed and issued secretly on Sept. 5 a proclamation calling for the overthrow of the Kolchak government and the convocation of a popular convention to establish an all-Siberian constituent assembly.

Tasks of Convention.

It enumerates the tasks of the convention as follows:

The formation of a temporary government, responsible to the Zemstvoes congress.

To accept regulations and to draft measures for the convocation of an all-Siberian constituent assembly.

The establishment of civil law and order.

The transfer to local governmental agencies the power to organize local self-governments.

The abolition of restrictive measures keeping peasants from the land.

The restoration of freedom to professional workmen's unions and the enactment of urgent laws protecting workers.

The abolition of the reactionary régime of the army.

A proclamation of amnesty for persons participating in recent partisan uprisings.

The proclamation says the time and place of the convention will be announced later.

Conservative Advertising

The tendency to plunge—to take chances with the money of a client—is a frequent cause of the failure of an advertising campaign.

While there have been many brilliant successes in advertising and many fortunes amassed by advertising it is also true that there have been instances where the efforts were unproductive.

This generally resulted in the elimination of the advertiser as far as advertising was concerned for a time at least.

The Charles H. Fuller Company is perhaps ultra-conservative. Its clients never speculate if they follow the advice of the Fuller Company.

Cautious, conservative methods are always advised and a "try-out" in a limited way is generally the first step with a new advertiser or a new product.

This is why Fuller advertisers are almost always successful and one of the reasons why the Fuller clients place their advertising through this agency year after year.

The Fuller Company does not want the money of any advertiser unless it can make good for him, for only by making good can it derive any real permanent benefit.

The sale of nearly every product can be increased by the right kind of advertising—a few perhaps cannot.

It costs you nothing to secure an analysis and opinion from the Fuller Company. If in its opinion you cannot be helped by advertising you will receive a frank statement to that effect.

If your product is one that should be susceptible to advertising the Fuller Board of Advisors will tell you so and why.

Our consultations are confidential and you need have no hesitancy in giving us all the facts, for they will be held inviolate.

Don't you think it would be worth while to call us on the telephone and arrange for a consultation? Will be glad to have you do so.

Scenes in Gary Strike Riot Which Brought Call for Troops

SOVIETIZED MILL AIM OF STRIKERS, WITNESS STATES

Air of Conspiracy Feature of Union Activities, Senators Told.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—Investigation of the nation-wide steel strike was temporarily halted today by the senate labor committee after it had heard several employés of the United States Steel corporation, who attacked sharply tactics of strikers and strike leaders.

The inquiry will be resumed in the Pittsburgh district as soon as the treaty situation in the senate makes it possible for the committee members to be absent from Washington for three days or more.

Four mill workers were heard. T. J. Davies of New Castle, Pa., said the strike chiefly involved the foreigners in the mills; that many of the participants believed the object was to give the workmen ownership of the mills, and that it was being carried on with intimidation and violence.

Can Always See Gary.

With all of the other men heard, Davies supported statements of Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the steel corporation, that the mill executives always were ready to hear reasonable grievances and redress them, and said union organization would not do the men any good. He assailed the union organizers and their tactics.

"These men moved mysteriously around the plant," declared Davies, who said he represented the sentiment of 5,000 tin workers. "We kept hearing that they intended to cripple the plants, paralyze operations.

"These foreigners, when we asked them, explained they were going to get the 'closed shop.'

Americans Were Threatened.

"'President Wilson and President Gompers,' they all say, 'are with us. You Americans can't work here afterward. Nothing but union men.'

"'We'll get the check off system and collect all the union dues.'

"Some of them explained to me: 'We won't need bosses after this, committees will run mills.'"

Davies said some workers are intimidated, because they "are told their houses will be blown up and their wives killed."

When the strike was called, Davies said, he and other workmen who sought to get into the mills at New Castle were attacked by pickets at the gates.

Foreigners Attack Police.

"They whipped the city police, they whipped the county police," Davies said, "and beat men trying to go to work. There were 500 foreigners around the mill gates, and until returned soldiers took charge of the situation there was a continuous fight."

Davies said his earnings were $17 a day as a roller. He added that he was a Y. M. C. A. worker in France during the war.

M. F. Tighe, head of the Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' union, he said, was "quite harmless."

"President Gompers is president of the American Federation of Labor and has his job to hold," he continued. "He's quite gentle to Mr. Foster [W. Z. Foster, secretary of the strike committee]. He showed that yesterday.

"Mr. Gompers is a conservative force, but has tried to hold back radicals and failed."

Edward S. Lynch, McKeesport, and John Hickey, Homestead, also steel company employés, testified that conditions in the mills were satisfactory.

FOUR CHICAGO MEN HELD FOR OMAHA RIOTS

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Alleged to have taken part in last Sunday night's riots and lynching, four Chicago young men are among the 150 prisoners in the Omaha county jail. Charges of murder, arson, or assault with intent to commit murder will be filed against them.

The Chicago men are held without bail and are treated as federal prisoners, although they will be tried in the state courts.

William A. Miller, 9142 Chauncey avenue, is among those held. He is a sailor, and is said to be the man who went up a rope hand over hand to the fourth floor of the jail after the Negro.

The other three gave the names of James Mitch, 3638 Rogers avenue, Rogers Park; Paul Knasp, 2245 West Superior street, and Harry Brosius.

Naval Officer Rescues Nine from Burning Auto

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Nine Chicago people, four men, four women, and a child, were saved from burning to death under an automobile beneath which all were pinned last night on Green Bay road, near North Chicago, by Lieut. J. G. McFarland, commanding officer 18th regiment, Great Lakes, who took the victims one at a time from their perilous position.

The rescued are: Ike Neivelt, 2657 Hirsch avenue; Mrs. Neivelt, Samuel Neivelt, Mildred Neivelt, aged 3; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mayer, Misses Ethel and Bertha Mayer, all of 1422 North Talman avenue, and Ben Hartman of 1450 North Fairfield avenue.

Hartman was bruised and scorched. The others were only bruised.

RUSH TROOPS TO GARY AFTER RIOT BY MOB OF 5,000

Hospitals and Jails Are Filled After Battle.

ing the meeting made for a street car bearing strike breakers—most of them Negroes—to the mills of the United States Steel corporation.

The men were dragged from the car and beaten. Police who attempted to disperse the mob were swept aside. So were the special deputies. For nearly two hours the fighting mobs surged up and down Broadway, Gary's main street, between Tenth and Eighteenth streets. The sound of falling bricks and broken glass was interrupted by the clanging bells of ambulances and patrol wagons.

Capt. R. C. Rankin of the Gary company of militia was on the point of calling out his men when at 7 o'clock Mayor Hodges announced the police and deputies had the situation in hand.

Forty-two in Jail.

At a late hour last night it was announced forty-two rioters were in jail. Thirty-nine men and one woman are being held in $2,000 bonds. This number does not represent the numbers taken prisoner and rushed to the jail. Scores were turned loose after being questioned.

It was impossible to estimate the number of injured. Only three were said to be in a serious condition. Scores were sent to their homes after being treated at the hospitals for broken heads.

Theodore Lazarth, colored, may die. His skull was fractured and he suffered internal injuries. One woman, Mrs. Helen Ripac, was among those arrested for inciting the riot.

Late last night the force of policemen and deputies patrolling the streets had been augmented by ninety members of the Gary Rod and Gun club.

Indiana Harbor Clash.

Incipient rioting had broken out earlier in the afternoon in Indiana Harbor and this, together with rumors of a demonstration by 12,000 strikers in defiance of the police, caused Sheriff Barnes of Lake county to hold hurried conferences with Mayor Hodges of Gary and Mayor McCormack of East Chicago and Indiana Harbor. It was decided then to ask for the militia and as soon as news of the Gary outbreak reached him, Sheriff Barnes got into communication with the governor's mansion at Indianapolis by telephone.

Sheriff Barnes told the governor the strikers planned a parade and he was afraid he was unable to swear in enough deputies to handle the situation. He described the Gary outbreak, said a lawless element, many of whom were armed, were threatening serious trouble, and stated race hatred was breaking out against Negro strike breakers being employed.

Gen. Smith to Command Troops.

The call for troops was received by Adjt. Gen. Harry B. Smith and was relayed by him over the telephone to Gov. Goodrich at his home in Winchester, Ind. The call for eleven companies was immediately sent out and Gen. Smith will accompany them to East Chicago by special train.

Three Indianapolis companies were assembled at the armories early in the evening. They were to be joined during the night by companies from Union City, Shelbyville, and Newcastle. Companies of troops from Fort Wayne, Goshen, and Elkhart were ordered to proceed directly to the strike zone as quickly as they could be mobilized and entrained. The Bloomington company, joined by a company from Attica, was scheduled to meet the Indianapolis special on the way.

How Riot Started.

The riot in Gary started shortly after 5 o'clock when the crowds of strikers leaving the massmeeting came upon the street car filled with strike breakers, which had been halted at Tenth street by a passing Michigan Central train. The crowd surged about and began jeering.

The motorman got the car started, but the throng surged in front of it and all around it, impeding progress. By the time Fourteenth street was reached the crowd had swelled to 5,000. Some one jerked the trolley from the wire and twenty-five strikers climbed into the car to single out the strike-breakers.

"Yank them off," shouted a striker from the crowd that was gathering around the car. One of the Negroes is said to have drawn a knife. Another urged him to use it, according to the pickets. The trolley pole of the car was jerked off and the Negroes thrown off the car. The motorman and conductor fled, one Negro was beaten into insensibility. The rest tried to escape. Each became the center of a hooting mob.

A Negro deputy worked his way into the jam and rescued the Negro, who had defended himself with the knife. Dragging him to safety, he took his knife from him and sent him home. This enraged the crowd and an attack was made on the deputy, while others chased the Negro.

In five minutes the mob numbered from 5,000 to 6,000. The police, headed by Capt. James McCartney, arrived on the double quick, followed by armed business men in automobiles. A large force of deputy sheriffs arrived at the same time. They organized with the police and charged the mob, which stood its ground. The police formed a wedge and bored in, swinging clubs and blackjacks. Gradually the mob was forced backward to Fifteenth street.

Some construction is going on at this corner and piles of brick stood in a vacant lot. These were hurled into the lines of advancing police, several of whom were injured. Ordering his men not to fire, Capt. McCartney fought his way into the lot. Patrol wagons and automobiles were backed into the curb and scores of rioters were overpowered and thrown into the machines. They fought bitterly, several of them reaching out of the patrol wagons to hit whoever stood near.

Indiana Harbor Trouble

Incipient rioting also broke out during the afternoon at Indiana Harbor, but quick action on the part of the police under Acting Chief Edward O'Donnell, assisted by fifty deputy sheriffs, managed to calm the disorder. Two thousand pickets, who had gathered outside the Inland Steel company's plant, began to jeer and hoot at workers as they left the inclosure at 4 o'clock.

The presence of the police at that point prevented any outbreak, but the crowd followed the workers for a few blocks on Block street and then the trouble began. The "loyalists" were waylaid and challenged and blows were exchanged, but the workers refused to loiter. Wherever individual encounters started, they were soon quelled by groups of police and deputies who drove there in automobiles. Quiet was restored after half an hour of sporadic battling.

Expect Decision in Week.

The outbreaks at Gary and Indiana Harbor were indicative of the last great efforts of the strikers to win in the struggle. Tomorrow, it was said, will mark the beginning of the deciding week.

About 400 additional strikers were reported to have returned to work in the plants of the Inland Steel company and the American Sheet and Tin-plate company in Gary yesterday. It was said that 5,500 workmen were now employed in the former plant, about 50 per cent of its force. Production, it is said, does not exceed 25 per cent of the normal capacity, however. This is due to shortage of skilled workmen.

Seventy-five per cent of the regular force is said to be at work in the tin-plate mill, and the production there was announced as 50 per cent of normal.

Picketing has become more energetic and widespread, and workers are being visited at their homes. According to the business men of Gary, the sale of food has decreased 40 per cent.

The situation in South Chicago was comparatively quiet.

Waukegan Situation.

According to the superintendent of the plant of the American Steel and Wire company at Waukegan, about 600 men are now back at work there, sixty having returned yesterday morning.

50,000 TONS OF SUGAR PROMISED TO RELIEVE CHICAGO

ONE HUNDRED MILLION pounds of sugar will begin flowing to Chicago and the midwest territory this week to relieve the famine which has worried federal officials, dealers, and housewives.

The big consignment has been offered by the Great Western Sugar company at 10 cents per pound wholesale, according to H. H. Rolapp, chairman of the Chicago equalization committee, and will supply all normal needs of the district until other stocks can be received. It is coming from the beet fields of Colorado, Utah, and Nebraska.

"This consignment, which will be shipped early next week, looks like the turning point in the Chicago sugar shortage," said Mr. Rolapp yesterday. "It can be sold under 12 cents by the retailers. This price is remarkably low and cannot be expected to continue for the crop of Cuban sugar that will soon be coming into the market.

"We are going to have enough sugar to go around, but not enough to waste and certainly not enough to hoard."

Postal Clerks Plan to Kill Anti-Strike Rule

The national federation of postoffice clerks may strike. They are voting now to eliminate an article in their constitution which prevents them from striking. "We recognize the fact that legislation and not strike is the last resort in the adjustment of our grievances, and therefore we oppose strikes in the postal service," this article reads. If they vote to strike out the strike article, then they can strike.

Boy Who Disappeared on Way to School Sought

Freddy Liepe of 216 West Sixty-third street, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Liepe, who disappeared Friday on his way to the Louis Chapman school, is still missing. He was about 5 feet tall, had dark brown hair, brown eyes, and a fair complexion. He wore a dark green cap, dark suit with knickerbockers, black stockings, tan shoes, and a white shirtwaist.

Gen. Harries to Resume Civil Life in the Loop

Brig. Gen. George H. Harries, "the first American officer in Berlin," is about ready to resume civil life as a vce president of H. M. Byllesby & Co., engineers, in the Continental and Commercial Bank building.

Gen. Harries completed twenty-seven months' service with the A. E. F. on Sept. 10. He arrived in America a few days ago. He was twice honored for his services, having won the D. S. M. and the title of "Commander of the Legion of Honor." Both were conferred in recognition of his work at Brest.

THIS MUCH IS TRUE—THERE IS SUCH A PERSON

Otto McFeeley, editor of Oak Leaves at Oak Park, has uncovered a "plot."

In a story printed he was said to be chairman of the Oak Park motion picture censor board, and in that capacity to have refused to condemn the exhibition of a film portraying bathing girls in one piece suits, though supposedly a woman's club had demanded its suppression.

The narrative also had it that two women members of the board, incensed at his failure to call them to aid in censorship, had later attended the show, then issued a statement in which he was described as having "no sense of morals."

Editor McFeeley protested verbally and it was disclosed that:

He is not chairman of the censor board, the village president having that honor, hence he had no power to call the other members to act on any picture; the women members were not incensed at him, because they had no cause; neither had they issued any statement of any kind attacking his ability as a censor of morals, and no woman's club had demanded that he exercise his power as a censor on the film. Both women members of the board said they know nothing of any reported statement attacking him.

It was found that persons connected with a rival newspaper had been the source of the misinformation, whereupon Mr. McFeeley said, "That explains it."

BETHLEHEM CO. WORKERS ADMIT STRIKE BROKEN

Rail Men Denounce Police and Warn Walkouts May Go Further.

Bethlehem, Pa., Oct. 4.—Union officials admitted today that the Bethlehem Steel company has made inroads into the ranks of its striking workmen, but accompanied the admission with the statement that they were well satisfied with the situation.

David H. Williams, strike leader, who until yesterday had declared that at least 85 per cent of the men were out, said that he could not now claim 75 per cent of them. He declared, however, that many shops are crippled because the men still out are virtually all highly skilled workmen.

Officials of the company claim that every shop is working with practically 100 per cent production. They declare that the number of absentees does not total more than 1,000.

More Plants to Reopen.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 4.—The end of the second week of the steel strike found the situation in the Pittsburgh district virtually unchanged from that of the last few days.

Although the steel companies' statements declared that many men had returned to work and that production was "near normal," union leaders said the situation was satisfactory and that the ranks of the strikers were unbroken.

Preparations are being made by steel companies to open many suspended mills in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and eastern Ohio Monday morning.

Hundreds of workers tired of the strike are expected to enter the mills at that time, employers said.

Ready for Prolonged Fight.

Meantime the striking steel workers are evidently preparing for a prolonged struggle. It was announced at the national strike headquarters here that the matter of paying strike benefits would be one of the chief subjects to be discussed at the meeting of the twenty-four international presidents of the national strike committee with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to be held in Washington next Monday night.

De Valera to Address Men.

POLICE DISCOVER TREASURE TROVE OF 1,000 SHOES

Three Warren avenue detectives, Freemuth, McMullin, and Walsh, stumbled onto a large fortune last night—500 pairs of new shoes in a barn in the rear of 1938 Washington boulevard.

They also stumbled onto Thomas White of 1710 North Talman avenue, who was asleep. He had a revolver in his pocket.

While the wagon was coming to give him a ride back to the station, William Barnes of 2100 West Emerson avenue and William Deavitt of 2445 West Chicago avenue, entered the barn. They said they came only to get out of the rain.

The police didn't see why they should walk down a muddy alley to keep out of the wet; and they were shoved into the wagon with White. Most of the shoes were consigned to August Aniestedt of 1645 West Chicago avenue. It is believed they were stolen from a freight car.

GOMPERS STATES LABOR WILL DEFY ANTI-STRIKE LAW

Even Supreme Court Cannot Force Men to Work, Congress Is Told.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—American workmen will not submit to compulsory arbitration or anti-strike laws even though held constitutional by the Supreme court, declared Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who appeared today before the house interstate and foreign commerce committee to oppose inclusion of any such legislation in the railroad bill now being framed.

"I would obey such a law," said Gompers, when pressed for a personal statement on the subject. "But, when asked by organized labor what to do in the matter I should remain silent—neither counseling obedience nor disobedience—advising only an appeal to the country."

"Such Laws Breed Radicals."

"It is impossible to prevent men from quitting their work. Laws of such a character tend to make lawbreakers. They breed defiance of law and bolshevists."

Mr. Gompers is not committed to the Plumb plan of sovietizing the railroads, but he asked the committee to excuse him from passing judgment on any plan connected with final disposition of the railroads.

W. N. Doak, vice president, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, who appeared with Mr. Gompers, also indicated a lukewarm attitude toward the Plumb plan by declaring that railroad labor is not insisting on its adoption.

No Strike to Force Plumb Bill.

He denied emphatically that labor will strike to force through congress the Plumb plan. He also asserted there was general public misapprehension as to the amount of railroad labor wage increase during recent months, claiming it had been on the average about 42 per cent.

Asked what he meant by appealing to the country, Mr. Gompers said: "Electing a congress that would repeal the law."

Questioning of Mr. Gompers by Representative Webster, Washington, grew heated at times, the former calling one question "unintelligible," and another "speculative and hypothetical," stating that he refused to consider the possibility of an anti-strike law.

Gompers in Sharp Retort.

Mr. Webster explained that his questions were to determine the labor chief's attitude toward constitutional law, and Mr. Gompers shot back that his work and his service was the answer.

Mr. Gompers reiterated the statements of labor leaders, that anti-strike and compulsory arbitration legislation breeds radicalism in labor circles.

"Arbitration must be voluntary," he said, "and labor must always reserve its right to strike. Even discussion of such legislation is likely to bring serious consequences.

"You are breeding bolshevism, that's what you are. You are giving the I. W. W. the means to undermine the regular, conservative element of the American Federation of Labor.

"Already the radicals are referring to this legislation and saying to the workers, 'That's what you get in return for your loyalty and patriotism.' The legislation is involuntary servitude and would be a reversion to the days before the civil war.

"It is legislation intended to put the handcuffs on labor and tie them to their tasks by all the power of the federal government. There must be voluntary arbitration or there shall be no arbitration at all."

"I Believe Purcell Was Murdered," Says Another Noted Criminologist

BY WILLIAM J. SUTHERLAND
[Vice President and General Manager of the Mooney & Boland Detective Agency.]

Perhaps the most absorbing case which has come to the attention of Chicago detectives in the last ten years is the mystery which surrounds the death of E. H. Purcell.

Murder camouflaged as suicide and suicide disguised as murder have been advanced as theories.

There are many facts which lend themselves to the support of each theory, and some which lend themselves to both.

In my opinion, Purcell was murdered.

I have known many criminals, and I have worked on many cases of murder and of suicide. Few have been more baffling than this, but few, when brought down to hard, cold reality, more readily give strength to a murder theory.

Not of Suicide Type.

It has been stated that Purcell may have committed suicide, and that some one then set the stage to convey an impression of a carefully planned murder, possibly for benefits accruing from life insurance. Nobody but the most hardened criminal would have the forethought and courage to pick up a dead man and surround it with all the camouflage appearing in this case. That work was not done in a moment, nor in an hour. It was the work of several hours.

You will find, in a study of men, that one of the caliber of Purcell, accustomed to dealings in financial circles, does not commit suicide over the loss of a few thousand dollars. Suicide not only is temperamentally improbable with such men, but it is improbable psychologically, because of their normal training and their physical habits.

Suicide? For what motive? Financial troubles? Piffle!

Evidences of Murder.

Murder? Let us look over the available evidence.

First, a motive: Here we have a man who has lost a fortune of $50,000 in a year. Where did that money go? There is no answer. It is stated he had property on the south side. It was sold. Property in a Minnesota town was sold. He had at the time of his death property in the same Minnesota town which he was offering for sale for $23,000. He had $500 a month income from rented apartments and other sources.

These thousands of dollars had gone into smoke without a single record of his losses. His bank account had dwindled, huge sums being drawn with alarming irregularity. Those circumstances are pointed out by some as a motive for suicide. To me they indicate murder much more clearly.

That money simply disappeared. Who got it?

"Cherchez la Femme!"

A Frenchman once said: "In every crime, look for the woman." I am of the firm belief that when the solution of this death is found there will be a petticoat in the offing.

Evidences of murder. We have the ropes that bound Purcell's arms to the chair.

We have the gag in his mouth, the towel around his head, the broken glass upon the floor, the staring eyes and distorted face.

We have the ransacked house, the bundles upon the floor, the furniture scattered up and down the room.

We have the burning electric lamp, left in haste of departure.

We have the key upon the outside of the door, with two tales as to is ownership.

We have his cheerful letters to his relatives and another letter to his plumber, all showing a frame of mind which precluded suicide.

We have the face at the window, seen by a milkman, and the voices heard by neighbors.

We have his calm reading of a book on science and arts, while he lay on a couch the last evening he was seen alive.

We have the presence of one of the most powerful poisons known in his stomach, enough to kill a dozen men.

And we have the testimony of medical observers that nicotine is an acute poison which causes instantaneous death and of a prominent psychologist that Purcell's actions before his death make the suicide theory ridiculous.

Some Possible Motives.

Blackmail, robbery, anger, revenge, a woman scorned, jealousy—there are a score of motives which could be brought forward in support of a theoyr of murder.

We were surprised the other morning at the mysterious death of a doctor on the south side. The cry which was made in some quarters was "suicide." The only reason to justify that belief was that the victim was eccentric and a lot of women visited his house. As soon as the motive was found the perpetrators of the deed were located.

So I say: Find the motive in the Purcell case and the finding of the murderer will follow as day follows night.

I am strongly of the opinion that when Purcell died he was not alone. He was murdered—possibly not intentionally, but on the spur of the moment, after a quarrel.

I think the person or persons who committed the deed then tied him up with the intention of creating the belief it was either suicide or a murder committed for the purpose of robbery.

The Camouflage Breakfast.

And that camouflage breakfast—there may be a basis of reality there. Some one or two persons may have been in the house ready to partake of the breakfast. The murder might have been committed just previous to the breakfast hour, and the fact that the table was set used afterward as part of the general schmee of disguise.

Every mystery has a solution. Every crime was committed by some one, and every criminal in the world's history has always left a key to the crime somewhere, waiting for the right man to come along.

I have been dealing with mysteries since 1880. If this isn't a case of murder I'll begin to think I haven't learned very much.

Germans Agree to Order Troops from Baltic Zone

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 4.—The German government has replied to the note of the supreme council demanding the immediate withdrawal of the German troops from the Baltic provinces.

The Germans declare they are firmly determined to do everything in their power to fulfill the obligations in the matter of withdrawal, but protest strongly against the threat of a renewed blockade, pointing out the serious consequences that would ensue to the population.

It is suggested in the note that a German-entente committee be appointed to investigate the facts in the situation and to supervise measures to be taken.

SEIZE SUSPECT IN MURDER OF SERGT. BURNS

A man whose description tallies with that of one of the men being sought for the murder of Detective Sergeant George C. Burns in a saloon at 3301 West Madison street has been arrested by the Fillmore street police and is being held for questioning by Capt. James Gleeson. He was taken into custody at West Madison street and Kedzie avenue in connection with an investigation into some recent robberies, but the police refuse to give out more information about him.

The police admitted last night that they were looking for John "Piggy" Murphy, convicted holdup man, who escaped from Joliet penitentiary ten days ago. They believe he is one of the two masked men, perhaps the man who killed Burns. He is said to have boasted, when he was arrested, that he could "put a couple of notches in his gun for coppers."

Edward Pinkerton, described by the police as a pickpocket, was questioned about the shooting last night. He and seven others were taken in a raid on Calhoun's saloon, 744 North Clark street.

The condition of Detective Sergeant Bernard J. Lenehan, who was shot during the affray, was reported at the Garfield Park hospital last night to be unchanged.

It is stated that beyond doubt Thracians in other parts of Macedonia and old Greece who will sign the appeal will bring the total number of names attached to it up to about 250,000.

War Nurse Appeals to Thief to Return Trophies

The honor which is said to exist among thieves was appealed to yesterday by Miss A. E. Ferguson of Flossmoor, Ill. The young woman recently returned from overseas, where she had served as a nurse. Last Thursday her suitcase containing wearing apparel, jewelry, and several prized momentoes, was stolen from an automobile near the Gas building. The loss of her personal effects, while serious, does not worry Miss Ferguson so much as that of a pearl bar pin, given her by the residents of a grateful French village where she served. She would also like to have back a Victorian bronze medal given her by the British government. "I am sure that whoever took my suitcase will have honor enough to return my trophies," Miss Ferguson said yesterday.

Uses Woman as Agent to Another; In Bad with Both

Samuel Gottdank, late of 17 East Congress street, fell between Scylla and Charybdis—that is, between Mrs. Marie Smith and Miss Olive Clark of Middleton, N. Y.—and is in a sad way. Mrs. Smith charges that he borrowed $650 worth of jewelry from her several years ago when she lived in Evanston and didn't give it back. Thursday, when she learned where he was, she communicated with him. He sent Miss Clark to see her, she said. She and Miss Clark got to talking. The result was she swore out a warrant for his arrest in Evanston. But a deputy marshal appeared with a warrant sworn out by Miss Clark, charging a violation of the Mann act, and Gottdank was given into the custody of the federal authorities.

A Great Lakes Trust Savings Account

Is an investment, an insurance and a speculation.

It is an investment because it is earning an income while being always worth 100 cents on the dollar and turned to cash at will.

It is an insurance because it protects against misfortune, provides competence in old age and matures into a large and spendable fund.

It is a speculation—not a gamble—in the sense that while it will always be worth 100 cents on the dollar plus interest accumulations, in terms of money it must surely and soon be worth much more than 100 of today's cents in terms of value. The uncertainty of the amount of this premium lends the speculative element. A dollar saved today may be worth $1.50, and perhaps $2, in purchasing value in the future when prices have returned to normal.

YOUNG PURCELL MILES AWAY AS FATHER IS SLAIN

Travels with Jazz Band, Traced, Account for Every Minute.

BY FRED PASLEY.

Michigan City, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Tracing the melodious meanderings of Mr. Henry Santrey, and—as the program proclaims—his famous society jazz band, a reporter of THE TRIBUNE today gleaned hitherto suppressed facts concerning Thomas V. Purcell, whose father either committed suicide or was murdered—which?

First answering the question asked by the state's attorney and the police as to Thomas' whereabout preceding the finding of his father's body at 1:30 o'clock on the morning of Monday, Sept. 22—Thomas was miles away from Chicago.

Every Move Traced.

Competent witnesses—that is to say, disinterested persons avouching willingness to affirm their statements under oath—establish his presence in these places on these dates; South Haven, Mich., from the afternoon of Thursday, Sept. 18, to 7:30 o'clock on the morning of Sunday, Sept. 21; Michigan City, Ind., from 3:11 o'clock on the afternoon of Sunday, Sept. 21, until 8:55 o'clock on the morning of Monday, Sept. 22.

At that minute Michigan Central passenger train No. 27 departed from Michigan City for Chicago. Aboard it were Thomas Purcell and Miss Cora Sanborn of Chicago, who had come to Michigan City Sunday afternoon to meet him. But of that more later.

They arrived at the Illinois Central station in Chicago at 10:15 a. m. They had lunch together in the loop, Tom then establishing himself at the Windsor-Clifton hotel and Miss Sanborn returning to her home.

Learns of Father's Death.

Tom had planned to return to Michigan City and rejoin the Santrey troop on the Michigan Central train leaving Chicago at 3:05 p. m., but in the interim he was appraised of his father's death through a story in an afternoon newspaper. Miss Sanborn learned of it at about the same time, which accounts for the incident of the telephone call for a taxicab at 2401 Ogden avenue.

At 3:26 o'clock Monday afternoon Tom dispatched a telegram to Santrey at Michigan City notifying him of the death and of his inability to rejoin the band. After a concert in Washington park pavilion Monday night the band left for eastern Michigan.

Perhaps the most interesting alibi evidence obtained by THE TRIBUNE reporter was a telegram dispatched by Tom to Miss Sanborn a few minutes before the troupe entrained at South Haven for Michigan City at 7:30 a. m., Sunday, Sept. 21.

"Won't be able to come to Chicago as planned," it read in substance. Whether or not this was a prearranged code is problematical, but anyway Miss Sanborn was waiting for him when he arrived in Michigan City.

A Boil as a Clew.

But even without the telegram the evidence that Thomas was in South Haven from the afternoon of Sept. 18 to the morning of Sept. 21 is irrefutable.

Nature moves in mysterious ways her wonders to perform. Thomas had a boil. Now, customarily a boil is not considered a delectable news tidbit, but the boil is the exception. It was on the back of Tom's neck, and they're still talking about it in South Haven.

As director of the famous society jazz band, all Tom could do was to look at his feet when he assumed the baton and dais a la Sousa. The genuflections, the twists, the turns, the vehement flings of the locks so dear to conductors were denied him. As banjo maestro or violin virtuoso his counterpoint was equally impeded.

"Yes, indeed," affirmed Louis E. Slowinski, owner and manager of the OK theater, who signed the band for the South Haven engagement. "Yes, indeed. You mean the fellow with the boil on his neck. Yes, I should say I do remember him."

"Sure, I remember him," said C. O. Monroe, editor of the South Haven Daily Tribune. "He had a boil on his neck."

Even the Baggage Man.

"I handled his baggage the Sunday morning the band left for Michigan City," said Prosper Phillips, the Michigan Central station baggage master. "You mean the guy with the boil on his neck?"

And lastly the ticket agent, Chester Hoffman, recalled when Purcell boarded the train.

Mr. Slowinski and Mr. Monroe attended both performances of the company Friday night, Sept. 19, and Saturday night, Sept. 20.

The performance of Saturday night continued until 11:30 o'clock. Mr. Slowinski bidding Tom good bye at that hour.

Dan Reid, night clerk at the Johnston hotel, saw Tom go to his room about midnight.

Tells Marriage Plans.

After tabulating all these facts, the reporter went to Michigan City and interviewed Thodore Borup, proprietor of the Vreeland hotel, where the Santrey company stayed, and Miss Agnes Shubert, the day clerk.

Both say the company arrived at the hotel soon after 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Miss Sanborn arriving soon thereafter.

Thomas paid her bill and his own Monday morning at 8 o'clock, Borup said, and confided they were "planning to get married."

The reporter last night telephoned Battle Creek, Mich., where the Santrey troupe is now playing. The only member who could be reached was Hal Wallace, a banjoist. His story differed from that of Mr. Borup in spots.

Fixes Different Time.

After he had asserted he and Thomas had traveled together from South Haven to Michigan City on Sunday, Sept. 21, Wallace was asked: "How long were you with Purcell on Sunday night?"

"Till midnight."

"Where were you?"

"Well, after the concert we were around the Hotel Vreeland."

Q.—What time did Purcell leave for Chicago? A.—At 2:15 Monday morning.

Q.—Are you sure it wasn't 8:55 Monday morning? A.—No, it was 2:15.

Q.—Did you go down to the train with him? A.—No.

Q.—Who did? A.—A couple of the fellows.

Q.—What are their names? A.—I forget.

Q.—Do you know a Miss Sanborn? A.—No.

Q.—Were there any women with the company at South Haven besides Mrs. Santrey? A.—No, she was the only member.

This latter statement was also affirmed by Mr. Slowinski and the proprietor of the Johnston hotel at South Haven.

TOM TALKS

In a little office on the third story of The Tribune building sat Thomas V. Purcell, son of E. H. Purcell, in whose death Chicago has found its most baffling mystery.

With him in the room was a noted psychologist, Dr. C. A. Neyman, with a face like a wooden mask, but whose brown eyes conveyed a world of wisdom. Three newspaper men also were present.

The psychologist sat staring at Tom with an unwinking gaze. Tom was nervous. Every once in a while he would look toward the man who sat silently appraising him. Once a half smile was on his lips, but it froze to a pucker as he caught the look in the eyes of the scientist.

A Flood of Questions.

Another man entered into the conflict of minds. A flood of questions was turned loose. It went like this:

Q.—How much insurance did your father have, Tom? A.—Fifteen thousand dollars.

Q.—I thought you said the other day it was only $10,000. A.—I did, but that was on my mother's information. She thought that two policies which had been found, one for $3,000 and the other for $2,000, had been transferred into a $5,000 policy, which was also discovered, but the $5,000 policy was in addition to the rest. You see, I didn't know anything about this insurance, as I wasn't around the house. And my mother didn't know much about those things either. She just took it for granted.

Never Knew Amount.

Q.—When did you first learn the total was $15,000? A.—Well, my lawyer told me some time ago to gather up that material and bring it to him so he could look it over. So I took all five policies and brought them down to him. He told me about the fifteen thousand.

Q.—You knew your father was carrying considerable insurance, didn't you? A.—Oh, I knew that he was insured, yes.

Q.—But you didn't know how much? A.—No. I thought maybe he had five or six thousand. I didn't know any different.

Q.—Where are these policies? A.—Well, my lawyer told me not to talk about that. If it's for publication,—I can't say anything.

Q.—Do you know that if a suicide verdict is brought in part of the policies won't be paid? A.—Yes, my lawyer says there probably would be trouble collecting some of the money.

Q.—Tom, to whom is that insurance payable? A.—Why, I didn't know it until today, but there's $1,000 in my name, and the rest, $14,000, is payable to my mother.

Q.—Tom, you want your mother to get that insurance, don't you? A.—Yes. Certainly.

Q.—You'd do anything in your power to fix things so she would get all of it, wouldn't you? A.—Why—yes—anything that wasn't against the law.

Q.—Tom, suppose you had entered the house and found your father lying in the chair, with certain evidences of suicide around him—wouldn't you have tried to camouflage it as murder? What would you have done? A.—Why, I don't know. I probably would be so scared I wouldn't know what I was doing.

Where Were Papers Found?

Q.—Where were those insurance papers found, Tom? A.—Why, my mother found them in the desk or in his grip.

Q.—Why, your mother told a reporter they were found lying on the floor. A.—Well, maybe that was it.

Q.—And, Tom, if you had entered the house and found your father lying there dead, knowing that the insurance would be yoid in case of suicide, wouldn't you have staged the camouflage to make it look like murder? Wouldn't you have disposed of that container that held the poison?

"No, I don't think I would. I don't know."

usual supply of groceries to last over Sunday.

Yesterday George Popp, a grocer at 3356 North Halsted street, declared that, while the elder Purcell had purchased groceries almost daily at his store during the time Mrs. Purcell was absent, he had failed to come to the store that Saturday. Purcell had always paid for the food with checks, he said.

These and many other instances of a minor nature are attracting the attention of those who have not been satisfied with the given explanations as to what evidence might have been in the house following the finding of the body, and which the police in their original search either overlooked or failed to take into consideration as material.

Three Agencies at Work.

Meanwhile three agencies—the police, Coroner Hoffman, and State's Attorney Hoyne—with their various aids continued active work yesterday.

Charges that police officials had failed to check up the clews furnished by open telephone books found in the Purcell home were contradicted by the production of evidence showing not only the police but all other officials, as well as several newspapers, had satisfied themselves on those points.

R. H. Pegram, druggist, who admitted selling nicotine to a "woman in black" about two months ago for the purpose of sprinkling rose bushes in a graveyard, was interrogated yesterday by Coroner Hoffman.

Girl Tells Story.

Miss Cora Sanborn, fiancée of Tom Purcell, brought into the case by her taxicab ride from 2401 Ogden avenue to the Illinois Central station, where she told Tom of his father's death, was questioned by the police and her full story obtained.

Following publication of the story in yesterday morning's TRIBUNE of the mystery of the girl in the taxicab, Capt. McCarthy and Sergts. Mallow and Cudmore identified the young woman as Miss Sanborn, living with her mother at 5000 North Ashland avenue. Miss Sanborn is the fiancée of Thomas Purcell, the son of the slain man. Immediately upon reading the story in THE TRIBUNE, she called the police station by phone.

She explained to the police that she and her mother had been invited by the younger Purcell to visit Michigan City, where he was appearing as director of a jazz band traveling with Henry Santrey, a singer. Her mother being ill, Miss Sanborn said she went alone, as "she was well able to take care of herself."

In the hotel at Michigan City she engaged a room next to Purcell's, attended the evening performance of his company, and Monday morning returned to Chicago in company with Purcell.

After luncheon downtown with her fiancé she boarded a train for Antioch, where she intended to have a two weeks' vacation. Miss Sanborn was a member of the "Passing Show" company while it was in Chicago. Tom Purcell's former wife, Leeta Corder, is leading lady of the same company.

Tom Purcell purchased copies of several afternoon papers at a news stand and gave them to Miss Sanborn, according to her story. These papers contained the news of the finding of the body of the elder Purcell.

Leaves Train, Phones Fiancé.

"After the train started I read the story," said Miss Sanborn. "I was horror stricken, of course, and at the first stop I left the train, intending to reach Tom at the Illinois Central station before he left for Michigan City. I did catch Tommy and I told him, then left on a later train for Antioch."

Capt. McCarthy of the Town Hall station admitted he had been in possession of the facts in the story for days, and had suppressed the information. The question of how much more information has been received and withheld from the public is engrossing the attention of several investigators.

Young Purcell sent out the following warning yesterday morning through the City News bureau:

"I wish to notify the newspapers that if they publish any more statements connecting me or Miss Sanborn with the mystery of the death of my father I will institute libel proceedings immediately. I have talked to my lawyer and he advised me to tell the papers that if any of them follow up the lead of THE TRIBUNE'S article he will start action at once."

With these developments in hand, the police and county authorities face another week of investigation of a case which, first "kept alive" by investigations of the press, has grown to be the all absorbing topic in thousands of Chicago homes.

TRACE STEPS OF PURCELL'S DAUGHTER AND SON-IN-LAW

Hibbing, Minn., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Lieut. John Sheehy and wife, respectively the wife and daughter of E. H. Purcell, have established an alibi. They were in Hibbing between Sept. 19 and 22. The concert singer, accompanied by Mrs. Sheehy, left Hibbing for Chicago on a train leaving here at 7 o'clock Monday morning, Sept. 22. Purcell's body was found early that Monday morning.

On Sept. 17 he sang at a concert in Eveleth, Minn. On Sept. 18 he was in Hibbing. On Sept. 19 he visited Prof. Kuyk, his local manager, at noon. On Sept. 20 he and his wife visited friends to say "good-by" and on the same afternoon he was in the Hibbing Tribune office to bid adieu to personal friends.

On the evening of the same day he sang at a concert at Keewatin, ten miles from Hibbing. On Sept 21, Sunday, the lieutenant visited R. W. Hitchcock, publisher of the Hibbing Tribune, at the home of his parents in Alice, the greater portion of the day.

The most beautiful piano in the world

FOR many years America has led the world in the quality of its pianos. One dominating name has succeeded another as something more beautiful and more enduring has been evolved, the leadership always passing to the piano which is finer and more costly than those which have preceded it. Today, the Mason & Hamlin is universally acknowledged to be the most exquisitely beautiful piano the world has ever known. It is the final choice of those who know.

BRITISH PUBLIC SWINGING OVER TO RAIL STRIKERS

Press Also Takes Hand in Criticizing Action of Government.

BY JOHN R. STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The railway strike still continues and on the surface is no nearer a settlement, but the week end lull, which has been gained by the action of the railroad men's leaders in summoning a trade union conference to meet in London on Tuesday may be pregnant with peace.

Ostensibly all negotiations between the government and strikers are off, but it is the English way that just when official negotiations are off, real negotiations begin.

It takes no great knowledge of English methods to be able to state that this week end will be occupied by unofficial coming and going of agents of both sides and that much more may be accomplished than if the bargaining were carried on in the light of day.

Public Swerves to Men.

In the meantime public opinion is undoubtedly hardening against the government, which is not helping its own case by the flood of proclamations and appeals it is issuing, apparently in an attempt to brand the strikers as "Reds" and arouse middle class persons against them.

Practically the whole of the London press today, led by the Northcliffe papers, are united in demanding that parliament be called immediately to discuss the situation and by discussion inform the people of the country of the true situation.

The Daily Mail, one of the Northcliffe press, today prints an editorial headed, "Pay Them What They've Earned," strongly condemning the government for withholding a week's earned wages from the strikers even if the law allowed this course, which is doubtful.

Take Another False Step.

Another false step this morning was the proclamation of the government calling for the organization of a "citizen guard" and addressed to all "well affected men." This, of course, is an implication that the strikers are disaffected and are at war with the state, which has been denied over and over again by the strike leaders.

I can affirm in a most positive manner that J. H. Thomas and other leaders alone have prevented a general strike which might have developed into a revolutionary attack on the state, and that the extraordinary absence of violence after a week of the strike which has effectually tied up every railway in England is also due to their efforts and the magnificent control under which they have the men.

I spite of the efforts of the leaders of the men to minimise and prevent the spread of the struggle, the situation is full of possibilities of danger. This is the first time in my experience in England that I have noticed a revolutionary sentiment among the real workingmen as distinguished from the highbrow intellectuals. There isn't much of it yet, but it may spread if the government blunders.

SETTLEMENT PREDICTED

LONDON, Oct. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—There was at least a slight rift in the strike storm clouds tonight.

The country today had reconciled itself to the belief that there was an irreconcilable break between the government and the unions in consequence of the failure of yesterday's conference in an effort to reach a basis whereby negotiation with the railway workers could be reopened.

Two unheralded events tonight gave rise to a more optimistic feeling in both government and labor circles regarding a settlement.

Briefly, the conciliation committee again unexpectedly visited Downing street, and, after a conference with Andrew Bonar Law, repaired immediately to the executive of the National Union of Railwaymen.

Expect Results Today.

At a late hour it was announced that James H. Thomas, secretary of the union, and the railway delegates would see Premier Lloyd George tomorrow, after having absented themselves from the mediation councils for several days.

The nature of today's conference was not divulged, but it was noted that the members of the committee seemed more cheerful when they left.

After the meeting between the railwaymen's executive and the conciliation committee Arthur Henderson admitted that the committee had come from Downing street to report progress to the union. Mr. Thomas himself announced that he and the railway delegates would see the premier tomorrow forenoon.

Pressed for a further statement regarding the likelihood of a settlement, Mr. Thomas simply said, "You must wait."

There are persistent rumors that the trade union committee expects a settlement of the strike tomorrow.

Hint Call of Parliament.

The king and queen came to London tonight by automobile from Balmoral, having begun their long trip yesterday, and there has been much speculation as to whether the sovereign would be advised to summon parliament to discuss the situation. The strikers have stated that this would meet their desires.

The week end found traffic conditions easier, due to a general cessation of work for over Sunday.

TURNING BEER INTO WATER

A Travesty on Biblical Miracle Is Enacted on Lake Front by Judge Landis' Order.

THIRTY BARRELS OF REAL BEER GO TO CHEER FISHES

Evidence Poured Into the Lake at the Order of Judge Landis.

Thirty barrels of real beer, summoned, tried, and sentenced to destruction by Judge K. M. Landis in his spectacular roundup of dealers violating the prohibition laws in and about Chicago, were poured into Lake Michigan yesterday.

More than a hundred spectators, thirsty fishermen, water front laborers, and astonished and mournful persons watched the deputy marshals unload the heavy casks from a government truck at the foot of the municipal pier at 3 p. m., break in the barrel heads, and consign the amber brew to its watery grave.

Protests Punctuate Gurgle.

Protests, wit, and oratory mingled with the gurgle of escaping "two and three quarters per cent," and a few of the super-thirsty made wild attempts to save a little of the liquor, but, on the whole, the court order was carried out without undue ceremony or excitement.

Deputy United States Marshal Sam Howard commanded the party of federal officers who had charge of the "funeral." They rolled the barrels from the sixth floor of the federal building, where they have been crowding the Landis courtroom corridor since he ordered them brought in as evidence against Chicago brewers, and loaded them on trucks while a loop crowd commented. The truck made its way to the municipal pier after park authorities had protested against Grant park being made a stage for the execution.

Twenty More Barrels Wait.

Twenty additional barrels of beer are housed in the Englewood police station, where officers are speculating as to its final disposition. The barrels, according to the police, were taken from the saloon of Edward Hoffman, 5858 South Halsted street, some time ago, but the charge against Hoffman was dismissed by Judge Trude.

U. S. AND BELGIUM TO PUT GHENT ON COTTON PORT MAP

BY EDWARD SCHULER.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

GHENT, Oct. 4.—Efforts of southern cotton merchants in America as well as of various maritime interests here to make a great cotton port out of Ghent are meeting with success. Arrivals of ships from the cotton ports on the Atlantic as well as those from the Gulf of Mexico are regular. Besides the steamer Guare, which has arrived with 3,000 bales from Savannah, the Cohasset, from the same port, is expected Oct. 5 with 12,500 bales of cotton and 4,000 tons of phosphate of lime.

From Galveston, Tex., the English steamer Thurland Castle has arrived with 6,000 bales, and the Skipton Castle is expected Oct. 5 with 3,000 bales. The new hangars being installed will be ready in a couple of months. It is also reported that private interests are about to construct new cotton docks.

SHORT ON QUOTA, SALVATION ARMY KEEPS UP "DRIVE"

Chicago has failed thus far to raise its quota of $1,500,000 in the Salvation Army home service fund drive. Even extending the campaign a week proved insufficient time. It was announced last night at headquarters in the old Grand Pacific hotel that not more than $800,000 was in sight and that the Salvation Army would consider itself fortunate if on next Wednesday, when all returns are tabulated, the total contributions reach $1,000,000.

"Chicago will go over the top," declared Staff Captain C. A. Ryan, "but it will take several weeks more of hard work. The drive will be continued until the full quota is obtained. A house to house canvass will be conducted."

The theaters were one of the richest fields for the workers. Under direction of Mrs. Annabelle Whitford Buchan nearly 100 women went among those attending loop theaters and at six performances gathered a sum approximating $10,000.

BRITISH CENSOR GONE, BUT SPIRIT CLINGS TO ERIN

Irish Publisher Is Very Careful What He Prints in Paper.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

DUBLIN, Sept. 28, via London, Oct. 1.—The Irish press was relieved some time ago of burdens inflicted by the official British censorship, but it now operates under an unstated, uncodified censorship which penalizes by suppressions.

The British authorities in Ireland lay down no rules or instructions for the guidance of the press in what it may and may not publish. The Irish publisher has no means of telling whether his newspaper is offensive to the British crown, except after publication. If the British authorities take exception to anything in the paper it is promptly suppressed. These suppressions, under the authority of the defense of the realm regulations, can be for any purpose or cause, and the cause and purpose does not have to be explained by the authorities—and, in fact, it is not explained.

The Irish publishers of newspapers have therefore been forced to make out their own lists of subjects liable to bring about suppression and to try to avoid them in the future. I have before me one of these lists which one Irish publisher circulated to all members of his editorial staff as the best possible guidance he could offer to reporters for the purpose of preventing the displeasure of the British authorities.

Here Is List.

The list reads: "The following extracts based on the defense of the realm regulations are still in force and on prohibitions and directions from the Irish press censor's office may be taken as a guide by the members of the staff generally. They do not cover all instances where publication might be objected to, but they indicate the class of reports that should be dealt with carefully or rejected altogether. It is sometimes supposed that if an item of news has appeared in some one paper there need be no objection to its appearance elsewhere, but this is not the case.

"1. It is not lawful, without authority, to publish the contents of any confidential documents belonging to, or any confidential information obtained from, any government department or any person in the service of his majesty.

"2. No person shall publish reports intended, or likely, to cause disaffection to his majesty or to prejudice his majesty's relations with foreign powers or statements intended or likely to prejudice the recruiting of persons to serve in any of the military forces or in any police force or fire brigade or to prejudice the training, discipline, or administration of any such force.

Protection of Troops.

"3. No information may be published in regard to the number, disposition, movements, composition, or organization of troops in Ireland.

"4. Nothing can be published concerning the arming, equipment, rifles, ammunition, etc., in relation to trained or untrained troops.

"5. It is undesirable to give prominence to reports of flying accidents. Unnecessary emphasis on such events is detrimental to recruiting for the R. A. F.

"6. No person shall publish any statement intended, or likely, to undermine the public confidence in any bank or currency notes which are legal tender or any statements that particular series of currency notes are forgeries.

"7. Advertisements relating to issues of foreign loans should not be accepted or published without the express sanction of the treasury and no advertisements should be published which invite the investment of money abroad.

Movements of Bullion.

"8. Nothing should be published relating to shipment of bullion or securities from, or to, any port of the British empire.

"9. Reports of conferences or meetings of the royal Irish constabulary or of the Dublin metropolitan police in connection with the national union of police and prison officers should not be published.

"10. Letters, interviews or other treatment of Sinn Fein prisoners should not be published.

"11. No report of any meeting of suppressed bodies or societies or of proceedings at any meeting for which permit was necessary, but for which permit was not obtained, should be published.

Orders of Sinn Fein.

"12. Orders or instructions issued by the Sinn Fein organization which directly, or indirectly, incite to the commission of unlawful acts cannot be permitted or any matter which is directly or indirectly an incitement to armed rebellion or likely to inflame public opinion against the military or police.

"13. In prosecutions for alleged seditious utterance the text of such utterances, even though read out in court, are not thereby entitled to publication.

"14. Names of policemen effecting political arrests or giving evidence against prisoners in such cases should be withheld from publication."

As far as the Irish publisher can find out he is given freedom to publish anything that would not come under the implied prohibitions of the foregoing. American editors might be particularly surprised at the restrictions with regard to the publication of court proceedings and reports of ill treatment of prisoners in jails, but commercial and financial interests, eager to open trade relations with Ireland direct, may be startled upon analysis to find Irish press prohibitions barring any and all forms of publicity which would support such commercial relationship between Ireland and America.

HOYNE'S HEIR AND HIS WIFE

Son of State's Attorney and Young Woman He Married Last Night.

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS MACLAY HOYNE.

SON OF MACLAY HOYNE MARRIES LYDIA NOBLE

Wedding at Sisson Hotel Small and Pretty One.

A small and pretty wedding took place last night at the Sisson hotel when Miss Lydia Harper Noble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Sears Noble of 4802 Dorchester avenue, became the bride of Thomas Maclay Hoyne II., son of Mr. and Mrs. Maclay Hoyne of 5136 Blackstone avenue.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin with garnitures of point lace and a veil of tulle. Her round bouquet was of bride's roses.

The bridesmaids, Ruth Robert, Miss Ruth Willetts, Miss Harriet Mohr, and Miss Pauline Penk of Quincy, wore pastel shaded frocks of tulle and taffeta with ostrich feather trimmings and carried bouquets of pink roses. Following a small reception Mr. and Mrs. Hoyne left on a wedding journey. Upon their return they will live at the Blackstone.

Blanche Day Married.

Great clusters of autumn leaves and chrysanthemums decorated quaint little Christ church in Winnetka yesterday afternoon for the wedding of Miss Blanche MacLeish Day to Robert Leslie Alton, and the costumes of the bride's attendants carried out the autumnal color scheme. The service was read at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. Ashley Gerhardt and was followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis Day of 454 Sheridan road, Winnetka. The bride's gown was of conventional white satin trimmed with duchesse pointe lace and made with a court train. Her tulle veil was held in place by a crown of lace and orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Swift Matron of Honor.

Mrs. T. Philip Swift, the matron of honor, wore a frock of burnt orange and brown chiffons and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums and other autumn flowers. Miss Dorothy Day, who acted as maid of honor for her sister, was gowned in burnt orange chiffon. Little Jean MacLeish, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Philip D. Armour served Mr. Alton, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse B. Alton of Winnetka, as best man, and the ushers were John Coolidge, Luther White, Franklin Miller Callahan, and Charles Stuart.

Mr. and Mrs. Alton will live in Evanston after a wedding trip in the south.

TAILOR DIES IN HIS SHOP.

DEATH BEATS COAST TO COAST AIR RACE START

Middletown, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Major Patrick Frissell was killed and Second Lieut. Gerald E. Ballard seriously injured when an airplane crashed to the ground on Prospect mountain today. Both officers were stationed at the army aviation field in Indianapolis and were flying from Binghamton to Mineola to take part in the transcontinental air race next Wednesday. They were flying a De Havilland "Bluebird" machine.

Eighty Machines Entered.

Mineola, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Four score airplanes will participate in the transcontinental air race to be started on Wednesday under the direction of the American army air service, it was announced here today. An incomplete list shows that seventy-two machines already have been entered, fifty-seven of which will start from Mineola and fifteen from San Franacisco.

The contestants from this end will start at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. Maj. M. F. Davis, in a Martin bombing machine, will be the first aviator to get away and the others will follow at two minute intervals.

Wife Asks Divorce from John G. Wanser, Caterer

John G. Wanser, a caterer with an alleged income of $10,000 a year, is charged with desertion and infidelity in a bill for divorce filed in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Maude G. Wanser. She declares Wanser left her without cause, and alleges that for a considerable time he has been guilty of misconduct with a Lucy Daley.

COLVER-MORRIS DEBATE OFF; EACH CHARGES DODGING

There isn't going to be any debate between Edward Morris, packer, and William B. Colver, member of the federal trade commission—at least, not at present.

Mr. Colver was to debate with Mr. Morris, head of Morris & Co., at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Hotel Sherman, he thought. At that hour there appeared not Mr. Morris but the publicity man of Morris & Co. with a letter and a statement from Morris.

Mr. Colver refused to debate "with Mr. Morris' hired man" and took a train for Washington, saying the packer had dodged the issue.

"I don't know why he should object," said Mr. Morris. "I am not a debater. I am merely a business man."

The proposed debate had to do with the veracity of charges made by Mr. Morris that the federal trade commission had conspired with English officials regarding a restraint of American export trade.

"I asked Mr. Morris to meet me face to face with the evidence to substantiate his charges," said Mr. Colver. "I asked him to send any one of the packers with the exception of Mr. Cudahy. He didn't do it."

SPURS OF GREED FRET AMERICA, EXPERTS CHARGE

Whip of "Something for Nothing" Adds to Capital-Labor Unrest.

New York, Oct. 4.—Industrial unrest is due to "the acquisition of wealth for which no adequate service has been rendered," according to nine "industrial engineers." They expressed their views in a letter made public here today. The letter is addressed to the labor conference called for Monday in Washington.

According to the letter, the elimination of "all unfair privilege of employer or employé" and the removal from selfish or incompetent, autocratic control all industries producing the necessities of life or supplying public service."

Expert Heads Appeal Signers.

The list of signers is headed by Harrington Emerson, former professor in the University of Nebraska, and later efficiency engineer for the Santa Fe railroad system.

"You have been called together by President Wilson," the letter says of those going to the meeting, "because in his own words 'we are facing a danger greater than war itself.'

"The prevalent unrest in industry results from a system which permits the acquisition of wealth for which no adequate service has been rendered and tolerate special privilege, with the resulting exploitation of men, women, and children.

Charges Abuse of Power.

"Great powers have been used arbitrarily and autocratically to exact unmerited profit or compensation by both capital and labor. This policy of exacting profit rather than rendering service has wasted enormous stores of human and natural resources, and has put in places of authority those who seek selfish advantage regardless of the interests of the community.

"To remove these evils and to secure the conditions that will promote further economic development we must:

"1. Eliminate all unfair privilege of employer or employé and make business and industry fulfil their responsibilities to the community.

"2. Free all industries producing socially necessary commodities or supplying public service from selfish or incompetent autocratic control.

Cite Lessons of War.

"During the war Great Britain and afterward the United States were forced to adopt these principles to achieve victory.

"The violation of these principles is responsible for the present crisis in our country and in the world.

"We hold that these principles are indisputable and we declare that unless your findings are based upon them your report and recommendations will be a counsel of confusion and will intensify rather than allay the threatening consequences of the existing evil.

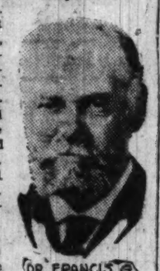
"We, industrial engineers, who make this declaration are qualified by our constant contact with the problems of modern industry to speak collectively and with authority concerning industrial competence."

Chicagoan on List.

In addition to Mr. Emerson, the letter is signed by H. L. Gantt, C. E. Knoeppel, G. C. Harrison, and Walter N. Polakov, of New York; L. V. Estes, Chicago; Carle M. Bigelow and Clinton H. Scovell of Boston; and L. W. Wallace, Baltimore.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB TO START TWELFTH SEASON

The twelfth season of the Chicago Sunday Evening club will open today at Orchestra hall.



DR. FRANCIS G. PEABODY

The speakers at the meeting, which will be devoted to the questions arising during the present industrial and social crisis, will include Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, Jacob M. Dickinson, and Dean Francis G. Peabody of Harvard university.

Gen. Wood will speak on "The Welfare of the Nation." Dr. Peabody's subject will be "The Soul of the Nation." Mr. Dickinson will introduce Gen. Wood and will also make a brief address.

Incorporated in Dr. Peabody's talk will be an appeal for the preservation of American ideals during the present crucial period and for adherence to Christian principles in the solution of the many problems which confront the country and the people today. A special program of music is being arranged by Edgar A. Nelson, director of the club choir of 100. An organ recital will be given by Mrs. Katherine Howard Ward.

Clifford W. Barnes, founder of the club and its president since it was organized, will preside.

There is involved a $4,500 mortgage and a check on which payment was stopped, according to Carroll.

QUEEN O' MORALE AND VALOR'S KING AT N. Y. BANQUET

Evangeline Booth Is Only Woman at Dinner to Belgian Ruler.

New York, Oct. 4.—King Albert of Belgium tonight attended a mass-meeting of American war veterans in Madison Square Garden and there received the plaudits of those who themselves had fought on the battle scarred soil of his own country.

Cheered by thousands of young Americans, who honored him not for his royal purple but for the gallantry he had displayed on the field of honor, the king, accompanied by Queen Elizabeth and the Belgian crown prince, entered the great auditorium shortly after 10 o'clock.

Twelve wounded service men—four each from the army, navy, and marine corps—acted as a guard of honor to the king when he entered the garden and later sat near him on the platform.

Noted Speakers Present.

Among the speakers at the meeting, arranged by the New York county organization of the American Legion, were Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy; Brand Whitlock, American ambassador to Belgium, and Col. Henry D. Lindsley, chairman of the legion's national executive committee, who, in an address of welcome, paid tribute to the feats of valor performed by Belgium and her gallant monarch.

Pointing out that during most of the time that America was at war with Germany it was the navy and not the army which operated on the Belgian front, Mr. Roosevelt described a tour of inspection he made a year ago and said:

"Though it expanded only to 500,000 men, the navy took on probably more diverse kinds of duties than has any other branch of the government. The qualities of imagination and ingenuity made our naval success possible.

"I think I am violating no secret in saying that the convoy system was an American suggestion to relieve the increasing submarine losses.

"It was because of the insistence of the American navy that the North sea mine barrier was created. It was our initiative which developed the listening devices of submarine chasers."

Reply of the Monarch.

In reply to the address of welcome the king said:

"Mr. Chairman—I wish it were in my power to make you feel the emotion that will move all Belgians when they learn that I have at last been able to bear to New York and to the eminent citizens who have devoted themselves to the work for the commission for relief in Belgium a testimony of the sentiments of gratitude of a whole people that they have saved from famine.

"That Belgium was able to resist for four years the frightful morale oppression of the enemy is in great part due to the fact that she was not wholly abandoned by mankind and because she knew that there was somewhere in the world a powerful nation that was interesting itself in her unhappy fate.

Lived by Grace of U. S. Aid.

"Thanks to you, gentlemen, Belgium did not perish, and now she asks to be able to resume her place among the producing nations of the world. Before the war she occupied the fifth rank in international commerce.

"Today she is applying all of her energy to the work of her economic reconstitution, and is trying by her labor to continue to merit that sympathy which the great American nation vouchsafed her in her misfortune."

The king arrived at the garden after attending a dinner given in his honor by Rodman Wanamaker, chairman of Mayor Hylan's committee on welcome to distinguished guests.

At the dinner were diplomats, officers of the army and navy, representatives of the clergy, and men prominent in all fields of activity.

Tribute to Salvation Army.

But there was only one woman present.

She was Evangeline Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, invited especially because of the courage and energy of the little band of trained workers, she had led across shell torn fields on the very heels of the fighters. She was given an ovation by the diners.

There was a solemn moment when, after a toast had been drunk to the king and three American cheers given for the royal visitor, the monarch arose and proposed a toast to President Wilson, now lying ill in the White House.

The royal party left for Boston at 12:01 o'clock.

"Pork and" for Royalty.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 4.—Beans, baked Boston style and served in golden pots, will be on the menu of the luncheon to be tendered King Albert and Queen Elizabeth of Belgium here tomorrow.

Two gold pots have been made for the occasion and will be presented the royal visitors after the luncheon. They were fashioned after the ordinary bean pot and are about six inches in height and eight inches in diameter.

WAR LORD SLAIN BY POWERS, SAYS JAPAN PREMIER

TOKIO, Sept. 27.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—"The day of Machiavellian diplomacy is past and a new era of open diplomacy is arrived, with international affairs managed by coöperation of the powers, whether old school diplomats of Japan like it or not," declared Premier Hara today at a luncheon given in honor of Baron Makino, one of Japan's delegates to the peace conference.

In view of the struggle going on between the militarists and liberals of Japan, interest attaches to the premier's words.

M. Hara praised Baron Makino and his colleagues for obtaining approval of all Japanese contentions except that relative to equality of races, adding:

"The fact that some misunderstandings existed in foreign countries concerning the real intention of Japan made the task of the Japanese delegates more severe."

Royalists Urge Budapest to Restore Monarchy

BUDAPEST, Oct. 3.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—The city has suddenly become placarded with large posters summoning the people regardless of race or creed, to rally to the monarchy and demanding an immediate meeting of the national assembly for the purpose of bringing about a monarchy. This is the first open monarchical manifestation since October of last year.

IN THE GRAY DAWN OF "TOO LATE"

There have been many opportunities to invest in Chicago real estate. Thousands of men and women have taken advantage of these opportunities, but more thousands have refused, failed or neglected to take advantage of them and have awakened in the gray dawn of "Too Late." Those who had faith in Chicago's future, those who had vision enough to see clearly the increase of this city's importance as the years went on, have made money by purchasing real estate along lines of the city's growth.

Chicago to Be a City of Homeless People?

The daily press reports that Chicago has many thousands of people today who must dwell in hotels and lodging houses because of the shortage in homes. Child's Injury Starts Fight for Railway Gates

The injury of Mary Lally, 8 years old, daughter of Policeman John Lally of the Irving Park station, residing at 6929 Olcott street, has started a campaign for the erection of protective gates at Oliphant avenue and the Northwestern tracks. Several petitions to the city administration and the public utilities commission to have the crossing protected are now in circulation. The child was struck by a train Thursday as she was riding her bicycle home from school. Her hip was broken in four places. A boy was killed at the crossing eleven years ago.

Maid Takes $2,000 Loot from E. W. Clow Jr. Home

That red headed maid who went her way with quite a few treasures from the Glencoe home of James Simpson, vice president of Marshall Field & Co., some months ago, is believed to have been the same one who left the residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Clow Jr., Lake Forest, Friday night, with $2,000 worth of clothing and jewels. Among the treasures she took were three evening gowns, one trimmed with ermine; another with gold lace, each valued at more than $500; an opera cape, and a pair of antique ear rings. She also took $15 in cash.

MISS SPOFFORD PAYS SPEED FINE AFTER 4 DELAYS

Red Cross Driver Had the Towns Mixed; Justice Clears It Up.

How quickly a little thing like being arrested for speeding escapes one's mind, especially when one has had such exciting experiences in driving an automobile in France. Miss Florence M. Spofford, 3355 Washington boulevard, who served as a Red Cross driver of the Chicago section of the National League of Women's Service during the war, will say so.

Miss Spofford was among those caught in France at the outbreak of the war, and described in a letter a wild, exciting drive in her car from Paris to Boulogne in an effort to get out of the country.

Case Continued Four Times.

Miss Spofford was arrested Sept. 2 by Peter Schaefer, motorcycle policeman, who claims she was going thirty-five miles an hour. The first hearing was set for Sept. 11, and when Miss Spofford failed to appear Justice D. M. Mickey began making inquiries. Four times the case was continued because of her failure to appear.

Two weeks ago Justice Mickey received a letter from her stating she "didn't think any of her autos ever had been in Wilmette," and suggested some one else must have used her name. After repeated telephone calls had been sent her Miss Spofford yesterday consented to appear in court. Schaefer faced her.

"Never Over 28 Miles."

"I was never arrested in Wilmette in my life and my car never has run faster than twenty-eight miles an hour," she told Justice Mickey.

"Don't you recognize this officer, who says he served you with a summons?" inquired the justice.

Miss Spofford looked at Schaefer.

"O, yes, I have passed him often on the north shore, but he never arrested me," she said.

"I'm sure I stopped you and gave you a summons," said Schaefer.

"O, yes. Now I recall it, but that wasn't in Wilmette. That was in Evanston, wasn't it?"

"No," insisted Schaefer.

"Well, I can't say as to how fast I was going," said Miss Spofford, "as my speedometer hasn't been tested recently."

"Fifteen dollars and costs," was the court's decision.

Recalls Red Cross Case.

Miss Spofford paid without further argument.

It was Miss Spofford who appeared before Judge Stelk in the Speeders' court last spring and defended Miss Elizabeth Channon and Mrs. Mary M. Springer, two other Red Cross drivers, charged with violating the city parking ordinance. They were released on writs of habeas corpus and Miss Channon subsequently was made defendant in two $10,000 damage suits filed by Mrs. Anna Young and her daughter, Frances, for alleged injuries received when Miss Channon's car collided with their automobile.

Brokers Say Employe Stole $75,600; Seized

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—A. L. Talmage, cashier, and a messenger of the New York stock exchange firm of Finch & Tarbell, at 120 Broadway, caused the arrest today of a messenger, Percy Bristol, at Stamford, Conn., on the charge of stealing checks amounting to $75,000 and $600 in money.

Bristol said he had destroyed all the checks, together with a bank book with which he was sent to deposit them in the Mechanics and Metals bank in Nassau street.

Henry L. Finch, senior member of the firm, said tonight that $40,000 of the missing checks were cashier's checks and the others were from customers. Payment on the latter had been stopped and the cashier's checks are nonnegotiable.

MARS SHARPENS SWORD TO CARVE SLICE OF FIUME

Musters Forces of Serbs and Italians for Barbecue.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The military censorship has been re-established at Rome. This announcement is made in a Central News dispatch.

BY JOHN H. CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

FIUME, Oct. 4.—Every day that Gabriel d'Annunzio remains in Fiume brings Italy and Jugo-Slavia nearer the probability of war.

While both nations officially declare a desire for an amicable settlement of the question of Fiume, neither is leaving anything to chance. Both the Italians and the Serbs are massing large bodies of troops along the frontiers.

Three days ago I counted two brigades of field artillery from Triest and one brigade of six inch howitzers from Abbazia proceeding to the frontier in the vicinity of San Pietro. Troops and supplies are constantly being sent from Triest toward the Croate and Slovene borders. Italy does not intend to be caught napping.

Troops Called to Colors.

Perhaps the most ominious of all signs are the closing of the frontier and the remobilization of Serbian classes of 1880 to 1896, bringing back into the field practically the entire Serbian army. These men, from the ages of 24 to 39, recalled after a brief period of demobilization, will be held as reserves to the younger men now being sent toward Italy.

It isn't to be conceived that a warlike nation such as the Serbs will sit quietly by and let Italy take by might what the peace conference refused. The feeling is general in Serbia that war with Italy is inevitable, and most of the military leaders believe it would be better to strike now than at any other time.

Serbs Are Confident.

I have talked with several British, French, and American officers of rank, and all declare the Jugo-Slavs have a better army at this moment than when the European war began in 1914. Among the Serbs themselves there is nothing but confidence. They will go into the struggle, if it comes, with confidence in their ability to defend their rights. They are as deeply convinced as the Italians that Fiume is their property. They have also every assurance of the support of the United States, which their leaders declare in official proclamations has been assured them by the president, even if armed intervention is necessary.

RECORD BREAKING

Second Chicago Woman Captures "Sea Tiger" at Catalina Island.

From Avalon, Catalina island, comes word of a second Chicago woman having won the distinction of landing a sea tiger this season in Catalina waters.

Mrs. Thomas J. Irwin of 5929 Prairie avenue, who with her husband left Chicago in June on a western tour, succeeded in landing a 149½ pound marlin swordfish after a struggle lasting one hour and five minutes, during which time the sea giant made twenty leaps clear of the water.

With Mr. and Mrs. Irwin at the time the "strike was made, were Mr. and Mrs. P. J. McNulty of Pasadena, whom the Irwins had been visiting. Three sea tigers have been caught this season by women anglers in Catalina waters. This is a record for the fishing grounds.

U. S. WARSHIPS ACTIVE

PARIS, Oct. 4.—[United Press.]—Further American activity in connection with the Italian situation was reported here today when a dispatch to the Central News Agency from Basel declared that twelve American warships had arrived at Spalato, on the Dalmatian coast.

Gabriele d'Annunzio's position at Fiume was improved today when the Italian government lifted the food and mail blockade. The national council of Fiume had protested to Foreign Minister Tittoni that because of the food embargo the city was threatened with starvation.

Disorders Over Election.

Disorders accompanied the first day of the electoral campaign in Italy, according to advices received here. Feeling was intense on both sides when the campaign opened yesterday.

Socialists broke up a political meeting in Rome and later the police prevented a clash between a crowd of Socialists and a nationalist group.

After an "anti-war" meeting at Turin, which was attended by 20,000 persons, the crowd refused to disperse. Some one opened fire and one person was injured before the police put down the disturbances. Many arrests were made.

Allied Ship Carries Food.

VENICE, Oct. 4.—The steamer Prince Hohenlohe, under the interallied flags, with a cargo of foodstuffs consigned to Pola from this city, has altered its course and is heading for Fiume, according to the newspaper Il Tempo.

STORY OF TRAU INCIDENT

ROME, Oct. 3.—Delayed.—[By the Associated Press.]—Epoca publishes today correspondence from Zara, Dalmatia, giving what it calls "a true report of the disturbances at Trau."

On the night of Sept. 22, the account says, ninety Italian soldiers, led by Lieut. Norre, arrived at Trau, occupying it without violence, as a few Serbian troops garrisoning the city gave up their arms.

Admiral Millo telegraphed to Commander Menini of the cruiser Puglia at Spalato to send immediately an officer to induce the soldiers at Trau to return within the armistice line. Menini, after informing the American and Serbian commands, sent Capt. Maroni to Trau.

Persuades Italians to Quit.

Capt. Maroni, according to the newspaper report, succeeded in persuading Lieut. Norre and his men to retire without the intervention of either Americans or Serbians.

After the evacuation the Croat population, despite American watchfulness, attacked Italians under the eyes of the Serbian troops, and all Italians guilty of having shown their Italian feelings were arrested and taken on foot to the Clissa prison, nineteen miles distan. Count de Famfogna, 70 years old, was among the number.

Italian Shops Destroyed.

At Spalato, the Epoca account says, hundreds of Jugo-Slavs, armed with revolvers, terrorized the city, destroying Italian shops. Order was reëstablished when the American command published a proclamation giving an exact version of the Trau incident. The proclamation also stated that the Italian government had explicitly condemned the raid at Trau.

Spalato is now in a state of siege.

Paris Music Hall Strike Ends, Due to Minister

PARIS, Oct. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—An agreement between the managers and the Theater Workers' federation for the settlement of the strike in theaters and music halls, which was called about a week ago, has been reached through the mediation of Louis Laferre, minister of instruction. The strike will end today.

MARCONI DODGES U. S.

BY SPEARMAN LEWIS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, Oct. 4.—It became known in Paris today that Sig. Marconi has withdrawn as the head of the Italian mission to accompany the allied mission sailing from Brest on Monday for the Unted States. The official explanation is "illness."

It is known among his friends in Paris, however, that Marconi has felt much embarrassed because of the present strained relations between Italy and the United States over Fiume. He is understood to have expressed the fear that if he obtained a big personal reception from friends in America it would embarrass the administration, whose guest he would be.

On the other hand, his loyalty to Italy and the constant incentive to present the Italian viewpoint on Fiume, would be equally embarrassing, considering the object of the trip is to foster new financial and commercial relations between the two nations. Consequently the plea of illness.

MOTHER SEEKING HOME FOR BABY FATHER DENIED

Gets Temporary Asylum After Threat to Take Her Own Life.

Five months ago today a baby boy was born at the Chicago Lying-In hospital. Now his mother finds herself unable to care for him. She wants some nice family to adopt him.

The mother is only 19 years old, with dark eyes and black hair, and a wistful, pretty face. Sitting in an apartment at 845 Ainslie street, where she and her baby have been given temporary asylum, she told her little story. Scarcely a hundred yards away was the lake, wheer only the night before she had threatened to drown herself.

Meets Baby's Father.

"I had just finished high school," she began, "and was working in a bank, when I was introduced to him. His name was Paul ——— and he had been a student in the Northwestern University Dental school. His father is a retired farmer in Marshalltown, Ia.

"In 1916 my mother was killed in an accident, and I and my sister took a little flat on the north side. Soon after that he got a room in the same building. He was a traveling salesman then.

"Once he wrote from Clinton, Ia., that he wanted me to meet him there and get married. I wouldn't do it; so he came and took me to Rock Island. We were to get married in Davenport, but didn't on account of some religious differences.

Leaves for Overseas.

"I lived in Rock Island until April, 1918, when he was drafted. Then I came back to Chicago, and we lived together in a north side flat, when he got his first ten day furlough. The last time he was with me before he left for overseas was on July 22, 1918.

"Last May the baby was born. After Paul had been discharged from Camp Grant a short time before that happened, he told me: 'You weren't true to me while I was away. I'm not responsible for you.' While he was overseas he addressed letters to me as Mrs. Paul ———."

The mother and her baby left the St. Vincent's Infant asylum about a fortnight ago. But she finds that she is unable to give him proper care. Who'll take the little fellow and give the mother a chance to make good?

NORWAY FAVORS LEAGUE.

CHRISTIANIA, Oct. 3.—[French Wireless Service.]—Delayed.—The parliamentary committee, appointed to discuss the entrance of Norway into the league of nations, has reported unanimously in favor of Norway joining the league.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

The rotogravure section of today's TRIBUNE contains a portrait of King Albert of Belgium with the observation that he "is to be greeted here by an impressive organization of Chicago Belgans." It now appears doubtful that the king will visit Chicago. When the picture was prepared for publication, however, his coming was regarded as a certainty by the committees formed to welcome him.

In the issue of Sept. 19 THE TRIBUNE printed a letter from "A Friend" which told of a boy named Jimmie Ryan who was forced to quit school after earning a scholarship because his mother was in straitened circumstances. Several contributions were received. Now his mother states that the letter was sent in, in her belief, as a matter of spite work, and she does not wish any assistance.

FEAR TIDAL WAVE AS MAUNA LOA ERUPTION GROWS

HILO, T. H., Oct. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—A crack half a mile south of the summit crater of Mauna Loa was reported today by Professor Thomas A. Jagger, United States volcanologist, who returned to Hilo from the scene of the eruption.

Lava is filling the crack two miles above the cone caused by the 1916 eruption, according to the professor, and lava spouted from the cone 200 feet in the air when the disturbance was at its height. Professor Jagger said that in Lava lake, on the summit, he found a huge fountain of molten lava and that the gas pressure was enormous.

Reports from the peak indicate that the flow is increasing and Hawaiians fear another tidal wave, such as endangered the lives of camp men and others Thursday.

A bright glow caused when the hot lava comes from the volcano is reported by observers.

No loss of life is believed to have resulted from the eruption and property damage has been slight.

Calumet Council, K. of C., to Entertain for Veterans

Practically all of its 2,000 members and their friends will be present at a Columbus day entertainment and dancing party to be given next Friday evening at White City ballroom and casino by Calumet council, Knights of Columbus. The celebration will be in the nature of a homecoming party to the council's 500 members who saw service in the world war. Ex-Gov. Dunne will deliver an address, relating his experiences while abroad recently as a member of a committee to investigate conditions in Ireland.

There will be dancing in the ballroom the entire evening, while in the casino an extensive vaudeville program will be presented. The party will be the most important social event of the season in local Knights of Columbus circles.

MARINE RETURNS TO CHARGE WIFE LOVES ANOTHER

Says Woman Who Worked as He Served Prefers Her Employer Now.

When Clarence G. Jones joined the marines in June, 1918, he and his wife, Irene Marie, agreed during his absence she would obtain employment. She found it in the lunchroom in the Jackson park golf shelter, operated by Frank R. Twitchell, who has the concession in the south parks and owns a string of restaurants.

Jones filed a divorce bill in the Circuit court yesterday, through Attorney Louis A. Helle, charging Mrs. Jones had become enamored of Twitchell, that they had gone automobile riding and attended dinners and dances together, and that they were guilty of improper conduct.

A few weeks ago Jones filed suit for $50,000 damages against Twitchell in the Superior court, supposedly on charges of alienation of his wife's affections. Twitchell is 48 and is said to be married.

"Affinities" Wreck Homes.

Two more alleged affinity suits were filed in the Circuit court.

Joseph Scully married Belle on Oct. 12, 1914. Everything was peaceable until July, 1918. From that time to Dec. 12 Joseph charges Belle with friendship with other men, naming Walter Potter.

Roy S. Taylor charges a July 4 party in St. Joseph, Mich., caused the breaking up of his home. His wife, Mabel, whom he married in 1912, is charged with being friendly with John Smith. Taylor also states that on Oct. 12, 1917, his wife proceeded to be married to another man, Charles E. Connor. This marriage was annulled and the wife forgiven, he says.

"Baby May" Causes Divorce.

The alleged relations of Houston Thacker, a dancing teacher in dull business times, with "Baby May," won a divorce yesterday for Mrs. Rose Thacker, 4722 Hermitage avenue. The decree was signed by Judge Jacob H. Hopkins in the Superior court, to whom Mrs. Thacker told her story of marital unhappiness.

"Last January he went away with this girl, whom he met at a dancing place," testified Mrs. Thacker. "He said he never cared as much for anybody else as he cared for her. He even gave my ring to her. He said he would marry her any time I would give him a divorce."

Mrs. Thacker introduced a letter written to her husband and signed, "Your Poor, Broken Baby May."

FEAR MISSING BALLOON CREWS LOST IN WOODS

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 4.—[United Press.]—Missing since they started from here Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock in the national open balloon race, three pilots and their aids were believed to be lost in the Canadian woods without supplies tonight.

No reports have been received by the Missouri Aeronautical society from Capt. Carl W. Dammann of the St. Louis V., Capt. Paul J. McCullough in the "84," and Capt. Ernest S. Cole with the Wichita since they hopped off in the race more than seventy-two hours ago. None carried supplies for more than three days.

Concern was felt particularly for Capt. Dammann and his craft, as the gas was leaking when the start was made. Roy Donaldson, aid to Capt. H. E. Honeywell in the Kansas II., expressed fear for Dammann's safety in a telegram received today.

The message was sent from Windsor, Canada, yesterday. Donaldson declared he last saw Dammann over the shore of Lake Michigan, southeast of Milwaukee, Thursday morning. Donaldson's message said he did not believe Dammann had been able to cross the lake.

WET MOBS RIOT! DRY MOBS RIOT! WHAT'S REMEDY?

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—"It is our turn to be amused," says a statement issued by the anti-prohibitionists today on the wartime liquor ban issue.

"A few years ago in the United States senate the senior senator from Illinois pointed to the awful example of East St. Louis, the direct result, he said, from the open saloon. Lawless men had entered the saloons, filled themselves with vile liquor, and started out on a mission of destruction and murder.

"What does the Hon. Lawrence Y. Sherman say today? Last Sunday in Omaha we witnessed in even more violent form a repetition of what took place in East St. Louis, only on this occasion the mob took the mayor of the city, almost murdered him, and destroyed their magnificent courthouse, and Omaha is 'dry'—bone dry—not only by federal amendment but by action of the state legislature."

THREE TOWNS HONOR YANKS.

Lansing, Bernice, and Oak Glenn, tiny towns in Cook county, held a homecoming celebration yesterday for their eighty-three returned sons. Mrs. Louis Schultz, Mrs. W. A. Potts, and Arnold Vieark, president of the village of Lansing, were in charge. The soldiers, the Boy Scouts, and the school children marched from Lansing to Bernice and back to chicken dinner. Last night there was a big dance.

ENDLESS BANDIT ATTACKS BLAST NORTH MEXICO

Ranch Houses Are Ruins, Bosses Slain, Vast Herds Dwindle.

BY CAPT. KENT HUNTER.

El Paso, Tex., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—I have been into the land of yesterday. For five days I traveled by automobile, with a ranch manager and one other man, through the bandit-ruined districts of northern Chihuahua and saw the after sign of the result of eight years of reign by one factional chief after another, with no thought of ultimate conservation or of other desire than temporary comfort through profit and extortion.

There were a dozen ranch house ruins, each replete with stories that started, "Ten years ago this was one of the prettiest properties in Mexico"—and continued "until Villa came in 1913," or "until Salazar burned it in 1914," or "until Orozco's rebels raided it in 1912" or—on down through a list of all the rebel and bandit chieftains that have pillaged and robbed through the border states of Mexico since the iron hand of Porfirio Diaz was taken away from the helm of the ship of state in the "American Balkan."

Huge American Property.

H. S. Stephenson, manager of the Palomas Land and Cattle company, offered me the opportunity to go with him over the properties owned outright by that company in Mexico. The holdings comprise a little over 2,000,000 acres, or 3,125 square miles—a tract two and a half times the size of Rhode Island. The northern edge of the holdings is on the United States border, ten miles just west of Columbus, N. M., to the point on the border where the Sierra Madre mountains run north and south. The property extends south with the Sierra Madres as a western boundary to the Carretas holdings, some sixty miles south of the line, then eastward to the town of Janos and north again to the line.

During the reign of Diaz the ranch was stocked with all the cattle it could hold, had 760 miles of four barbed wire fence in good repair, and employed some 150 ranch hands. Today the fences are cut and torn beyond repair, there are less than a quarter of the old herds, and the ranch pay roll shows only about thirty names.

Tourist's Complete Arsenal.

We started from the offices of the company at Columbus, N. M. Mr. Stephenson drove a car that resembled an armored battle machines of the type in Europe. Its equipment included a Browning automatic rifle, two Winchester rifles shooting regulation government ammunition, an automatic shotgun shooting buckshot cartridges, and a brace of 45-caliber pistols for each occupant.

The first day's drive started before daylight and brought us to the "Corner Ranch," just inside the American boundary line at the point where the United States makes a right angle into Mexico and starts west, south of Palomita, N. M.

Just inside the "corner" there is a high fence inclosing three graves—the mounds of Jensen, Peterson, and two of their ranch hands, killed by Sylvester Quevedo and his bandit crew in 1916.

Just before we pulled out from the "corner ranch" we were told that Mocha Higenio Gomez, bandit, with a dozen of his band, was operating in the country immediately to the south, that he had hanged one of the Mexican ranch hands of the Palomas company, and left a note in a fence post, threatening to "get" the rest of the hands at the Nogales ranch house of the company, thirty miles south, and the place where the headquarters of the entire holdings used to be in the days when things were normal.

American Life in Mexico.

Twenty miles directly south of the ranch Mr. Stephenson pointed to a small mesa like butte that rose from the very center of a grassy plain dotted here and there with cattle.

"The Mexicans say that Tom Kingsbury is buried on top of that butte," he said.

Kingsbury was the last American ranch foreman of the Palomas company.

July 13, 1918, he started with Mr. Stephenson from the Nogales ranch to Columbus, on the border. They separated before they came to the butte, because Mr. Stephenson had to go to another section of the ranch. Kingsbury was to follow a cattle herd into one of the "north pastures" and then go on into the "Corner ranch." He never was seen after they parted. Stories in the district tell that Mocha Higenio Gomez boasted afterward that he and two other bandits waylaid the ranch foreman, shot him, and hid his body on the butte. Search has failed to show the burial spot.

Ten miles beyond the butte is the Nogales ranch. In the days of yesterday it used to be the headquarters of the entire Palomas property in Mexico. There was a granary and a series of barns that held 200 tons of hay at a time. There was a patio with adobe buildings around it where the company office, the company store, living quarters for the company officials and the office where Mexican customs officials lived to check off the shipments of cattle northward into the United States. There was a big machine shop and bunk houses for the vaqueros and miscellanous ranch hands.

Then Came "Gen." Salazar.

Salazar raided it, burned the buildings, repulsed the federals who tried to drive him away, but lost nineteen men during the battle.

At Nogales ranch we were told that there had been a raid by the bandits that morning, and that the bandits had killed one steer and run off some others near the "Coyote" branch ranch, twenty-five miles south. We fitted up the tanks with gasoline and started south again.

At "Coyote" we found Juan Favela, ranch foreman since the death of Kingsbury. Favela is the Mexican who told Col. Slocum, twelve hours before Villa raided Columbus, that the raid was coming. He has been on the Palomas payroll since the ranch started, and is loyal. He told of the latest raid and said that it was the Gomez crew.

Mr. Stephenson carried a commission from the Mexican military governor of Chihuahua for Juan Mata, another of his reliable Mexicans, to form a home guard of ranch hands, to trail and capture bandits, and turn them over, if captured, to the military authorities. Mata was not at "Coyote." He was off in the hills on the trail of the raiders.

Expected Carranza Troops.

Favela told us that the Ojitos ranch, twenty-five miles further south, was the place where a platoon of Carranza soldiers was to arrive that night to operate against the bandits. We started for Ojitos. The Carranza soldiers were not there.

From Ojitos we started again for "Coyote" in a driving rain. Late afternoon found us in Nogales again. Juan Mata had returned from the hills, but without having located Gomez.

Dawn of the third day we started into Bolo canyon—Mr. Stephenson, Mata, Favela, and myself—to look again for tracks of Gomez. Forty miles of riding failed to show a trace, but another note, promising vengeance on the entire Nogales ranch, was found on the way back, pinned to a wire in a pasture gate.

At 10 o'clock that night the Mexicans in the yard began to whisper among themselves. Far out over the mesa they had heard the pounding of hoofs. They clicked cartridges into their guns, slipped out into positions of vantage in the rocks outside the home corral, and waited. Half an hour passed. Then there came a hail, in a high pitched, distance obliterating voice.

"Beunos amigos," came the voice. "Soldados."

One of the ranch boys answered—and then moved his position.

Half an hour later the first of the voices from the mesa hailed from the corral gate. It was the detachment of soldiers, twenty of them, under a captain, whose rank was shown by the fact that he wore riding breeches and puttees, and a white shirt.

Called Soldiers, That's All.

They came into the corral, unsaddled, lit two fires, and in an hour were asleep. A check-up in the morning showed that eight of them had horses that could not be ridden further. They had no food and very little ammunition. The captain himself had only four rounds for his automatic pistol.

They were equipped with ammunition from the ranch stores, fed from the ranch chuck wagon, and remounted from the ranch remuda. But, they say, they were sent to guard the ranch from attack, not to chase bandits. Before 10 o'clock, however, they had been told that there were only a dozen men in the Gomez band, and their courage came up. Their captain gave them a bit of a lecture and they decided to follow Juan Mata to the death.

Mr. Stephenson, meantime, found out that branding must be started within a few days. Certain supplies were necessary. He decided to start the soldiers with Mata, and several of the more adventurous souls from the ranch. He was to come on back to Columbus, get the necessary supplies, and return in four days for the roundup.

Bandit Seeking Vengeance.

The soldier captain brought word that a brother of Epifanio Holguin, a bandit killed in a fight with his own men at Sabinal a few days previous, had taken the warpath in the Boca Grande country, along the Casas Grande river valley. We decided to come back that way, looking for trouble.

We started north, passed the mountain where the American Indian Geronimo made his last stand and was taken by Gens. Crook and Shafter, and hit in through the Boca Grande at noon.

We passed the place where Clarence O'Neil, Arthur McKinney, and James Corbett, three American foremen of the Palomas company, had been captured and hanged by Villa on March 6, 1916, when he was on his way north to raid Columbus.

But there was no sign of Holguin's brother or his bandits. Nor did the band headed by Urbano Poncl, appear.

Both Factions Confident.

When we landed again in Columbus the El Paso papers carried stories of statements by Carranza military leaders that Chihuahua is clear of bandits. And there were statements in the same papers from Pancho Villa, declaring that all of the anti-Carranza rebels had united under his leadership and would soon have the de facto government on the run.

Of this I am certain. Mexico—as typified by the one small section that I have seen—is safe for Americans—provided, of course, that the Americans have plenty of arms, and go in parties large enough to resist attack.

The Palomas company, through its size and its determination not to lose everything and get out of the country, has lasted thus far, though at great loss. One other large property, the Babicora properties in the Casas Grandes region, has a similar history. Through active protection of its rights it has survived—at a 65 per cent loss—to the present time. How long the struggle can be kept up depends on futurities.

Little properties, without the capital to continue the fight, have succumbed, and given up the fight. Stephenson and John C. Hayes, manager of the Babicora properties, are the only Americans that personally go into Mexico to supervsie this defense. Their lives are not worth the paper it takes to write their life insurance, but they are of pioneer stock and won't give up.

Their Answers Are Colorful.

But ask them about the Democratic administration, and their faith in our government. Their answers are vitriolic.

The Mexicans who have remained loyal declare that 90 per cent of their countrymen would welcome a chance to have peace come back and working conditions restored. The other 10 per cent are either in the army, drawing a living for carrying on a half hearted fight against the banditry, or are bandits, making a good living by raiding the properties that remain.

Carranza is trying—as best he can—to protect American interests, but Carranza is unable, with the resources at his command, properly to police the great stretches of country. If the cooperation of all rebels under Villa works out, Carranza and the Carranza government cannot stand. Revolution will put the country back to where it was in 1914, only with the resources that carried through from 1914 to 1919 so depleted that actual starvation will follow if the rebels get the upper hand and live, as they have always lived in the past, on the country in which they operate.

Rebel Chieftains Wary.

Mexicans—and Americans who have struggled through the last seven years—will tell you that when Villa, or any other rebel chiefs make a promise, they usually live up to it. But they make few promises.

Obregon can control Sonora, Chihuahua, Sinaloa, and Lower California if he is successful in his presidential aspirations. He may be able to control Coahuila, Nueva Leon, and Tamaulipas. Pablo Gonzales, if elected president, can control Durango, Zacatecas, Vera Cruz, Hidalgo, and the federal district of Mexico. Felix Diaz can control Oaxaca, Guerrero, Guanajato, Pueblo, Morelos, Michoacan, and Colima. Chiapas, Tabasco, Campeche, Yucatan, and the territory of Quintana Roo lean to Alvarado.

Each of these chiefs hates the other with an undying and deep burning memory of past wrongs, real or fancied. They will not combine. If the anti-Carranza revolutionists overthrow the existing government each chief will combine with another for just long enough to elminate the next most powerful rival and then split and fight with his former ally over the spoils.

Wanted Dictator—Complete.

Mexicans on this side of the line who know their country and their countrymen, will tell you that Mexico needs a dictator—a man who will rule with an iron hand. If that dictator can be a man with enlightened ideas, so much the better for the good of Mexico, but iron fisted, steel willed, and unrelenting toward trespassers on his authority he must be. And—they shrug their expressive shoulders and sigh—there is no such man in Mexico today.

Even if there were, they say, he could not hope to pacify the factionalists of the stricken country, without unlimited support in arms and money from some outside source.

If, and again they sigh and look behind the furniture to make sure that they are not spied upon, some power—the United States, for example—would take hold, establish a stable government, let the people see the benefits of such a govrnment, and stick at it long enough to have that government permanently set up, the vast majority of Mexicans would thank their everlasting stars. But—and again the shrug and the sigh—the United States will never do it, and stick at it long enough to make it permanent.

What will happen to Mexico in the meantime?

Their answer is a national phrase—"Quien sabe?"

Army Store Closed for Day to Replenish Stock

The quartermaster corps retail store was closed yesterday on account of the congestion and difficulty in transporting supplies from the warehouses and for rearrangement and replenishment of stock. It will open tomorrow morning for business, according to Lieut. Col. James P. Castleman, zone surplus property officer.

FIRST DIVISION MEN WILL HAVE BIG WELCOME

Former Chicago soldiers who are demobilized members of the famous 1st division will be the guests of honor of the city next Thursday.

The program, which will begin with a luncheon at the Congress hotel at 12:30 p. m., will be under the auspices of the city council welcoming committee, of which William Nelson Pelouze is chairman. All soldiers are requested to report in uniform at the Khaki and Blue club at noon.

At 2:30 o'clock a theatrical performance will be given at the municipal pier by prominent stars now appearing in current attractions. The Chicago band, directed by Leo Weil, will furnish a musical program. In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be an exhibition of fireworks at the municipal pier. Mrs. James Keeley will act as hostess at a dancing party to follow.

All soldiers who brought war trophies back from France, Chairman Pelouze said, will be asked to loan them to the Chicago Historical society for permanent exhibition.

Seven New Influenza Cases Are Reported During Day

Twenty-four cases of pneumonia, with three deaths, and seven new cases of influenza were reported yesterday to the health department as the record for the last twenty-four hours.

SEE DARK MAZE AHEAD FOR CITY'S DAYLIGHT SAVING

Prof. Cox and C. F. Clyne Warn Ald. Hogan of Mixup.

Plans to create a daylight saving system in Chicago by city ordinance were attacked yesterday by Prof. Harry J. Cox, who declared that though he favored daylight saving as a national device, it would result in dissatisfaction and failure as a municipally applied scheme.

In spite of the objections of Mr. Cox and District Attorney C. F. Clyne, Ald. Timothy Hogan received a copy of his daylight saving ordinance from Assistant Corporation Counsel Breen, who drew it, and said that he would ask a special council meeting to consider it.

Clyne Explains Opposition.

Mr. Clyne said that even though the city does establish Ald. Hogan's plan or any other system of daylight saving, the movement of trains, the federal courts, the mails or any departments of the federal government will be unaltered. This, he said, would result in two time systems and general dissatisfaction.

"Cleveland and Detroit are far from satisfied with their daylight saving systems," said Mr. Cox. "Have not peoples of the world tampered with enough things without tampering with nature? It is the next thing to bolshevism to try to fix the time contrary to the federal system."

Trouble for Suburbs.

It was also pointed out yesterday that unless Evanston, Oak Park, and other suburbs also adopted the proposed time change with Chicago it would become necessary to change watches in traveling between the suburbs and the city.

"The change would be a good thing for the stores and manufacturers," said Prof. Cox, "for they would save money on light bills."

Motorcycle Hits Auto; Four Persons Are Killed

Hornell, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Four persons were killed tonight in a collision between an automobile and a motorcycle. The dead are Thomas V. Rogers, 50; A. Vincent, 12; George E. Martin, 14, and Miss Amy Vincent, all of Alfred, N. Y.

HURT IN CRASH

Grandson of Steel Plow Inventor and Woman with Him When Car Hit Mail Truck.

Mrs. Julia Roelle Banedt
James Oliver II

It will be at least six weeks before James Oliver, son of Joseph D. Oliver of South Bend, Ind., and grandson of James Oliver, inventor of the chilled steel plow, can resume the vacation he embarked upon with disastrous results early Friday morning.

He is at Alexian Brothers' hospital suffering from two broken legs as the result of an automobile accident.

Mrs. Julia Roelle Banedt, 90 Webster avenue, who was Mr. Oliver's companion when his roadster ran into a government mail truck, escaped with slight injuries. She explained her efforts to "keep the accident quiet" as due to the fact Mr. Oliver is a young man, keeping company with a young woman.

Oliver and Mrs. Banedt were bound on a week-end fishing trip to Cedar Lake. She is the estranged wife of Emil Banedt, a west side saloonkeeper.

MOTORCYCLIST HURT BY AUTO.

Dominick Benicasso, 512 South Francisco avenue, was seriously injured last night when an automobile driven by Joseph Giarrizzo, 416 West Division street, crashed into his motorcycle at Jackson boulevard and Ogden avenue. At the county hospital doctors said his left leg would have to be amputated. Giarrizzo was arrested.

CITY AIDS OPEN FIGHT TO REGAIN EXCESS CAR FARE

Petition Utility Board and Ask Neighborhoods to Take Action.

Attorneys for the city pressed on with all their might yesterday in their fight for 5 cent street car fares under Judge Smith's decision in Springfield that the 7 cent fares are illegal. Yesterday's developments were:

Petition to the utilities board that, in view of the judge's decision, all excess fares be ordered impounded, with the requirement that the company deposit such fares with a trust company or bank to be refunded to the people if the decision is adverse.

Urges District Action.

Recommendation by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester E. Cleveland that neighborhood clubs be formed in all parts of the city to hire lawyers for the institution of suits against the surface lines for the $2,000,000 in excess fares already paid in.

Filing in the Municipal court by Assistant Corporation Counsel Breen of a suit to collect his increased fares from the street car company, with the suggestion that other citizens join in the suit.

Rushing of the city's plans to ask the State Supreme court for an order on the street car company requiring a return to the 5 cent fare while the case is being fought out in the high court.

In the petition to the utilities board, signed by Corporation Counsel Ettelson and his chief traction adviser, Mr. Cleveland, the amount already unlawfully collected by the company under the 7 cent ruling is set at $2,000,000, or nearly $40,000 a day.

Question Court's Right.

It is further declared that Judge Smith had no right to allow the appeal of the surface lines to the Supreme court; that anyway the appeal does not act as a stay to the ruling that 5 cents is the legal fare, and that the company should be compelled to make immediate reparation and return to the old fare.

Although Mr. Breen's suit for reparation was brought as a citizen and not in the name of the city, it received the unofficial sanction of both Mr. Ettelson and Mr. Cleveland. Mr. Breen asks for the return of $1.60 which he has spent for excess fares since Aug. 25.

"If the people are wise they will combine their claims and press them in court at once," said Mr. Cleveland.

Demand 5 Cent Fare Now.

Attorneys for the city declare the fare should be 5 cents now, but the fear of inciting violence has led them to go to the commission and the courts for reparation, rather than to advise car patrons to refuse to pay more than 5 cents. The attorneys believe, however, that the law would support such advice.

Mr. Cleveland dictated a hot reply to his opponents, who have declared that, inasmuch as Judge Smith refused to hold the contract ordinances binding, the city really suffered a defeat instead of winning a victory in the Sangamon county court decision.

Statement by Cleveland.

Mr. Cleveland's statement follows in part:

"The contract feature of the judge's decision appears in two aspects.

"First, the question is whether the contract may be abrogated at the election from increasing the rates;

"Second, whether, if the rates are increased, the result is that the entire contract may be abrogated at he election of the city, and the companies rendered mere tenants at sufferance in the streets of the city, with the city releaved of the obligation to pay $157,000,000 in order to terminate the companies' rights.

"Judge Smith held against the city on the first proposition. Holding that the commission can increase rates notwithstanding the contracts, but on the second proposition—whether in consequence of the increase the city can abruptly terminate the contracts—the judge held that that was no question for the commission or the court on an appeal from the commission.

"A Sweeping Victory."

"On all points in the case except merely the question of whether the contracts precluded the commission from fixing rates above the contract price, Judge Smith's decision is a sweeping victory for the city.

"However, the question of the extent of the victory of either party is of minor consideration. The essential fact is that by this decision it is held the Chicago surface lines since Aug. 7, 1919, have been forcing the people of Chicago to pay them approximately $39,000 a day, or at the rate of $12,000,000 a year, to which in law the company has no right.

"Personally, I think we could much more profitably consider how this outrageous wrong upon the people can be righted, than engage in a discussion as to who has won the greater victory."

40 GET SHARE IN MILLER ESTATE

New York, Oct. 4.—[Special.]—More than forty beneficiaries share in the estate of Darius Miller, well known railroad man, who died April 3 last at his home in New Britain, Conn., leaving nearly $4,000,000. Because a portion of the estate, consisting of property at Riverside drive and One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street, is taxable in New York, the transfer tax appraiser remitted in his report to the Surrogate's court today a summary of the entire assets.

Bequests of Mr. Miller range from $10,000 to $500,000. The New Britain Y. M. C. A. gets $100,000 and three churches in New Britain similar amounts.

Mr. Miller left a life estate of $500,000, beside his home, to Mrs. Elizabeth B. Miller, his widow, while his brother, Frank Miller of New Britain, receives $500,000.

ARDMORE, OKLA., DRAWS REBUKE FROM TEXAS

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 4.—Sweeping denunciation of the Ardmore citizens who refused to allow Senator Reed to speak in that city recently in opposition to the league of nations covenant was contained in a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the Texas Republican council here today.

The resolution condemns the conduct of the disorderly part of the Ardmore audience as "un-American, anarchistic and disreputable," and denounces it as a "challenge to the constitution and an unpardonable insult to every law abiding and liberty loving citizen who cherishes American institutions."

BREAD GOES UP ANOTHER HALF CENT TOMORROW

Farmer, Rail Man, Grocer All Deny "Hogging" in H. C. L. Debate.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Who is getting the consumers' money?

James D. Frazer of Marley, Ill., writes that the farmer is not getting it. A. M. Van Aucken, 3162 Abbott court, writes that the canners and railroads are not to blame for the H. C. L.

The bureau of business research of Harvard university asserts that the small grocers are not "hogging" it.

But the consumer is paying twice as much as before the war. Tomorrow morning he will be asked an increased price for bread.

Bread Goes Up Again.

Before the world was upset the consumer bought a pound loaf of bread for 5 cents. The weight was reduced and the price remained stationary. Then the price went upward. Before the war the baker was collecting 4 cents a loaf from grocers. Yesterday he served notice that the price will be 9 cents. It has been 8½ cents. The consumer purchased yesterday for 10 cents and he will pay more tomorrow. The reasons for the increase will be interesting.

The new retail price probably will be 10½ cents per pound loaf or two loaves for 21 cents, according to several grocers. They anticipated, however, that some grocers will fix a straight price of 11 cents a loaf.

Some have been inclined to put a large part of the blame for the high cost of living upon the railroads. In reply, Mr. Van Aucken says: "I wish to challenge any statement that freight rates are in any degree a determining factor in food costs.

Cites Detailed Costs.

"Take the nine largest fruit and vegetable items in Chicago consumption and you will find that in June, 1919, the percentages of retail charge were distributed as follows:

"To producer, for growing, gathering, delivering to, and loading of freight car.34 per cent
To carrier, for average haul of 180 miles, switching to side tracks, furnishing facilities .....11 per cent
To distributor, between car side and consumer .....55 per cent
"Take the seventeen largest items canned and pickled goods, and in March, 1919, the retail charge in Chicago was distributed as follows:

"Opening, picking, delivering to factory, supplying cans and canning and delivery to freight house .....41 per cent
"Loading on car, hauling an average of 283 miles, and selling car in yard or at warehouse ..... 8 per cent
"To distributing, between car and consumer.....51 per cent

Continuing, he wrote:

"Meat is high to consumer because in Chicago it passes through thirteen hands between the car at the yards and the consumer."

Farmer Tells His Side.

Mr. Frazer, for the farmer, writes:

"I am a farmer and know whereof I speak when I say that, under a business conception of the term profit, hardly 10 per cent of the farms of this county [Will county in Illinois] have ever paid a profit.

"Cash corn has dropped more than 50 per cent in the last five or six weeks, hogs between 20 and 25 per cent and cattle are down 25 per cent from the high point. This shows the farmer has already stood some cut in the cost of living.

"Now, if the farmer can stand a cut in his wages, let the city man stand a cut, too.

"Limit the Groceries."

"In Chicago you have had a law limiting the number of saloons in proportion to population. Do the same thing to grocery stores. Eliminate two-thirds of them as unnecessary. Let Mr. Westerfeld sell his grocery and come out and buy a nice big farm, retaining three hired men to help him run it."

"I'll trade my grocery for Mr. Frazer's farm," replied Mr. Westerfeld, "and I'll invoice my stock at cost so he can put in his farm at its greatly increased value, due principally to the price of the products from it.

"I haven't any quarrel with this or any other individual farmer, but I have a complaint against the growers' associations, like the walnut, raisin, fruit, and almond growers. They have set excessive prices on their products and we must pay them and take the same from the public."

Denies Excessive Gains.

Mr. Westerfeld, who is the chairman of the Chicago retail food distributors, was not able to kick any holes in the statements of Mr. Van Aucken regarding railroad rates. He did deny that the retailers are making excessive profits and gave the percentage of profit on half a dozen articles. None of above 24 per cent gross.

A more authoritative statement on retail grocers, although not as comprehensive as could be desired, comes from Harvard university. Its business research bureau claims to have obtained information from grocery stores in forty-one states and from Canada, varying in size from a business of $5,000 to $513,900 annually.

The report shows the highest gross profit last year for any of these stores was 26.64 and the lowest 10.50. The net figures ran from 9.29 net profit to a loss of 4.05 per cent.

Curtis Hand Built TireS

How they built the pyramids, nobody knows except that they were built by hand.

No mammoth hoisting machines lifted the huge blocks into place—no great excavating machines dug the foundations' resting place.

The pyramids were hand-built and they have endured for centuries; objects of wonder and endurance.

Similarly in the construction of Curtis tires: Endurance, "hand-built" right into them, lasts where machine-made tires cannot endure.

A Curtis Hand-Built Tire on your car means more miles than you ever hoped for with an ordinary machine-made tire; yet Curtis Tires cost no more than those which give less service.

SOX HUMBLED IN FOURTH GAME, 2-0

JIM RING'S JINX DRIVEN TO COVER BY SUPERB WORK

Evil Genius of '19 Season Seems to Transfer Self to Sox.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Jimmy Ring, fast ball pitcher, has been the hard luck hurler of the Reds all season. In effectiveness, in the hits allowed opponents, he has been among the leaders of Pat Moran's versatile staff. In the won and lost column Ring has been fortunate to win half his games on a championship team.

Failure of the Reds to back up his club efforts with runs had become so marked that it seemed a jinx pursued Ring. Fans in Redland hated to see him ascend the mound because of this supposed jinx, and you know there is no spore in which superstition and belief in omens cut more figure than in baseball.

Jinx Deserts Ring.

At White Sox park yesterday, in a game which was all important for the Gleasons to win, Ring effectually lost his evil genius; in fact, seemed to transfer it to the Sox. With Eddie Cicotte pitching in his oldtime form, marred only by two errors of his own making, with the White Sox on their toes in a fight for the game which would even up the series, Jimmy Ring added his name to those of Dutch Ruether and Eddie Kerr as one of the pitching heroes of the world's series of 1919.

There was no hard luck about Ring against the White Sox. He had them baffled by his fast ball in the early innings, occasionally using his curve and change of pace. Toward the end he ventured his curve with equal success.

Sox Get Three Bingles.

While Eddie Cicotte's pair of errors in the fifth inning gave the Reds the break of the game and paved the way for two runs, while fielding so brilliant it savored almost of highway robbery in two instances deprived the Sox of hits, the cold figures of the official averages show that Gleason's hard hitters, premier team batters of the American league, secured only three hits off Hard Luck Jimmy. Of these three one might have been converted into an out if Roush had not been puzzled by the effect of the wind against a high fly and therefore made his effort somewhat late.

It is useless to bemoan the two errors which helped vitiate Cicotte's comeback, a comeback which effectually stilled the rumors that his arm was gone, when the Sox were so helpless against the offerings presented for their inspection. The game might have gone to darkness without the locals counting once, the way Ring had them going. He was so effective that the contest, from the standpoint of a White Sox rooter, was uninteresting.

Started with Reds in 1917.

Unlike Sallee and Ray Fisher, Ring in comparison is a newcomer in seasoned major league ranks, although up some before. He was with the Reds in 1917, who had secured him from Utica, but was sent to Buffalo. He started the season of 1918 with Chattanooga, but was recalled by Cincinnati in June. This season he has shown himself one of the best fast ball hurlers in the National league, but as was told was known as a hard luck pitcher. In fact, many thought Moran would not use him in the series for this reason.

Ring is 24 years old and developed his baseball education in the semipro league of Brooklyn, his birthplace. He first became prominent with Lowell of the New England league in 1914 and was secured by the New York Yankees, where he remained until June, 1918, when he was transferred to Jersey City. His subsequent career has been told.

Now that the Reds are three and one to victories, with the Sox forced to a desperate defensive position, Moran has a choice of hurlers. Hod Eller had been touted for yesterday, with Ruether for today. Moran now has his choice of coming through with Eller and reserving Ruether and Sallee, his two southpaws, for the games in Cincinnati on Monday and Tuesday, or of working Ruether today and still being able to use him again in the series if it should go to eight or nine games, which the Reds and their jubilant followers do not for a minute consider impossible.

Kid Gleason had intended to save Williams and Kerr for the two games in Cincinnati, with James on the mound today. Williams is now the situation because the Reds have been so effective against our southpaws.

Red Swatters Helpless.

The heavy hitters of the Reds, on the season's averages, have been stopped by the Sox pitchers, but the second tier of batsmen have come through in the pinches. On the other hand, the Sox, who figured as far superior batters on team averages, have come not as well for the averages and have been timely in the pinches than the Reds.

The Sox have been stopped by what was considered a reliable rather than brilliant pitching staff. Goodness knows, it has been reliable enough, but it also has been brilliant.

To win the world's series now the Reds must solve some of those pitchers no matter what their own do.

HANDSOME RING FINDS ANALOGY IN HURLER RING

Says Both Have Beautiful Curves and Inclined to Be a Bit Wild.

BY RING W. LARDNER.

Gents: There is a strong family resemblance between the Rings. Both of them is tall and handsome and has beautiful curves. Both of them is inclined to be a trifle wild. Jim has a bit more speed.

Neither of them has much luck, at least they told me down in Cincy that Jim was the jinx bird of the National league all summer as the Reds never batted much behind him. As for me, the boys has been batting around me only a trifle.

Jim pitches better than I write and I pitch better than he writes. Jim is a decided blonde, while I am a kind of a dapple gray since the serious opened up.

O, So Many Insults.

On acct of Jim's complexion he don't look so bad when he don't have a chance to shave. Jim got a lot of praise yesterday wile all I got was insults. For inst I was down in the hotel before the game and a Chicago man and a man from Cincy was trying to bet but they couldn't find no one to put it up with and finely the Chicago man spots me and introduces me to the Red bird and the latter said he wouldn't bet under such conditions.

But this family resemblance don't extend to all familys: For inst you take the Fisher boys. Ray is intelligent and teaches school in the winter but he don't have much luck. Then look at Bud.

Some Clever Repartee.

As for yesterday's game, they was a scribe downtown in the am that 2 men asked him who was going to pitch and the scribe said Cicotte and 1 of the men said you are crazy as Cicotte has such a sore arm that he cant wash the back of his neck so when we come out to the park this scribe told me about it and I said they wasnt nothing in the rules of the game that required Cicotte to wash the back of hsi neck or any of the newspaper men neither.

"Well," said the other expert. "The man was just speaking figurative and meant that Eddie had a sore arm."

"Well," I said, "if he has only got 1 sore arm he can still wash the back of his neck as I only use 1 even when I am going to a party."

"The back of your neck look like it," said the other expert.

What Is Differents?

"Yes," I said, "but what is the differents or not about Cicotte only having 1 sore arm as he only pitches with 1 arm."

"Yes you bum but that is the arm that the man said was sore."

That is the kind of clever repartee that goes on betwen the experts and no hard feelings on neither side.

But of course the 2 of us looked Cicotte over carefully when he got out there to pitch and we come to the conclusion that it must of been his left arm that was sore after all and if he practices hard he can learn to wash the back of his neck with his right, aspecially as he's born right-handed like a man should ought to be.

Case of Too Much Ring.

No, Gents, it wasn't no sore arm that beat Eddie yesterday, but just the other member of the Ring family finely getting some of the breaks, and the way I seen the game you couldn't make me believe that either of the 2 birds had any impediment in the old souper, as I have nicknamed it. Eddie had a sore heart when it was all over, but they's other seasons comeing and maybe another game in this serious, which don't look like it would end for a month as I look for another 1 of them 40 day rains to begin early this am.

Gents, do you remember when they decided to have the serious go 9 games instead of the conventional 7 and a whole lot of people said that was soup for the Reds as Mr. Gleason didn't have the pitchers to go 9 games. Well, now it looks like the disadvantage was vs. P. J. Moran as if the serious had of only been skedoodled to go 7 games why, by now he would of only had 1 more to win by now, where as on the other hand Mr. Gleason has still got the same pitchers he had to begin with.

No Back Talk to Umpires.

The only people therefore that gets the advantage is the athaletes themselfs as they get paid for 5 games instead of 4, and I beg to assure the public that the newspaper men wishes they had kept it 4 games as we don't even get the privilege of talking back to the umpire.

Today's game will be postponed till the 4th day of November and I hope before that time they will give me a rm. with bath.

CICOTTE'S BOOTS TURN SLAB DUEL TO REDS' FAVOR

Gleason's Men Helpless Before the Stuff of Pitcher Ring.

WEATHER TODAY

Showers and cooler; moderate winds, mostly northeast to north.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Cincinnati's red hosed athletes put themselves one game nearer the world's championship yesterday by trimming the White Sox, 2 to 0, in the fourth game of the world's greatest world's series. The Reds now have the advantage by a margin of three victories to one for the White Sox.

Absolute helplessness in the face of the stuff Jimmy Ring handed up to them was the chief cause of the downfall of the Gleasons. While every one is blaming Eddie Cicotte for losing the game because of his errors in the fifth inning, it is fitting to call attention to the fact Cicotte's pals could not have copped a victory in a thousand years the way they weren't hitting Ring.

Eddie There With Goods.

Eddie gave the lie to all the rumors that have had him relegated to the bushes because his arm was gone by pitching a sterling game which would have gone into extra innings if he had not gummed up the works himself by a pair of misplays in the fifth inning. Instead of being gone, his arm was too good, for he made a two base wild throw that paved the way to his own defeat, and followed it with a disastrous attempt to cut into a long throw to the plate, donating all the runs by which the Morans conquered.

It was unfortunate that Cicotte had to defeat himself, but there was no chance for him to beat the Reds without a run, and goodness knows how many innings it would have taken the Gleasons to count on Ring, the way he was baffling them yesterday.

Sox Chances Go Glimmering.

Cincinnati had just one chance to score off Cicotte, and improved it by combing him for a couple of timely hits. The White Sox had four opportunities to count and improved none of them. The support that Ring got did not compare with that given his predecessors during this series, except when the Gleasons threatened to score; then it was airtight. Cicotte's backing was perfect defensively.

Both hurlers were so completely masters of their opponents that they required little assistance. Most of the swats were pop flies on both sides. Weaver pulled the best play for the Sox in the seventh, when he stopped a nasty grounder from Duncan and peged the runner out at first. Schalk closed the visitors' ninth with a brilliant capture of a foul fly, which he picked off the heads of the rooters in the front row of the boxes. The rest of the work done by the Gleasons defensively was routine stuff.

Red Fielders Snuff Hits.

Rath and Kopf made the two most difficult plays for the Reds, and the former's capture of a Texas league fly by Weaver back of first base may have cut a lot of figure in the result. Although Ring whiffed members of the Sox wrecking crew in that round, Felsch peeled off a hit that would have scored Weaver if his tall fly had eluded Rath and the rest of the Reds who went after it.

Ring had the White Sox feeding out of his hands, as the two hits and a scratch credited to them demonstrates. He was not as steady as Cicotte, giving three bases on balls and hitting two batsmen, while not a man of the visitors walked, but when he was in rough going Ring was there or thereabouts every time.

Here's Bad News, Mates.

The Gleasons gave every indication of continuing the slump with which they were infected in Boston, and up to date they have scored one run in four games against the Reds by their own efforts. If they cannot recover the stride that carried them into the American league championship you may write your own ticket on their chances to cop four more games in the post season combat.

Outside of the fatal fifth inning three Reds reached first base, and none of them went farther. The cards were stacked against Cicotte in the fifth, and he failed to cut them.

One was down when Duncan hit a sharp bounder which squirted off Eddie's mitt a little ways toward third. He recovered the ball in plenty of time to get his man, but nervously hurried the peg and shot it wide of first base. When Schalk recovered the stray pill Duncan was on second. Kopf followed with a hard single to left. It was hit so sharply that Duncan had no chance to score, but stopped on third when Jackson fielded the ball cleanly and winged it toward the plate.

Error Is Break of Game.

For some reason Cicotte tred to sut in on the play with one hand, and deflected the ball just enough to keep Schalk from stopping it. While they were chasing it Duncan scored and Kopf reached second. Neale then hit a medium bolled fly to left which was good for two bases, because Jackson was playing close in for him. Kopf

ANALYSIS GIVES CICOTTE EDGE IN STEADY PITCHING

Despite that Eddie Cicotte was the losing pitcher in yesterday's world series contest, the analysis of balls and strikes showed him far steadier than Jimmy Ring, his successful Cincinnati opponent. Cicotte put over 33 strikes, one more than Ring, and 26 of his offerings were hit to fair territory, whereas 29 of Ring's were shot there by the home batsmen.

In called balls, moreover, Cicotte was away ahead. Umpire Nallin thought Eddie missed the plate 27 times, but he picked 44 of Ring's bad ones. Four of these were given purposely to Schalk in the second inning. In addition Ring gave two other passes while Cicotte issued none. Each pitcher was credited with two strikeouts. Two hit batsmen went on the wrong side of Ring's ledger.

Ring Depends on Speed.

That Ring was depending upon his fast ball to pull him out of ticklish situations was evident from the number of popups which the Chicago players hit. Sixteen times they hit the ball in the air to fair territory, and four times to foul. Ten of the Cincinnati attempts off Cicotte went over the infield and eight sailed into foul territory, half of the latter going over the stand. The White Sox cut the ball along the ground thirteen times, while Cincinnati's grounders numbered three more.

Cicotte's best innings were the eighth and ninth, in each of which he pitched only seven times. His worst was the fifth, when he hurled eighteen times and made his two fielding errors.

Six Balls Put Sox Out.

Ring's best round was the fourth, when three strikes, one ball, two flies, and one foul over the stand disposed of Chicago. His worst was the second inning, when he threw thirteen balls and six strikes and was found for two flies, two grounders, and a foul. He also had to do a lot of pitching in the eighth, but thirteen of his twenty offerings were over the plate in that session. Due largely to these bad innings Ring's total pitches were 111, higher than Cicotte's by seventeen.

In the Wake of the News

BY JACK LAIT.

SKIDDING WITH THE OLD GUARD.

CONTEMPLATE the prospect of a world championship in Cincinnati. A limousine body on a flivver, a two-karat stone on a k. m., a heavyweight crown on a hobo—all these have come to pass, too.

It seems a shame to give Cincinnati a Saturday night like that. And Cincinnatians are such hounds for free amusement.

The Cincy rooters were on hand en masse, all 6 of 'em. There were more Chicagoans waiting to get into one dining room at one time in Cincinnati than there were Cincinnatians at the games in Chicago.

Bitter? Yes, mates. What's the use of stalling about it.

IN RE PITCHERS.

The Reds had a dozen stars, the Sox but one;
So when Eddie ran amuck, the Sox were done.

Cicotte pitched a wonderful game—away.

You might call it pitch and toss off.

He had wonderful fielding support everywhere except in the middle of the diamond.

Murphy batted for him in the ninth; too bad some one couldn't have fielded for him in the fifth.

Quoting Ban Johnson on this series:

HOLEPROOF SOX.

Weaver-Risberg-Collins-Gandil: may their names be always said in reverence. When each swift blow came not one of them was ever missing. Playing like demons, they upheld the holy traditions of the White Sox impenetrable infield.

It was Yom Kippur. Yom Kippur is the day of sackcloth and ashes for all good Jews; this one went double for some good Christians.

Typical meaningless bright line: Roush mit 'em.

(WRITTEN BEFORE THE GAME.)

The result of the fourth contest demonstrates that ——.

Anyway, it shows that the dopesters cannot always be ——.

Moran's judgment in sending —— in to pitch was ——.

The —— played in their famous luck.

As exclusively predicted in this column, the —— never had a chance to —— with —— pitching.

Ring hit two Sox batters, and that's almost as many Sox batters as hit Ring.

Chicago motto: "I Will."
Cincy motto: "We Did."

Society item: Mr. Edward Cicotte, it is rumored, will retire from active participation at social functions during the remainder of the post-season events, having distinguished himself as a leader in several charitable movements on behalf of the Cincinnati poor.

EXPERT DOPE.

The score of the ninth game would have been Chicago 1, Cincinnati 0—had there been one.

Are we downhearted? No. Not at all. Please omit flowers.

MAY I NOT SUGGEST THAT—
The pawn of joy chortleth with whimsies, whereas the alibi possesses scant sense of humor; the boost maketh a swell paragraph, the rap runneth it a close second, the squawk resoundeth like unto the mischief in the ear of ye constant reader, but the salve smootheth nothing over and maketh the author to be all wet.

JACKSON FINDS HAIRPINS LUCKY

In the second inning, in which the Sox appeared more threatening than at any other period, Joe Jackson, who regards hairpins as the ultimate in bringing good luck, carried four new ones as he came to bat. The hairpins delivered a clean double to center. In the fourth Jackson hit to Rath, but his hairpins were still working and he camped on first while Rath was juggling the ball and making a hurried throw.

Huge Tarpaulin Covers Sox Field to Keep It Dry

As soon as the game was over a large waterproof tarpaulin was hauled on to the field and stretched over the diamond by a crew of twelve park attendants. This means that no matter how hard it rains the diamond will be kept dry and the game will be played today unless it is raining pitchforks at 2 o'clock.

CICOTTE LOSES, BUT "ARM GONE" PIPE BURNS OUT

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Eddie Cicotte, premier pitcher of the White Sox, went to the slab for the fourth game of the world's series against the Reds yesterday and proved to the whole world that all the rumors about his arm being bad were wrong. Although he didn't win the ball game he held the Reds to five hits and it was only because of his own fielding mistakes that the Reds were able to score on him in nine innings.

"They shouldn't have scored on Cicotte in forty innings," was the way Manager Gleason of the Sox put it after the game. "Maybe some people will think I am hollering," he continued, "but Cicotte was by far the better pitcher in his battle with Ring, and we should have gone into extra innings and you know any time the Sox go into extra innings they are going to win.

"Ring had a fast ball and we hit it often enough to have won the ball game, if we had had any break of luck. Every time we hit it hard it was right at some one. It was a downright shame for Cicotte to be beaten by that fellow. However, he was responsible for his own beating, and it was only because he rated the Reds too high.

"You remember that play when he intercepted a throw from Jackson to the plate? It was in the fifth, when they got the two runs. Duncan was on second and Kopf hit one to Jackson on the first round. Jackson pegged to the plate. Duncan stopped at third. But that wasn't all. Kopf stopped at first. There wasn't any occasion for Cicotte to intercept that throw. He did it to prevent Kopf from going to second. But Kopf had no more intention of going to second than I have of jumping in the lake."

"You see Cicotte figured he was playing against a ball club that would do things and he wasn't. Kopf stopped at first, Cicotte tried to intercept a throw when he wasn't set for it and the ball got away from him and bounded past Schalk to the stand. That play gave the Reds their two runs. Duncan, of course, came home then, and Kopf went to second, from where he scored when Neale hit one over Jackson's head for two bases. Jackson wouldn't have been in so close if Kopf hadn't been on second.

Play Everything Safe.

"What makes me mad is to be licked by a team that plays baseball that way. The Reds haven't taken a chance on a play in the whole series. They weren't taking any chances on that one, but Cicotte naturally supposed they would. That was why he tried to intercept the throw. If he had been a bum ball player, he wouldn't have tried it and we would have won in the end, because the Reds wouldn't have scored in that round and there never was another chance for them to score.

"The trouble with Cicotte yesterday was that he was too keen and alert, not that he had a sore arm and was all in. They got five hits off him all told, and none of them were worth anything. However, we didn't get many hits off Ring, even if we should have knocked the ball out of the lot."

National League Propaganda.

MILWAUKEE FANS IN FEDERAL NET; SCALP 2 TICKETS

The sale of world series tickets valued at $6.60 for the sum of $20 brought two Milwaukee ball fans under custody of internal revenue agents yesterday in the government drive against ticket scalpers who fail to stamp their tickets with name and address as a preliminary to turning over 50 per cent of their profits to Uncle Sam.

The two were picked up in the Palmer house and declared they had sold the tickets in order to get money for their trip home. They will be questioned with nine other alleged scalpers who are held for questioning by Col. O. G. Forrer of the revenue department. It is expected that all of the men held for failure to make ticket tax returns will be released upon payment of the proper tax.

CLAUDE TO HURL AGAINST RUETHER IN TODAY'S GAME

Walter Ruether, who pitched Cincinnati to a 9 to 1 victory in the first game of the series, and "Lefty" Williams, the Sox southpaw, probably will be the opposing pitchers in the fifth game of the series here this afternoon, it was indicated last night in statements by Managers Gleason and Moran. Williams faced the Redlegs in the second game at Cincinnati, losing, 4 to 2.

Did You Lose a Ticket? If So You Can Claim It

William Jackson is a White Sox fan. He saw the game yesterday, but is still cheerful. He found a ticket for Box 58 for today's game, and if the rightful owner will call him at South Chicago 177 this forenoon he can have the ticket. He's going to the game himself, and he wants the other fellow to go too.

raced home with the second run and the game was on ice. Capt. Collins disposed of the next two Reds with ease.

The Sox ought to have counted in the second round. Jackson gave them a chance with a Texas league double to left before anybody was out. Felsch sacrificed Mr. Joe to third, and he was there when the side went out. Gandil popped a fly to Groh. Risberg walked and stole second and Schalk was passed intentionally, filling the bases. Cicotte came within one ball of getting a pass, but was made to hit and rolled the side out.

Another Chance Fails.

and Rath gave the Gleasons another chance in the third. The former hit Collins with one out and Weaver's roller advanced Eddie. Rath fumbled Jackson's bounder, but Felsch was soft for Groh in the pinch. Groh made a two base wild throw on an easy grounder from Leibold in the fifth. There was only one out when it happened, but there was nothing doing thereafter. They chased Nemo to death on Collins' grounder, and Daubert disposed of Weaver without assistance. Schalk, first up in the seventh, was hit by a pitched ball and was on first base when the side went out.

NOTES of the GAME

While the fans were crowding into the grand stands at Comiskey park before the opening of the game, several young Sox followers without the necessary coin but with lots of energy climbed a rope and gained admittance before police officers closed this entrance. The lucky ones who got in shouted out plays to their friends on the outside.

* *

At the call "play ball" the wind shifted and a Chicago lake breeze blew across the park. Several thousand coatless fans became coated at once.

The lake breeze was so strong that it threw rocks at the occupants of the boxes. The rocks were a part of the gravel roofing on the grand stand.

* *

A Cincinnati fan, to help along the din, tooted a tin whistle that had a tune like the whistles the army drill sergeants used to "blow" the recruits out of the barracks.

The teams will return to Cincinnati tonight for the sixth contest tomorrow. The seventh game, if necessary, will be played in Cincinnati Tuesday.

Although a score of arrests were made at the baseball park and in hotel lobbies, ticket speculators continued to do a thriving business.

The crowd filled every inch of room in the park. Thousands were turned away. The total attendance for the four games is 123,290. The attendance for the two Chicago games is 63,489.

Morris Rath, the Reds' second baseman, played a sparkling game. With the bases filled in the second inning, Rath scooped up Cicotte's grounder, retiring the side. Then in the eighth Rath went to the left field foul line for Weaver's fly.

Schalk, the Sox catcher, brought the crowd to its feet when he picked Groh's foul fly out of a field box.

* *

The crowd stood up and stretched at the start of the "lucky" seventh. But the yells for Sox runs were fruitless. Schalk, the first up, got on base as a result of being hit, but his mates couldn't advance him.

* *

When the eighth opened the crowd in the left field bleachers started a miniature "snowstorm" by tearing programs into bits and scattering the pieces to the wind, which carried them over the playing field.

When Eddie Cicotte came to bat in the last of the fifth inning after his two errors had started the Reds toward their two runs, he was given a rousing welcome from the loyal fans to show they still remembered kindly the hurler who had made the American league pennant possible.

* *

In the sixth inning Jackson, Felsch, Gandil, and Risberg in succession hit the ball right on the nose. Gandil's went through second for a single. The others were right at a waiting Red.

GIVE REDS FLAG, DOPE BY EVERS AFTER SOX LOSE

BY JOHNNY EVERS.

Written for the United Press.]

Pat Moran's Redlegs won the world championship yesterday. The series isn't over yet, I know, but the Reds practically cinched it when they beat Cicotte for the second time and took a game that gives them a 3 to 1 lead over the Sox. The Reds do not have to win tomorrow. Of course they will try their best, but the game really is of no vital importance, the way the series now stands.

Pat Moran will show another pitcher tomorrow who may surprise the Chicago fans. I mean Hod Eller. He is aching for a chance. He is just as good as the other Red pitchers, and I look for him to have no trouble tomorrow against Claude Williams, who the Reds have already beaten.

LOGANS DEFEAT ALL-STAR TEAM IN 3 TO 1 CLASH

"Gibby" Nelson's pitching was too much for the Chicago league Stars and the Logan Squares downed the barnstormers, 3 to 1, at Logan Square park. Nelson fanned eleven men and forced in the visitors' only run in the ninth by passing Stack. Two hits and three errors in the second inning netted the home club two runs and the squeeze play score one in the fourth session. Bartel and Ginger did the bulk of the hitting. Score:

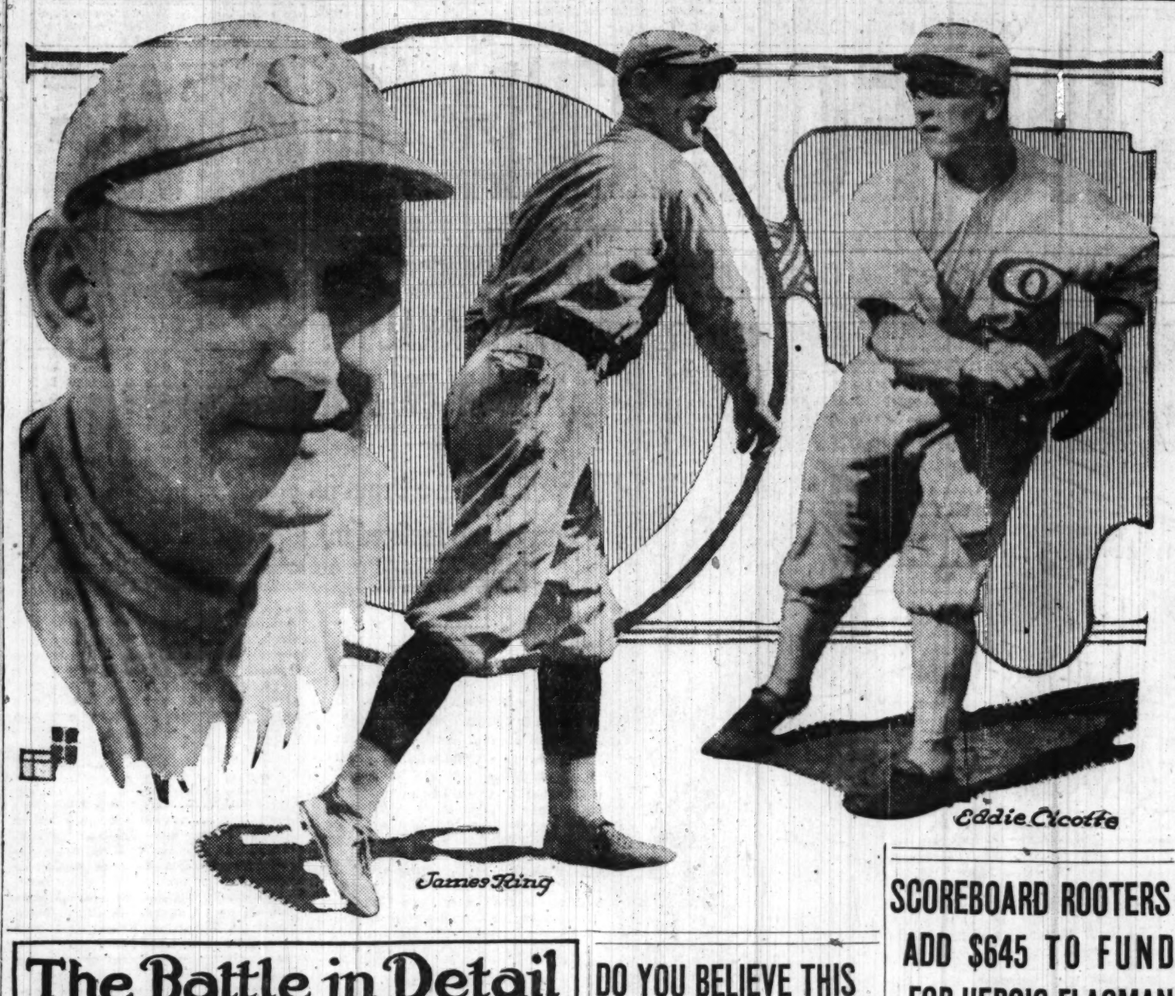
VICTOR AND VANQUISHED IN FOURTH SERIES BATTLE

"Close Up" and Action of James Ring, Who Proved More Than the White Sox Batters Could Handle. Eddie Cicotte Equaled His Opponent so Far as Pitching Was Concerned, but Brought About His Own Downfall on Errors.



The Battle in Detail

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

FIRST INNING.

Cincinnati—Cicotte's first shot was a strike and Rath fouled off the second one for strike two. He then took a low one on the inside for a ball and poked the next one over third base for a single. The call on Daubert was one ball and no strikes when he slashed a hot one to Eddie Collins close to second base and a lightning double play resulted, E. Collins to Risberg to Gandil. Groh wound up the attack with a low fly which Risberg backed up and caught at the end of the grass. No runs, one hit.

Chicago—Leibold fouled off the first two for strikes. Then took two on the outside for two balls, and finished with a pop fly to Daubert. E. Collins took one on the outside for a ball, then fouled one for a strike, then popped out to Rath. Weaver's best was a boost to Neale. No runs.

SECOND INNING.

Cincinnati—Roush fouled one off for a strike and hit the next one for a fly to Jackson. Duncan took a healthy swing at the first ball and missed, then fouled one off for strike two, winding up with a popup to E. Collins. Kopf fouled off two strikes and had a ball when he fanned. No runs.

Chicago—Jackson took a healthy cut at the first ball, but missed, and it was strike one. The next one he looped over into a safe spot in right center and stretched it to a double. Felsch sacrificed, Ring to Rath, putting Joe on third. Gandil fouled the first one for a strike and took one on the inside for a ball and wound up with a pop to Groh. Risberg got the call of three and two, then drew a pass to first. Risberg stole second, Wingo dropping the ball and not even making the peg. Schalk walked, filling the bases. Ring curved the first one over for a strike on Cicotte and followed with a low one to the outside for a ball. The next was a low curve for ball two. A fast one in the middle made it two and two. And another high one made it three and two. Cicotte then hit a sharp one toward right field, but Rath came over in time to retire Eddie at first. No runs, one hit.

THIRD INNING.

Cincinnati—Neale bounced the first pitched ball to Weaver and was thrown out to Gandil. With one strike and nothing, Wingo dropped a Texas leaguer behind second for a single. Ring fouled the first two off for two strikes and wound up by fanning. Wingo tried to steal, but was an easy out, Schalk to E. Collins. No runs, one hit.

Chicago—With a call of one and one, Leibold drove to deep right, but Neale got back in time for the catch. E. Collins was hit on the hip by the first pitched ball and went to first base. Weaver grounded out to Daubert, E. Collins moving to second. Rath fumbled Jackson's roller and Joe was safe at first on the error, E. Collins moving to third. Felsch hit the first one to Groh and was thrown out to Daubert. No runs, one error.

FOURTH INNING.

Cincinnati—Rath had two strikes and no balls when he hit a low fly over third into Jackson's hands. Daubert bounded one in front of the plate and was out, Schalk to Gandil. Groh's liner was straight into E. Collins' hands. No runs.

Chicago—Gandil fouled the first one for a strike and popped the next one for a foul to Daubert. Risberg lifted to Neale. Kopf ran back of third and took Schalk's pop fly. No runs.

FIFTH INNING.

Cincinnati—Roush bounded one ten feet in front of the plate and was out, Schalk to Gandil. Cicotte knocked down Duncan's bounder and recovered in time to have nailed his man at first, but his throw was bad and went to the grandstand, letting Duncan reach second. Kopf hit a shary single to left, which Jackson took on the first hop, and Duncan stopped at third. Jackson made his peg to the plate and Cicotte tried to intercept the throw to prevent Kopf going to second, but the ball caromed off his glove and ducked past Schalk to the grandstand, Duncan scoring, while Kopf made second on the error. Neale doubled over Jackson's head and Kopf scored. E. Collins threw out Wingo. Ring also was thrown out by E. Collins. Two runs, two hits, two errors.

Chicago—Cicotte bounded to Daubert and was out at first, Daubert to Ring. With the call of three and two, Leibold rolled one down to Groh, and reached second when the latter's wild throw went to the grandstand. E. Collins bounced to Groh and Leibold was trapped between second and third, Groh to Rath. E. Collins had to stay at first. Weaver grounded out to Daubert. No runs, one error.

SIXTH INNING.

Cincinnati—Risberg threw out Rath. E. Collins threw out Daubert. Groh died, Weaver to Gandil. No runs.

Chicago—Jackson hit a red hot one which took a bounce into Kopf's hands, and he was thrown out at first. Duncan ran back within ten feet of the left field fence and grabbed Felsch's hard drive. Gandil singled to center after getting the call of three and two. Neale caught Risberg's hard drive close to the right field foul line. No runs, one hit.

SEVENTH INNING.

Cincinnati—Roush was easy for E. Collins and Gandil. Weaver made a great stop of Duncan's hot one and threw it to Gandil in time to get him by fifteen feet. Risberg threw out Kopf. No runs.

Chicago—Schalk had the call of one and one when Ring hit him in the back with a pitched ball and he went to first. Rath backed up and took Cicotte's pop fly. Leibold's best was an easy fly to Roush. E. Collins bounced to Groh and was thrown out to Daubert. No runs.

EIGHTH INNING.

Cincinnati—Neale tapped to Cicotte and was tossed out to Gandil. Wingo hit the first ball for a single to center. Ring bunted right to Cicotte and a double play resulted, Cicotte to Risberg to Gandil. No runs, one hit.

Chicago—Weaver popped one back of first base and Rath made a great running catch on the foul line. Jackson struck out. Felsch singled to left. Gandil was called out on strikes. No runs, one hit.

NINTH INNING.

Cincinnati—Rath fouled to Schalk. Jackson ran close to the left foul line and captured Daubert's low fly. Groh fouled to Schalk on the very edge of the box seats. No runs.

Chicago—Risberg tapped to Ring, who tossed to Daubert. Schalk drew a base on balls. Murphy batted for Cicotte and hit the first ball on a line right into Roush's hands. Leibold hit the first ball on a line into Groh's hands. No runs.

DO YOU BELIEVE THIS NINE IN BARDS' ROOM BEST EVER IN GAME?

BY JOE FARRELL.

[President of Woodland Bards.]

A few words regarding the Woodland Bards and their guests from every nook and corner of the globe will be more refreshing than the details of the ball game.

Malachi Kittredge, former star backstop of the Colts during the régime of "Cap" Anson, had a few remarks to make regarding the personnel of his party. He claims that in the palmy days of baseball that there was not a team that could beat the following aggregation, who were in the Bards' room around one table after the game:

Earl Moore, pitcher; Malachi Kittredge, catcher; Fred Tenney, first base; Johnny Evers, second base; Joe Tinker, shortstop; Charley O'Leary, third base; Jimmy Ryan, Jimmy Sheckard, Jimmy McAleer, and Tris Speaker, outfielders.

Sweitzer as Toastmaster.

"Bob" Sweitzer was appointed toastmaster and welcomed the entire party, and as far as possible allowed them the privileges and the key to the Woodland Bards' room.

"Pep" Hays and "Ed" Farrell are returning to Cincinnati at the request of Sam Loftus, who refuses to go unless they accompany him.

George Wright, who played with the Cincinnati Reds when they went through the season without a defeat, way back in the 60s, was present and talked old time baseball with Billy Furlong, who played with "Commy" and Tom Loftus forty-three years ago in Dubuque.

Farrell Makes Prediction.

As president of the Woodland Bards and in view of the fact that I have 200 people to take care of on the return trip, I will conclude this article with the prediction that we will take tomorrow's game and the two in Cincinnati.

SCOREBOARD ROOTERS ADD $645 TO FUND FOR HEROIC FLAGMAN

The largest crowd which has watched THE TRIBUNE'S electric scoreboard since the series started, turned out yesterday at Orchestra hall. Incidentally, the throng swelled the fund for the family of John Miller, the Hubbard Woods flagman, by $645.50.

Today the electric scoreboard will be operated in Woods' theater, instead of Orchestra hall. The admission will be 50 cents, with 5 cents war tax. Tomorrow the board will be reinstalled at Orchestra hall, to remain until the close of the series.

Big Crowd Sees the Board.

Rabid rooting was done by the mob around THE TRIBUNE'S free open air board on the roof of the Colonnade building, 724 South Michigan avenue. The bugs in Grant park had their appetite whetted for victory on Friday, and exhorted the manikins to "do something." Following is the statement of the day's addition to the Miller fund:

RECEIPTS.

1,992 tickets at 50 cents each	$ 996.00

DISBURSEMENTS.

Orchestra hall rent	$300.00
Western Union	23.50
Pipe organist	15.00
Amusement license	10.00
Printing tickets	2.00
	350.00
Net proceeds of day to Miller fund	645.50
From three previous games	1,512.00
Total to John Miller fund	$2,157.50

Tribune Operators Busy.

"Darn th' luck," said Bill Smith, Chicago baseball fan, "couldn't get to th' game, couldn't get to a ticker or a scoreboard. Wish I could get the score."

"Same here," said John Jones. "Let's call up THE TRIBUNE an' ask 'em. They'll give it to us. They always have th' dope on everythin'."

So Bill and John called Central 100 and obtained the score. So did some 25,000 Bills and Johns from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock.

A dozen operators handled the calls at THE TRIBUNE'S private switchboard and every operator averaged thirty calls a minute—sometimes more.

"We handled more calls over this board in three hours," said Miss Anna Garrow, chief operator, "than many good sized cities handle in twenty-four hours."

GIANTS, 3; BOONE, 0.

Boone, Ia., Oct. 4.—The Union Giants defeated the Coopers, 3 to 0. This makes seventy-one games won, twenty-six lost, and three tied for the Giants this season. Score:

Giants	0	0	0	3	0	0	0	0	—3	5	2

CICOTTE LOSES, BUT "ARM GONE" PIPE BURNS OUT

Eddie Hurls Great Game and Deserves Win, Thinks Gleason.

proved to the fans there was nothing wrong with Cicotte by sending him in for a great game, there was considerable consternation among the crowd when they saw Eddie go out to warm up for battle. It seems that National league propaganda had been spread about town that Cicotte was on the bum—that his arm was sore, and that he couldn't possibly pitch, and that the Reds had knocked him off the slab in the first game down in Cincinnati because of that condition.

At noon yesterday one prominent fan in the loop asked the writer who was going to pitch. He was told that Gleason had stated that Cicotte would be on the mound sure.

"Why, he can't even wash the back of his neck," was the reply from the fan.

"What makes you think that?" he was asked.

Tinker Helping Moran.

"Why, Joe Tinker was in here and told me, and Joe was down in Cincinnati and saw him pitch there and was around the hotel with him and I figured he knew."

The only answer that could be given the fan was that Joe Tinker, once a prominent National leaguer, appeared to be one of the members of the Pat Moran board of strategy. At least he was with the Reds before the first game was played, even taking a hand in the final practice of Moran's men.

There was no question in the minds of the crowd after the game was over that Cicotte would at least have been able to wash the back of his neck.

While all was gloom in the camp of the Sox after the game, there was absolute confidence in the quarters of Moran's men. They have won three games and need only two more to clinch it. The Sox have won one game and need four to win the championship. Under those conditions a team 50 per cent weaker than its rival is likely to go through. No one believes the Reds 50 per cent weaker than the Sox.

"Nothing to It"—Moran.

"My pitchers have stood up just as I expected them to go," said Moran last night. "I have yet one or two new ones to spring on the Sox, and may use Hod Eller next. If Gleason sends a left hander to the slab, I will use Eller. If he sends in James or some other right hander, I intend to use Ruether, who won the first game for us. You see he is all set for another ball game and howling for a chance to get it.

"I can't see anything to it now but that we will win out. My players have played great baseball and are keyed up to high pitch. I don't think it would make much difference what pitcher I send to the slab for the next one. The Sox haven't been able to hit. Good pitching will stop a good ball club and that is what has happened."

Sox Might Begin Hitting.

It looks now as if Moran can breeze along and take a chance on most anything and that Gleaeson must use all the brain power as well as all the field ability his men have. In no game of the series have the Sox displayed their real hitting strength—the kind of hitting strength they showed during the regular American league season.

If they should suddenly come to life and tear into things as they did into the Cleveland club and the Detroit club around the time of Labor day, the advantage the Reds have would be wiped out in a jiffy. If they don't do that, there isn't much chance for them. Boss Gleason thinks they'll do it. Boss Moran thinks they won't.

ALL NIGHT FANS DRIVEN AWAY BY HEAVY DOWNPOUR

Baseball fans of the dyed-in-the-wool brand, to the number of nearly 400, were in line at White Sox park for the opening of the sale of bleacher and pavilion tickets this morning for the fifth game of the world series, when, shortly after 7 o'clock last night, a downpour of rain broke. The waiters fled to shelter while the thunder shower raged, but two hours later, when it had abated to a light but steady drizzle, a few of them resumed their places near the ticket windows.

The infield of the playing field was covered with a large tarpaulin, which prevented it being soaked, and only further rains tomorrow will prevent a game.

SEE GAME TODAY, FANS!

THE TRIBUNE'S electric scoreboard, which was operated at Orchestra hall since the opening of the world's series, will be transferred to the Woods theater for the game today. Tomorrow it will go back to Orchestra hall until the series is ended.

RECORD BETTING CAUSE OF ALARM; STARTS SCANDAL

Heavy Wagering Brings About Unpleasant Comment.

Betting on the present world's series between White Sox and Reds has been heavier than in any previous post-season clash. It has been so heavy as to give concern to those interested in the sport, not for anything that has happened as yet, but because of the gossip or scandal which might some time develop.

While those who have built up baseball would prefer to see no wagering upon the results of games or series of games, they see no special harm in the customary small bets between individuals—since betting is the favorite American way of backing an opinion.

Cause of Unpleasant Comment.

Even wagers running into four figures carry no danger where they are placed between individuals. It is when one man or a syndicate makes up a big pool to be wagered wherever it can be placed that a condition arises where unpleasant comment may be aroused.

In the present series seemingly unlimited amounts of money to be placed upon the Reds appeared from the same source in Cincinnati after the first game. Much of it was covered by the Woodland Bards to their sorrow. Commissioners were in the leading hotels asking all comers for a wager. After the first game they began to offer liberal odds. It did not seem to be Cincinnati money, for followers of the Reds appeared chary of backing their choices at anything like natural odds.

Starts Many Rumors.

This sudden influx of coin started several unfounded rumors which fortunately did not gain general circulation. But it suggested the danger of such possibilities and what could follow from the idle talk common after nearly every big sporting event.

The difficulty of fixing a baseball game, aside from the honesty of the players and the almost sure detection even if it were possible to find one black sheep, is so great as to be almost negligible.

This heavy betting, however, is a danger sign which the national commission recognizes. Plans already are under way to supply a remedy.

PAL MOORE TO GO BACK TO LONDON FOR MORE BOUTS

Would Fight Wilde Again or Any One Else; Likes Sportsmanship.

BY RAY PEARSON.

It may interest boxing fans to know that Pal Moore, the little Memphis bantamweight, likes Great Britain so well that he is going to return there to box. Moore is the exception to the rule in this respect, for a great many American pugilists who have gone to England and engaged in bouts there have returned to this country, some minus their titles, others with the reputation of having finished on the losing end.

The fact that Moore, who isn't the bantamweight champion, but who is good enough to be a title holder, met the same fate as several other United States scrappers in London doesn't seem to have disturbed Pal in the least, for he seems to have made up his mind to go right back and show the Britishers they were mistaken when Jimmy Wilde was given the decision in the recent twenty round mixup.

To Fight French Champion.

If ever there was a philosopher and a "wise bird" in this game of fisticuffs, it is Pal. A few days ago he was in Chicago and spilled a bit of conversation to the writer which clearly indicates this. Moore is a pretty smart little piece of fighting machinery, but he has a cranium which matches well with his scrapping skill. He is fully capable of thinking things out for himself outside of the ring, just as he does inside the confines of the ropes.

"You bet your life I'm going back to London and fight," said Moore. "I don't care whom they pick for my opponents. I'll take on any of the boys they select. All they have to do is to offer me suitable terms and it's me aboard the big boat. I've already practically closed for one bout in London with the Frenchman Le Duc. This kid is supposed to be a great fighter and is the champion of France.

English Great Sportsmen.

"I'll cross over in a few months because, I'll tell you the truth, I like to fight in London. They are great sportsmen there, and boxing is a recognized institution. It is an establishment that has advanced much farther than in this country. The best people in England can be found seated at the ringside at the big shows. These shows are orderly conducted affairs which draw wonderful crowds.

"It is not generally known in America that my contest with Willie drew a gate of $128,000 at the Olympic club. I don't know of any championship bout between a couple of bantamweights that ever drew that much money before. It certainly shows how they go in for boxing in London."

Moore doesn't say that it's because of the chance to cop big money that he wants to battle abroad, but that isn't hard to deduce. He got $15,000 for contesting with Wilde, and while he doesn't believe the decision which favored the Britisher was just, he is philosopher enough to figure out where he didn't lose any prestige by that defeat and still can draw big coin over there.

No Squawk to Make.

"Oh, what's the difference if the referee did give Wilde the decision over me?" asked Moore. "He is an Englishman and perhaps he had something coming to him for that reason. But I'm not letting out any holler on that account. He is a good boxer and a nice boy, too. I'm not inclined to holler anyway, for I've been shaded before, but they don't like a fellow over in London who kicks when he is adjudged a loser.

"I never cared much myself for a fellow who hollered after losing, so perhaps the Englishmen were a bit surprised when I accepted the verdict against me without tearing the roof off the Olympic club.

"That's one reason why they want me to return to London to box, so I'm going to show them, and at the same time pick up a considerable amount of money. Perhaps I'll scrap Wilde again. That's up to Wilde, and he can meet me any time he is ready. But I don't think that the decision will favor Wilde when we clash the next time."

Ritchie Bitter Against English.

One of the American fighters who never could stand for England after he fought there was Willie Ritchie, the Californian who was separated from his lightweight title when he met Freddie Welsh in London. Ritchie never will forgive the referee who decided that Welsh had beaten him.

PREP FOOTBALL GAMES

STAVING off repeated onslaughts by Hyde Park, in which Capt. Roy Simmons, former United States marine, was conspicuous, Loyola academy battled the county high school champions of 1917 to a scoreless tie before 4,500 cheering "prep" rooters on the Loyola campus yesterday. Neither team was able to progress closer than the foe's twenty yard line, the ball fluctuating in midfield most of the time.

In the first period, Loyola came closest to threatening, when Bowe recovered a Hyde Park fumble, and the Catholics worked the ball to the Blue and White twenty yard zone. But for the work of Tackle Bichl, who backed up both sides of the line, Loyola would have been in a plight against the determined line onslaughts of the high schoolers. Lineup:

LAKE VIEW DIVIDES.

Lake View teams made their debut on the home football field—Cubs' ball park—and won and lost against teams from the extreme south side. The heavies surprised Morgan Park academy by their sustained attack, winning, 12 to 0. Peterson figured in several long runs.

The light weights were beaten by East Chicago, 12 to 9, after the latter kept up a machinelike attack through the second half. In the first half Lake View led, 6 to 0, and Frische added three more points with a thirty yard drop kick. Lineup:

NEW TRIER, 0; LANE, 0.

New Trier High and Lane Tech heavies battled to a scoreless tie at Kenilworth, the game being the first of the season for each. Lane was on New Trier's five yard line one first down early in the game but the home boys held and Winnikie punted to safety. Thereafter his long punts kept New Trier out of danger. Britz was Lane's stellar performer, tearing off a couple twenty yard gains. Burrows was conspicuous in New Trier's attempts at offense.

LANE, 7; WAUKEGAN, 0.

Waukegan, Ill., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Lane lightweights football players of Chicago walloped Waukegan High's minor weight eleven, 7 to 0. Bowles scoring in the last five minutes and kicking goal. Lane played a clean cut game, while Waukegan's numerous fumbles were expensive.

DOWNERS GR., 10; NAPERV., 6.

Downers Grove beat Naperville High, 10 to 6, in a tight game on the winner's gridiron. The visitors got the jump, a clever pass, Sigmund to Williams, netting a touchdown in the first quarter. The home team concentrated the winning punch into the last quarter, when Singleberry booted a thirty yard drop kick, and Phelps plunged over the line.

OAK PARK TEAMS VICTORS AT ELGIN

Elgin, Ill., Oct. 4.—The Oak Park teams scored a double victory over Elgin High, the heavyweight game being one sided, 35 to 0, while the lightweights fought hard, 13 to 6. Elgin could not check Steger from cutting through the line and around the ends in the major game, and the Oak Park star was ably seconded by Caruso. The latter kicked five goals.

Helle of Oak Park scored through the line in the first quarter of the lightweight game, but the visitors fumbled and Bolyer alertly converted the opening into a tying touchdown in the third period. Elgin was on Oak Park's five yard line in the last period, but could not score, and after taking the ball, the visitors carried the ball the length of the field, Mills tossing a thirty yard pass to Hill, who scored. Helle kicked goal. Lineups:

EVANSTON High showed it had a team of scoring power, and one that will have to be reckoned with in the Suburban league race, defeating Lindblom, the newest city high school, 52 to 0, at Northwestern field yesterday morning. TWO FOR LA GRANGE.

La Grange High won a double header on the home grounds. The heavies took a 6 to 0 battle from Senn when, at the start of the second half, two passes, followed by end runs by Hey and Hattendorf, put the ball in scoring distance, and Cossitt and Hey plunged the ball over. Senn pressed the play most of the time, but fumbles and penalties were costly. La Grange used open field tactics almost entirely. Open plays also distinguished the onslaught of the La Grange lightweights, who downed Crane Tech, 31 to 0, scoring the first time two minutes after the opening whistle. Sprague starred.

SENN, 26; PARKER, 6.

The lightweight team of Senn, which will not play in the City league, sprung a surprise by triumphing over the 1918 league champion team, Parker, at Ogden park, 26 to 6. A succession of long runs and forward passes swept Parker to defeat after Senn assumed the offensive in the second quarter. Lineup:

ST. IGNATIUS, 18; TILDEN, 0.

Cerney's open field runs and plunges by Summerville and Cronin proved good ground gainers for St. Ignatius, and played a large part in the victory of 18 to 0 gained over Tilden. The game was on the Catholics' field. Tilden's defense crumbled against the hard attacks.

PROVISO WINS AND LOSES.

Proviso won and lost on its own lot at Maywood. The heavyweights dropped a hard fought, scrappy game to West Aurora, 7 to 0, but the light conquered the West Aurora midgets, 18 to 7.

The home team lost two players for slugging, and one, Capt. Ziebel, who was knocked out. Ziebell's injury came in the third period and required a shifting of the whole team. The regular center was pulled out of his position, and the substitute immediately sent a pass careening over the heads of the backfield, an Aurora man capturing the loose ball and paving the way for the touchdown. Proviso made a valiant effort to tie, but was held on the ten yard line in the last period. Toward the end Ziebell hobbled back on the field again.

Aurora got the jump in the minor game, Robotan first scoring after a march up the field in six minutes.

Englewood Eleven Swamps Ottawa Team by 28 to 6

Ottawa, Ill., Oct. 4.—Englewood High of Chicago beat Ottawa, 28 to 6. Folz of the visitors ran the ball forty yards for a touchdown right after the kickoff. Bryson caught an Ottawa punt and ran seventy yards for another spectacular score in the second period. On a pass, Folz to Reynolds, on the locals' forty yard line, the latter scored again, making the count 21 to 0 for the half. Bryson scored again in the fourth quarter on a line play. Ottawa's goal came in the last period on a forward pass.

TIGERS' ELEVEN RIPS HOLES INTO TRINITY, 28 TO 0

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 4.—Princeton defeated Trinity today, 28 to 0. Trinity presented a light and weak lineup and the Tigers' attack, once under way, tore through the Trinity line almost at will. Trinity made only one first down. Strubing and Trimble were the individual stars of the game. Strubing scored one touchdown after a sixty yard run.

Player Breaks a Leg as Pitt Beats Geneva, 33 to 0

Beaver Falls, Pa., Oct. 4.—Daugherty, a substitute end for the University of Pittsburgh football team and a veteran of the world war, suffered a broken leg just before the close of the game today, which resulted in victory for Pitt over Geneva college, 33 to 0.

LAKE FOREST, 27; MILWAUKEE, 12.

Lake Forest academy showed an all around offense and defeated Riverside High of Milwaukee, 27 to 12, at Lake Forest.

CAPT. HARLEY LEADS BUCKEYES' ATTACK ON WESLEYAN, 38-0

Columbus, O., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Ohio State defeated Ohio Wesleyan, 38 to 0, on Ohio field this afternoon in the opening game of the season. Lax playing and frequent fumbling on the goal line by Ohio State in the last half prevented the Buckeyes from doubling the 38 to 0 score. Captain Harley led his men for three quarters before retiring, in which time he showed that he was the same "Chic" of old.

Thirty-one of Ohio's points were made in the first half, when Harley's open field running and passing, together with Willaman's stellar plunging, put the ball over with much ease. Lineup:

BADGERS SMASH RIPON TEAM TO DEFEAT, 37 TO 0

Madison, Wis., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Wisconsin ran through Ripon for a 37 to 0 victory on a soggy, slippery field. The Badgers started their march in the rain, scoring a touchdown a few minutes after play began. The defensive work on both sides was ragged, while a wet ball caused frequent fumbling.

Wisconsin's backs showed lots of drive, digging through the slow Ripon line for long and consistent gains. Full Back Jacobi led the scoring with three touchdowns and two goals. Davey at quarter made several spectacular returns on punts, and in the second quarter dropped a field goal from the thirty-five yard line.

PURDUE PLAYED TO 14-14 TIE BY FRANKLIN TEAM

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Purdue's crippled eleven was able merely to tie Franklin college in the season's opener, 14 to 14. The Boilermakers found the visitors a formidable aggregation, which outweighed them, and possessed a fighting spirit that would have brought victory but for many penalties assessed against the overzealous forwards for offside.

IOWA DEFEATS NEBRASKA WITH STAR BROTHERS

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 4.—In a driving rainstorm the University of Iowa defeated Nebraska here today, 18 to 0, in the first football game either has played this season. All the scoring except two points was in the first half and was due largely to the work of Glen and Aubrey Devine, brothers.

HARVARD TAKES 17-0 GAME FROM BOSTON COLLEGE

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 4.—Two Harvard marches, one for forty-five yards and one for twenty, across Boston college's goal line for touchdowns, and a field goal by R. Horween from the twenty yard line gave the Crimson a victory of 17 to 0 today. Except for a few minutes in the third period, when a long and cleverly thrown forward pass placed Boston on Harvard's eighteen yard line, the offense of the visitors was entirely on their side of the field.

NAVY SMOTHERS N. CAROLINA, 49-0

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 4.—Navy smothered the football eleven of North Carolina State college 49 to 0 in the opening game of the season today.

The visitors were hopelessly outclassed from the start to the final whistle, and at no stage did they threaten to score. On the other hand, the Middies forced the fighting all the way and crossed the opposing goal line on seven occasions, and in each instance the try for goal was successful. They accomplished this largely through line smashing and off tackle plays. Lineup:

SHIVERICK STARS IN 9 TO 0 VICTORY OF CORNELL TEAM

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Cornell won the season's football opener from Oberlin, 9 to 0. Excessive heat necessitated frequent rests and substitutions, and almost the entire Cornell first team was taken out at the close of the first half.

Capt. Friz Shiverick, quarter back, playing for the first time since 1917, was the star of the game. He kicked a difficult field goal from the twenty yard line in the first quarter. In the second he broke through on a play off right tackle, shook off all tacklers and ran sixty-seven yards for a touchdown. Davis, Shuler and Mayer also performed creditably in the Cornell backfield.

Brown Beats Bowdoin at Providence, 7 to 0

RALLY NEAR END WINS 14-0 GAME FOR NOTRE DAME

Long Runs by Bergman and Gipp Help Defeat Kalamazoo.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Playing a loose game with the exception of a few minutes in the latter part of the third period and early in the fourth quarter, Notre Dame defeated Kalamazoo college today on Cartier field, 14 to 0.

Although the hot weather may have been partly responsible for Notre Dame's ragged play, the team played poor football throughout the greater part of the game. The locals had a decided advantage in weight, but the interference was ragged and the linemen failed to charge with the aggressiveness of former Notre Dame forwards.

Losers Put Up Good Fight.

The little Kalamazoo eleven put up a plucky game and played Notre Dame to a standstill in two and one-half periods. With the ball in midfield, Gipp, the Notre Dame back, got loose and carried the oval to the visitors' ten yard line. Drives off the tackles placed the ball on the one yard line and then Capt. Bahan, quarter back, drove through center for the first score. He added another point by kicking goal.

Early in the fourth quarter Bergman, the Notre Dame right half back, ran fifty yards for a touchdown. The run was made possible by a perfectly executed double backward pass, combined with Bergman's good judgment in cutting back through the field after he passed the scrimmage line.

Kalamazoo Captain Hurt.

Capt. Strome played a stellar game for Kalamazoo and had to leave the game in the fourth period with a badly bruised elbow. Casteel, McKay, and G. Thompson also played good football for the visitors.

YALE WINS, 20-0, FROM 'Y' ELEVEN

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 4.—Yale opened its football season today by defeating Springfield Y. M. C. A. college, 20 to 0. A final goal by Braden from the forty yard line was the outstanding play, although a similar score by Thorne Murphy, substitute quarter back, from the thirty yard line, was made at a more difficult angle.

19TH HOLE AT THIS CLUB MUST BE BUTCHER SHOP

Every Stroke in Skokie's Harvest Home Event Blow at H. C. L.

BY JOE DAVIS.

These are the days of the harvest home festivals at the golf clubs, and at Skokie yesterday the members, who are game sports, battled for "birds and bacon."

Kenneth D. Steere, the club's eminent statistician, had a chance to cackle when, after being tied seven times for the best choice score, he pulled off a victory which netted him two pullets. Some victory, with spring-ers hitting around the 35 cent mark. His winning total was 14.

M. Fleming, who shot a score of 22 on four long holes, brought down a brace of ducks, while G. F. Ernshaw, with a low net card of 90—20—70, took home futurist bacon, yet in pig form

Two Fowl Victories.

Irving J. Shuart with second low net, 99—75—74, ended the festival goose, while H. B. Williams banished worry regarding his Thanksgiving din-ner by getting low gross of 83 and securing a turkey.

In the semi-finals for the Autumn trophy P. N. Cutler defeated S. A. Will-marth, 3 and 2, and Gordon Sibley defeated C. E. Caveness, 3 and 1. The harvest home dinner, dance, and en-tertainment drew practically every member.

RIVERSIDE.

Goodly margins determined the matches in the first round for the President's cup at Riverside, while two home green finishes featured the Vice President's cup competi-tion. The results:

President's cup—E. A. Ferguson defeated Gordon Gould, 4 and 3; Walter Hellyer de-feated Gerald Bowen, 3 and 2; Henry Faurot Jr. defeated H. H. Belding, 3 and 2; H. K. Allen defeated A. M. Reed, 3 and 2.

Vice President's cup—W. S. Burling de-feated W. H. Merritt, 3 and 2; H. Faurot Sr. defeated M. H. Hurt, 1 up; H. Babson de-feated F. K. Salb, 1 up; H. E. Reagan won by default from M. G. Becker.

EDGEWATER.

A. J. Kasper Jr. won the ball sweepstakes in class A, with 86—7—79, while Sam Arnot took second prize by notching 95—13—82.

In class B, Fred Klein, 100—18—82, and W. M. Kinney, 95—12—83, were the first and second prize winners.

The chattels in class C lodged with E. J. Hayes, 105—25—76, and E. M. Kerwin, 108—23—85.

MAYWOOD.

In the finals for the club championship E. A. Schultz defeated W. E. Maas, 5 up and 4. E. W. Belding won the deciding contest in the second fight by holing a long putt on the home green, which meant de-feat for L. L. Davis. Third flight final hon-ors were won by E. Appleton, who disposed of H. E. Murphy, 2 and 1.

SOUTH SHORE.

Finishing 2 up, C. P. Thompson and W. M. Wilson tied in the ball sweepstakes bogey at South Shore.

EVANSTON.

W. D. Hess and Frank Swirles tied at 87 for the low gross prize at Evanston. Dr. H. Combe, 88—10—78, and G. B. Eich, 102—24—78, tied for low net, J. M. Stannard, 97—18—79, being next.

SHOOTING TEAM AT LINCOLN PARK

Through a mistake in routing the touring Winchester trap shooting team which is giving exhibitions in various cities was announced as sched-uled to compete at Chicago Gun club tomorrow on its trip to this city. The visiting shooters will blaze at the tar-gets over the more readily accessible traps at Lincoln park instead. They will shoot at singles and doubles, then demonstrate the 410 gauge gun. The Winchester team is under leadership of J. M. Hawkins, Harrisburg, Pa., one of the old timers of the sport.

At the Lincoln park traps yesterday competition was at 50 targets, distance handicap. Jerome Lino topped the local shooters, getting 49 from eight-een yards. J. H. May, at the same rise, had one more miss. Leading scores:

J. Lino [18], 49; J. H. May [18], 48; J. E. Bonner [18], 47; W. G. Lewis [16], 47; Dr. T. H. Belknap [16], 47; A. H. Ar-mann [16], 47; G. W. Peck [16], 47; W. S. Duvall [16], 46; W. E. Phillips Jr. [16], 46; J. Sheldon [16], 45.

CHICAGO A. E. F.'S TO PLAY IN OHIO

Inter-city football games will begin the latter part of October between dif-ferent posts in the American legion. The first game between a Chicago team and that of another city will be played between members of the Blackhawk post and the Robert E. Bentley post of Cincinnati, according to John T. Pow-ers, athletic director of the American legion for Cook and Lake counties.

The game will be played in the Na-tional league ball park in Cincinnati, and will be composed of a team com-prising university stars who have played while in the army and the old Blackhawk division team that starred at Camp Grant.

Four football teams have been formed in Chicago, Blackhawks, Craw-ford Post, Woodlawn Post, and Rose-land Post.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

MORE MUSKIE MATTERS.

TIME was when a hand line about the thickness of your little finger was considered THE thing for muskie fishing. The fisherman would tie a big spoon to one end of this young clothes line and tie the other end around his foot and troll slowly up and down the weed beds and other likely places. When he hooked a fish he would haul him in, hand over hand.

Then came the muskellunge rods. Wonderful tools, those early muskie rods—'bout seven feet long and sixteen ounces, with all the snap and action of a cistern pole. Equipped with a young windlass, disguised as a reel, that would pull in a hundred rod seine, and a sixty pound line, early muskie tackle was great stuff—but not for fishing.

Present day muskie tackle is strong without any sacrifice of lightness and elegance. A heavy bass rod does nicely. One of the most successful muskie fishers in this neck of the woods uses an ordinary five foot casting rod, weighing a trifle less than six ounces, an eighteen pound test line, and a No. 3 reel. He has taken them up to forty-four pounds on this rig without any trouble.

A common bass rod will hold and land any fish that swims in fresh water, but a rod for muskie fishing should have considerable backbone in order to set the hooks. This applies especially to trolling, because with a fairly long line out considerable slack must be taken in on the strike.

The angler who expects to take his muskie by casting should avoid a heavy line. A braided silk testing from eight-een to twenty pounds will be strong enough if the caster will take time to snip off the last twelve or eighteen inches after every hour or so of hard casting. The use of a wire trace or leader on the end of the line is a fish saver. The kind wound with German silver wire is excellent, as it has the proper stiffness to help set the hook and is enormously strong and tooth proof.

The modern way to take muskies—and perhaps the sportingest—is by fly fishing. Many good anglers are doing it with remarkable success. Of course a heavy fly rod is necessary for this rough work. A friend uses a 10 footer weighing nine ounces. This will do, he says, but he is having a grilse [light salmon] rod built so he can cast two handed—this more for comfort-able casting than for landing the fish. He uses three feet of salmon size gut leader and his flies have five inch snells of gimp to prevent the fish bit-ing his gut leader.

He has the best luck on highly col-ored flies such as Scariet Ibis, Par-machenee Belle, Colonel Fuller, tied on 3-0 hooks, rigged up with a No. 2 tandem spinner. Sometimes he adds one of those imitation pork strips of white rubber to the fly with good results. He also takes good fish on the cork bodied bugs, but they often chew them up in grand style.

Coming back to casting and troll-ing, the old reliable standby is the spoon or spinner. The tendency is to use 'em too big. For ordinary water conditions a number five or six is big enough; for rolly water a size or two larger.

These spoons are usually equipped with a shaving brush made up of guinea and dyed chicken feathers, but a good, strong, single hook will catch as many fish and fewer weeds. Buck-tail flies are also a good reinforcement for a muskie spoon, particularly when fishing a river, as the current sets the hairs to wriggling in a lifelike man-ner that river fish find interesting.

The favorite natural lure of most muskie fishers is a black sucker or a large minnow, but if it is not used on a minnow harness some patience or re-straint on the part of the angler is needed, as time must be given the fish to gorge the bait, otherwise it will be pulled away from him. In certain wa-ters a frog lashed to the hook, behind a medium sized spoon, makes an effec-tive lure. Gullet is another old time favorite that frequently brings home the smoked side meat.

Sometimes a surface bait is just what old "Snag Tooth" is honing for, and to those who have been there this suggests a pork chunk. Let it be larger than the kind you use for bass. You will have to cut it yourself.

A good cutting is the wedge shape somewhat in the form of that delight-of boyhood days known as a "piece-apie"—about three inches long, two inches wide at one end, and tapering to a point at the other. Let it be thick-er at the wide or front end so it will throw a good riffle or wake as it is being retrieved. It may be used "as is" or with a little decoration of red flannel or yarn.

ALEXA STIRLING RETAINS TITLE AS GOLF LEADER

Atlanta Girl Victor Over Mrs. William Gavin by 6-5 Score.

Shawnee, Pa., Oct. 4.—Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta successfully defend-ed her title of American golf champion today, defeating Mrs. William Gavin, New York, in the final of the 1919 women's national golf championship, 6 and 5.

In defeating Mrs. Gavin, the south-ern girl, who won the title in 1916 in Boston, played the best golf of her career. She went out in 41, which is four over par. Coming in she beat par figures. Of the thirteen holes played Mrs. Gavin won only one, the eighth, and only five holes were halved.

Mrs. Gavin Out in 45.

Against her opponent's golf, Mrs. Gavin, though she played splendidly, was powerless. She was out in 45, but did not go to pieces until the twelfth hole was reached. At this point she was four down and she promptly drove over the green into a trap. In her effort to press, Miss Stirling drove to the green and was down in par for an-other win on the thirteenth hole.

Mrs. Gavin went to pieces and after she had topped her first two shots and failed to reach home on her third she conceded the hole and match to Miss Stirling, who was on the green in two.

Course Is Heavy One.

A large gallery followed the match. There was no rain, but the course was soaked. Cards:

WET TRACK EASY FOR ZONNIDOTTE IN CIRCUIT TROT

Wins in Straight Heats; Molly Knight Takes Stake in Battle.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 4.—Racing was continued today afer a track somewhat heavy from the rain of this morning, making fast time impossible. In the first race Zonnidote, a winner early in the week, had everything her own way, taking the event in straight heats, with the others carrying her by turns.

The second event was easy for Bar-oness Edgewood, the roan mare never being in danger, winning as her driver pleased, with Phil Patch the next best.

The Kentucky stake, the oldest of all events for trotters of that age, hav-ing been founded in 1875, saw Molly Knight favorite, with the veteran Ed Geers in the sulkey. The mare won the first heat with something to spare after Abbie Putney, the second choice and racing in the interest of her new owner, J. R. McCune of Pittsburgh, had made a mild break on the first turn. The second heat was a repeti-tion of the first, Abbie Putney break-ing on the turn, but in the stretch she overhauled the field and forced Molly Knight to a drive to win by a head. Summary:

GUS THE BUS—ROOTER.

"I'M paying for these here seats ten smackeroonos per eaches, so better it should be a nice game," said Gus the Bus, as he led Evelyn the Exquisite Checker toward the street car.

They had won a half holiday on the irresistible ples which somehow goes with decisive ball games; staid employ-ers who would yell for the police if an underling suggested a half day off to get married—or divorced—nod beam-ingly in understanding assent when approached for time to attend a tense struggle at the national sport.

Evelyn was right peeved with Gus at having shot so much of his little nest-egg for seats to a game, world's series unit that it was. But, now that they were paid for, and within her a burning anxiety surged to witness one of these storied outbursts of American boyishness, she eagerly consented to go.

"How come," she asked, "that you were roiled for a tanner apiece? I heard they was something like five an' a half an' war graft."

"O, maybe it's like that way when a party gets tickets from the box win-dow. But who could get tickets there? Is in one of them ball yards maybe I don' know how many seatses, and then the papers writes for weeks how if you send in a postal cards you could get first class reservinged seatses. A lot from bobs they are writing in and then they are sitting and waiting for the letter what never came.

"Out of thousands maybe a few doz-ents get seatses and the rest from the tickets they are slip out from the fin-gers some way and they are go to the orphan asylum where all nice little tickets go when they got no papa and no mama. The asylum, Missus Evelyn, is kept by ginks what is called in the langwidge from poetry scallopers. A scalloper is a hyenie what he looks right at a ticket and whese stands a figure 5 he sees double and he sees 10. It's a funny eye sickness and some are saying what it's uncurable."

"That's a dirty shame," said the Exquisite. "Them scavengers ought to be in better business than trimmin' a poor lob like you out o' kale what comes so measly hard. An' if only they got it, it wouldn' be so bad, becus trade is trade, an' if a guy owns a ticket I s'pose he's got a right to hold it for ransom. But I bet there's some fath-ers in with 'em an' them are the bo-zards what go out an' double cross the good guys what wanna see a li'l game an' dig down deep an' give up if they have to, becus the chance don't come none too often; them are the pegs what I got it in for. If it wasn't for them, them scalpers couldn' get to great gob o' seats, see?"

"Sure," said Gus. "I am agreed with you, fine. But by me it's right. I am buying from the scal-loper four seats for ten iron men be-Then I am selling two of them for twenty-five eaches, and so maybe bet-ter we are taking a taxi, huh?"

"Hey—taxi!" called Evelyn. "Come," she said, "I'm proud o' you. You'll be a merchant prince—or a secon' class success—some o' these days," and she snuggled back in the taxi cushions and let her eye rove indulgently over the poor beggars who were trying to pack eighty of themselves on a street car platform where only sixty were nor-mally expected to overflow.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

LOST opportunities are certain score killers. There should be about ten times as many games won with minor suit decorations, but players seem unable to realize that it requires only one more trick to make game with clubs than with spades.

The foolish practice which some players have of using bids in the diamond and club suits as signals makes losses unavoidable.

The deal which follows occurred dur-ing the last week:

THE HANDS.

S.—7, 5, 4.
H.—K, J, 9, 7, 4.
C.—9, 8, 7, 3.
D.—A.

S.—A, Q, J, 10, 9.
H.—None.
C.—A, 10, 6, 4.
D.—Q, 7, 6, 3.

S.—6.
H.—A, 8, 3.
C.—Q, 5, 3.
D.—K, J, 9, 8, 4, 2.

S.—K, 8, 3, 2.
H.—Q, 10, 6, 5, 2.
C.—K, J.
D.—10, 5.

Score, 0—0. North dealt and bid one heart, East two diamonds, south three hearts, west three spades, and the bidding closed.

North had the original lead.

West secured eight tricks.

It was impossible for west to make his contract while the opponents con-tinued to hammer away at the best suit. North might have lost the game by leading the singleton ace of dia-monds, but the possible game was by no means worth the risk of establish-ing a long suit.

Had west supported his partner's dia-mond bid, east would have secured eleven or twelve tricks against any possible play by north and south. With such wonderful support for diamonds it was ridiculous for west to switch to spades, even with four honors in one hand.

ON LOCAL GOLF LINKS

HAVING staged events through the season for the young, the old, the lean and the corpu-lent, the Ridgemoor club yester-day gave the players who have "lost a little bit off the top" an event of their own. At starting time the balmy weather made it possible for the hair-less or near hairless warriors to play without headgear, but the sudden shift in the wind made some of them take to cover.

The first half was played yesterday and the second half is set for today. D. Wray led at the halfway mark with a total of 77, R. E. Williams having 79 and F. J. L. Klob, carrying a handicap of three initials, had 80. It was ru-mored that Edward Geiger had do-nated a toupee as a special prize for today.

In the ball sweepstakes, in class A, Paul Semrad, son of President August Semrad, and J. B. Day tied at 75. W. C. Shinn won in class B with 76. E. J. Coyle being first in class C, with 69.

OAK PARK.

Tom H. Heneage eliminated E. L. Hartig, last year's champion, in the semi-final round of the club championship at the Oak Park Country club. His margin was 2 and 1. In the other match C. L. Peniston defeated F. M. Peebles, 3 and 2. C. L. Peniston and J. H. Blake tied for low gross for the after-noon event at 84. Qualifiers for the Seabury cup were H. B. Eicelberner, J. W. Ullman, Dr. L. S. Tenney, Dr. T. E. Roberts, E. E. Roberts, W. H. Davies, Paul Blatchford, E. R. Blanchard, C. M. Connell, F. M. Peebles, F. W. Sweet, S. C. Lowry, F. W. Kushel, C. L. Peniston, H. J. Hyman, F. H. Ball.

PARK RIDGE.

E. J. Whitfield had low net of 71 in the handicap at Park Ridge. E. Winheim getting low gross of 83. In the class A event J. B. Davies defeated W. L. Shepard, 4 and 2, and C. B. Rogers drew a bye. In class B C. W. Buffington won from C. P. Hodge by default.

OLYMPIA FIELDS.

Two finely fought semi-final matches in the club championship at Olympia Fields left Walter C. Crowdus, former Cook county champion, and Wilbur M. Brown, the Wood-lawn star, to battle for the title. Crowdus defeated Ralph Hoagland, 2 up, and Brown eliminated C. G. Robinson, 3 and 2. Results in the other flights:

Second—J. P. Field defeated T. Williams, 5 and 3; E. A. Ecke and S. J. Chadwick all square.

Third—W. P. Hammatt defeated B. H. Wal-lace, 3 and 2; H. F. Barndt defeated Dr. C. S. Demorest, 2 up.

Fourth—Dr. W. G. Clark defeated R. C. Foote, 5 and 3; H. A. Cohrs won from H. S. Bockwell by default.

Fifth—A. Kuyper and Col. A. N. Bolte, all square; W. Burkhart defeated J. L. Burgard, 3 and 1.

Dr. Frank E. Brawley won the annual tour-nament of the Physicians' association, de-feating A. E. Henning, 1 up.

MICHIGAN TEAM APPLIES ROLLER TO CASE, 34 TO 0

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—Michigan won from Case this after-noon, the final score being 34 to 0. At no time did the Ohio team have a chance and the first touchdown was made by Michigan in three minutes after the whistle blew.

Cliff Sparks, Michigan's veteran quarter back, was the star, making two spectacular runs, one of fifty-three yards and the other forty-five yards, and negotiated a forward pass with Rye which netted another twenty-five yards for Michigan.

Jerome Dunne and Rye held down the end, breaking through the Case line almost at will. In stellar ma-terial Cruse, full back, was easily sec-ond to Sparks. He was responsible for three of the five touchdowns made. Weston and Knode at half were a great team, but the beauty of Knode's work was marred by fumbling.

KING "8"

SOLID ILLINOIS DELEGATION TO BE FOR LOWDEN

Governor Only Candidate in Preferential Primary on April 13.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Illinois will send to next year's Republican national convention a delegation of fifty-eight instructed for Gov. Lowden for the nomination for president. The governor, as political affairs now stand, will be the only presidential candidate whose name will be entered in the direct presidential preference primary on April 13.

In the fifteen downstate congressional districts Gov. Lowden's own friends, quite probably, will name the delegates. In the ten Cook county districts the three factions will pick the delegates, but will send men to the national convention who will stand, cordially and unanimously, for the governor as long as he is a candidate.

The latter proposition forms the basis of the peace terms suggested as a working program for Republican harmony in Chicago for state and county campaign of the presidential year.

Aid Lowden, First Aim.

Gov. Lowden's intimate advisers are proceeding actively in Illinois and other states upon the theory that the Illinois executive is as nearly a candidate for the presidency as a man may be who does not definitely say that he is out for the nomination.

The outstanding development of the last week in Illinois politics was the protocol agreed to by authorized spokesmen for the three fighting Chicago factions, preceding Thursday's judicial convention. At the preliminary conference the decision was unanimous that the first result to be accomplished in establishing party peace is to go through with the quite apparent sentiment among the voters of the state to do everything possible to nominate Gov. Lowden for the presidency.

All Factions Line Up.

The Deneen faction was willing to go to a record vote for Lowden for president at the county convention, and so was the Brundage representation. The city hall, while not bubbling over with enthusiasm, would have given its assent. Gov. Lowden had no member of the peace conference to act as his spokesman, and it was a question of policy as to whether the moment were opportune to start the Lowden boom at that time, under official auspices, so the matter was not taken to the floor of the convention.

It is well understood, however, that the three factions, which will be fighting for their own lives at the same primary at which national delegates are to be elected, will agree to a complete slate of Lowden delegates and alternates in the ten Cook county districts, and that no fight will be made against the slate.

How Factions Will Act.

Upon the basis of the present alignment of county committee members, this arrangement means probably that the Deneen men will name the national convention delegates in the Second, Third and Seventh congressional districts; that the Brundage wing will choose the slate candidates in the Sixth, Ninth and Tenth districts, while the city hall will have the say in the First, Fifth, and Eighth districts, with a Deneen-Thompson split in the Fourth.

Under the new Illinois primary law the eight delegates at large from the state do not run in the direct primary, as was the case in 1916, but will be elected by the Republican state convention in May.

Gov. Lowden's name, it is now believed, will be the only one entered for the direct preference primary in Illinois. The precedent has been established in direct primary states that presidential candidates, by courtesy or for practical reasons, stay out of the home state of an opponent. Scouts for candidates other than Gov. Lowden, after making a circuit of Illinois, have reported back that there is no chance for any other possibility to make a deal in the Illinois popular vote against Lowden.

LITTLE BALLOT VOTERS TEASED BY 14 QUERIES

You'll Need a Thinking Cap and Lots of Time to Cast Vote.

Fourteen distinct propositions will confront the men voters of Chicago at the November election. The "little ballot" will be the biggest one that ever has confronted the electorate.

The board of county commissioners completed the quota of questions that are to be submitted, at its session yesterday morning. The county added the $5,000,000 good roads bond issue referendum and the bond issue proposal for $1,000,000 for the erection of a new juvenile detention home, at its session yesterday morning.

The "little ballot" will be 12 inches wide and 36 inches long. Two and one-half millions of ballots will have to be provided by the election commissioners for Chicago and Cicero, for the men voters. Three-quarters of a million will be prepared for the women voters who are entitled to vote on everything except the bond issues.

The 14 Propositions.

These are the fourteen propositions that will be up to the men voters, in the order in which they will appear on the November ballot:

[1] Western avenue improvement bond issue, $2,400,000.

[2] Ogden avenue improvement bond issue, $5,400,000.

[3] South Water street improvement bond issue, $3,800,000.

[4] Robey street improvement bond issue, $9,200,000.

[5] Ashland avenue improvement bon issue, $5,800,000.

[6] Michigan avenue link bond issue $2,000,000.

[7] Cook county good roads bond issue $5,000,000.

[8] Cook county juvenile detention home bond issue, $1,000,000.

[9] For or against new Chicago fifty ward redistricting bill.

[10] For or against Chicago nonpartisan election bill.

[11] For two year or four year terms of officials under nonpartisan law.

[12] The so-called "initiative and referendum" public policy question.

[13] The "gateway amendment" public policy question.

[14] The municipal ownership public policy question.

Five Submitted by City.

The first five propositions are those submitted by the city council in conformity with the recommendations of the Chicago Plan commission, as a direct result of the enabling legislation enacted by the last session of the general assembly.

The fifty ward bill and the non-partisan election bill were enacted last winter in Springfield, and must be ratified by referendum vote to become laws. The first bill wipes out the present thirty-five wards and creates fifty wards, from each of which one alderman would be elected, instead of two from each of thirty-five wards.

The non-partisan election bill provides that party lines shall be eliminated in municipal elections, wipes out the aldermanic primaries in February, and requires a supplementary election in May, following the regular election in case the nonpartisan bill is ratified.

Within this bill is a supplementary question that requires action by the voters, who may determine whether the term of aldermen, city clerk, and city treasurer, elected under the nonpartisan system, shall be two years or four years. This vote is effective only in case of the nonpartisan bill is ratified.

State Votes on Some Questions.

The three last questions are the public policy proposals that go to the ballot through he petition circulated by the Hearst interests, christened by them as the "iniative and referendum" propositions.

The county bond issues and the three public policy questions will be voted upon in all of Cook county. There will be a state-wide vote on the three public policy questions. Chicago only votes upon the city bond issues and the proposed changes in municipal government.

No location is mentioned for the proposed juvenile detention home, in the proposal offered yesterday by the county board. The good roads bond issue follows the original plan as published, with the addition made yesterday of improvements to Touhy avenue, about four and three-fourths miles in length, West Roosevelt road and East Ninety-fifth street.

"CANDY WEEK" PLAN IS BITTER DOSE TO ANTI-PROFITEERS

"CANDY week," announced by the National Confectioners' association to begin tomorrow, will be a knock instead of a boost for the candy trade if the recommendations of the Anti-Profiteering league are adopted by the public.

"Will the public stand for this?" asked Raphael H. Blakesley, secretary of the league, in a statement issued yesterday. "In the opinion of the league officials it will not. Stop buying candy and augment the flow of sugar to the home sugar bowl during candy week, and keep this up until the price of both candy and sugar are somewhat near a normal level.

"Is it not imperative that so far as Chicago is concerned the nation-wide candy week be called off? The projected 'boost' for the practically wasteful expenditures of a prime necessity is under the present conditions an outrage pure and simple."

Mr. Blakesley called attention to the reports of Russell J. Poole, head of the city food bureau, which give the increase in sugar consumption in the United States since Jan. 1 as 568,000,000 pounds, and further declare that the "local brewers, soft drink producers and confectioners have gathered in 90 per cent of the available supply of sugar."

SEEK MISSING JEWELER.

The Englewood police were requested yesterday to search for W. J. Gardner, 68 years old, of 6332 Cottage Grove avenue, a jeweler, who disappeared Friday after telling his relatives that he was going for a walk. He is believed to have suffered a lapse of memory.

Right and Wrong Farming Methods

—the simplest ways to cut down on labor
—the most approved methods of vitalizing your soil
—the soundest principles of improving the dairy herd
—the experts' discoveries for growing record crops
—the practical methods of increasing stock profits
—the most advantageous marketing plans.

Told by over 100 of America's Greatest Farming Authorities

A thousand and one new farming discoveries have been made by men who are revolutionizing crop and livestock results. These new ideas are quickly reclaiming soils formerly thought hopeless; are securing startling butter fat production; are forcing hogs to market earlier and bigger on less feed; are doubling and trebling farming profits in every climate and locality; are cutting down labor needs by saving work in a hundred ways. And now these secrets have been made public.

Right and Wrong Methods in Farming

A farmer raised 90 bushels of corn per acre; his neighbor across the road got only 25 bushels per acre. Climate and rainfall were the same. The difference in yield was the result of different methods used in seeding, in preparing the soil, in harvesting. One man adopted the newest and most successful discoveries of farming authorities throughout the country. The unsuccessful farmer depended entirely on his own experience.

The Discoveries of Specialists

Just as we have the physician who specializes on one particular branch of medicine, so we have the farmer who specializes on one particular branch of farming. At an expense of over $50,000 for editorial material alone, the successful farming experiences of recognized authorities and specialists in all parts of the country have been collected and placed within the covers of Farm Knowledge. Never before has a work of this scope and value been produced. Farm Knowledge contains the results of actual experience in improving methods and increasing profits; it was specially written in interesting and easy-to-understand language. Up-to-the-minute in every way, yet it upholds every method that has proved its merit.

Booklet Explains All

Farm Knowledge contains over 1,000 pages and over 3,000 illustrations. We have prepared a special booklet, "The Secret of Success in Farming," which shows the complete list of contents, names of authors and sample pages. Every one interested in farming should send for a copy of this free booklet. Mail coupon, postal or letter.

Where do you sit in the Theatre?

Imagine heading for the side rows first. There's not a human reason why you would do it. Instinct tells you to look straight ahead. It's easier—not tiresome.

Why, then, do you and I permit our best stenographers to read notes at the side contrary to both nature and human efficiency?

Neither stenographers nor employers have been responsible for this practice. But now we cannot conscientiously continue to twist spines, ruin eyes, drag down feminine beauty and handicap business when tens of thousands of stenographers are enjoying better health and doing better work through the use of the Line-a-Time.

Directly in Front

is the obvious and natural position. The Line-a-Time directly before the stenographer and directly back of the typewriter is the correcting feature of Line-a-Time System of Transcribing.

It does away with side reading and therefore does away with bad effects on the eyes and back of a stenographer.

Prove this with a trial.

SHOULD WOMEN SEEK POLITICAL JOBS? YEAS WIN

Vote League Celebrates Its Silver Jubilee with Fine Row.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

The Chicago Political Equality league, founded by the Chicago Woman's club in 1894, celebrated its silver jubilee yesterday with a nice little argument among the assembled suffragists.

There had been a brief address by the president, Mrs. A. H. Schweizer, who paid tribute to the founders of the organization.

Then Mrs. H. C. Gardner was called upon to speak in the place of Mrs. Homer Winslow, president of the Chicago Woman's club. Mrs. Gardner threw a bomb into the meeting when she declared gently that, for her part, she did not believe women ought to seek offices in the government which always have been held by men.

"We are our sisters' keepers," she said, "and we must forget our well protected selves and work for the suffrage, but I do not think we ought to become officeseekers. We should use our influence to get the right men into office."

Mrs. Baur to the Rescue.

This was too much for Mrs. Jacob Baur, president of the Chicago Equal Suffrage society.

When her turn to speak came, she courteously informed the women that she believed women had just as much right to hold office as men, and they should hold office if they could.

"Of course," she added, "I don't think its right to go out for office until you've got the power, but when we do get the vote, and a capable woman presents herself for office, I think she ought to be supported just as a man would be."

"Don't worry, ladies, about women running after office," said Mrs. Grace Wilbur Trout. "It's hard enough, in all conscience, to get 'em to do any work now. I can say, though, that in our work for suffrage in Illinois not one woman has sought office."

"Prepare for Office Now."

The national chairman of the new League of Women Voters, Mrs. Charles Brooks of Wichita, Kas., who made the chief speech of the day, declared women must hold office and should prepare now.

"There are some places that women can fill much better than the men," she said. "In Kansas we have 186 women holding offices formerly held by men. We have a woman congressman, probate judges, and clerical workers. From a report made by one of the men at the state capital, we get word not one has failed and not one has been accused of grafting."

There were nods of approval and the ayes had it. Mrs. Gardner had gone home by that time, so there was no come back.

A luncheon was held at the Chicago Woman's club preceding the afternoon affair.

The state conference will be held at the Hotel La Salle Oct. 30 and 31, when suffragists will concentrate their efforts upon getting full political enfranchisement this year through the constitutional convention. They believe this will hasten ratification of the federal amendment by nonsuffrage states.

STOCK BREEDERS PLAN FAME FOR DU PAGE COUNTY

Organize to Promote Pure Bred Cattle Industry.

Live stock breeders from all parts of Du Page county met yesterday in the county courthouse at Wheaton and organized the Pure Bred Live Stock Breeders' association, the object of which will be to encourage the raising of pure bred cattle, sheep, and hogs by the smaller stock breeders of the county.

Du Page county is said to be the "best location for stock breeding in the middle west" because of its proximity to Chicago, its railroad facilities, and the richness of its pasture lands. The aim of the association will be to make it the leading county in animal husbandry.

Comprehensive Program.

The association's program will include the promotion of a county fair, the construction of a centrally located sale pavilion, the organization of subsidiary associations of breeders of the different breeds, and to provide an organization for cooperative marketing.

The meeting was called by E. B. Heaton, county farm adviser, and was presided over by H. C. Barker, president of the Illinois State Holstein-Friesian association.

Leading Breeders Attend.

Among those who attended the meeting were Joy Morton of the Lisle Country farms, a breeder of Holstein cows; A. W. Cutten, breeder of shorthorns; A. T. Cole, Gretna farm, who purchased all of the late James J. Hill's registered shorthorn stock; Francis S. Peabody of Hinsdale, breeder of light horses; F. K. Babson, Hinsdale, proprietor of Four Pines farm and a breeders of Guernseys; Dr. N. S. Heaney, Glen Ellyn, a breeder of Guernseys; Judge John S. Goodwin, proprietor of Heatherton farm, Naperville, the oldest breeder of Aberdeen Angus cattle in the country; E. E. Bain, Wheaton, breeder of Holsteins; Frank H. Harding, Wheaton, secretary of the American Shorthorn association and largest breeder of that class in the world.

A. T. Cole of Wheaton was elected president and H. C. Barker of Lisle was made vice president. An executive committee of seventeen members was appointed and will meet Oct. 18 to complete organization. A special committee will report in two weeks on a site and plans for the construction of a sales pavilion.

You Can Prevent This

Thousands of accidents like this occur every year in Chicago. Some mean only a bent fender, while others result more seriously. It is next to impossible to avoid rear end collisions unless a definite means is used to signal traffic behind.

When at the wheel you are always in doubt as to what the driver ahead will do. The man behind is wondering about you—your duty is to leave no doubt in his mind. Arm signals at best are misunderstood—they are impossible in closed cars. Let him know definitely, positively and without chance of misunderstanding, day or night.

The Kobzy Signal Notifies the Car Behind Just What You Intend to Do

There is no mistaking a Kobzy Signal. Look at the illustrations at the left. These signal arms are housed on the rear left fender in clear view of the driver behind. At the touch of a lever in easy reach on your steering post the STOP signal arm snaps up, or a RIGHT or LEFT signal to the right or left respectively. These signal arms are red with white letters and arrow—clear, distinct, unmistakable.

They act instantaneously and are visible from both front and rear, and are lighted at night. A pilot light on the control box shows you whether signal is on or off. You cannot forget to drop a signal—mistakes are hard to make. Can be easily operated in winter with mittens.

When you signal the driver of the car behind that you are going to stop or turn you have a feeling of confidence that he will not run into you.

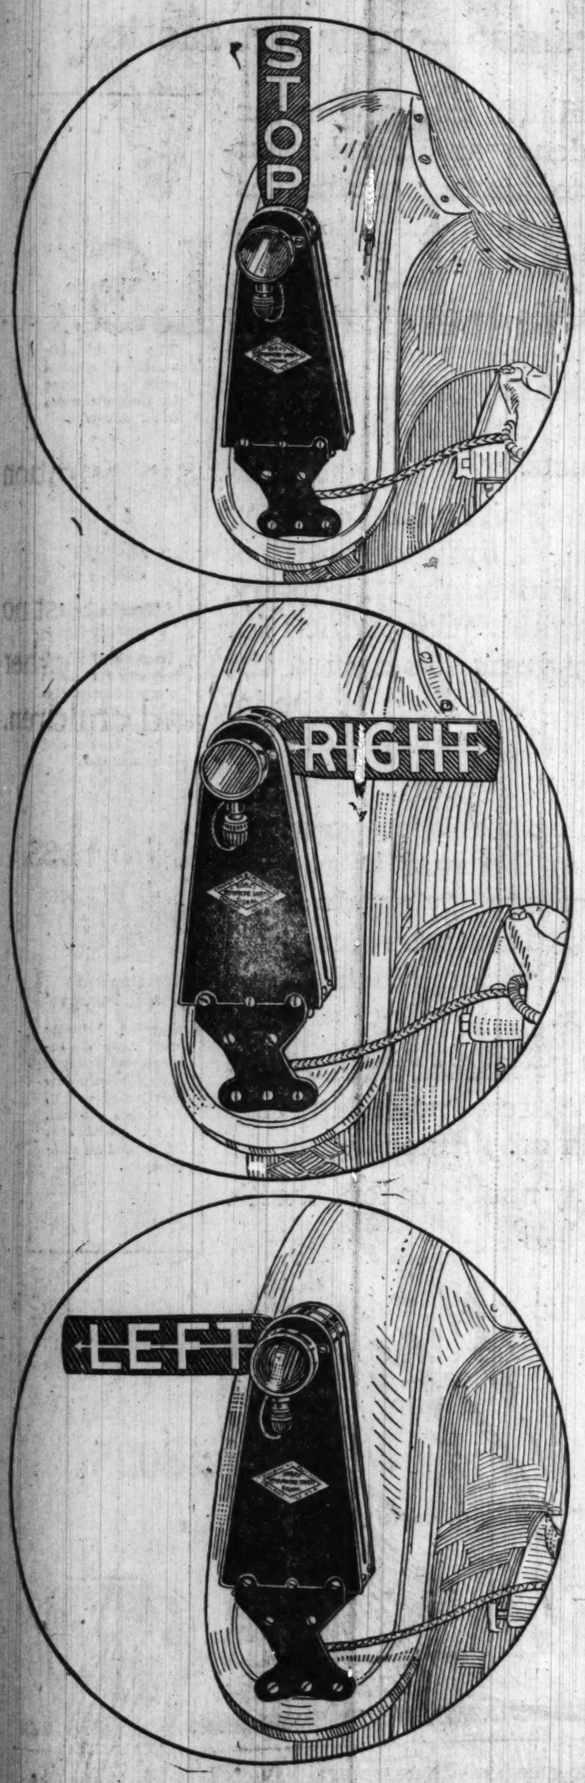
Practical—Easy to Operate—Reliable

The Kobzy Signal has been tested thousands of times, under severe conditions, and it has never failed to work properly. It is covered by our guarantee—if found defective we replace it free. It is officially recommended by the State of California, which requires the use of safety signals by law. The Kobzy Signal is endorsed by the Chicago Motor Club. "Ted" Henderson, Official Pathfinder for the club, uses it constantly and says he cannot recommend it too highly. He has used it "thousands of times in weather that would make an ordinary signal quit." Could we say more?

One accident will cost you more than the Kobzy Safety Signal. Stop in at the nearest dealer listed to the right and have it demonstrated to you.

TO DEALERS—The Kobzy Safety Signal is a practical proposition. It has long since passed the experimental stage. The public recognizes the need for such a device—the trouble has been in finding one that will work. The Kobzy does work—that is why we can guarantee it.

Here is your chance. We have a liberal offer to make you. Telephone Harrison 8227 or write or wire us for particulars.



The Kobzy Safety Signal in action. It is impossible to show two signals at one time. The control lever must pass through "neutral," which drops the signal already up, before another can be put up. Operates on your batteries or on your generator when under way. The upkeep is negligible.

KOBZY SAFETY SIGNAL

ST. LOUIS WILD ABOUT ITSELF, AND THEN SOME

Missouri Metropolis Busy Every Minute Boosting Its Greatness.

BY EYE WITNESS.
Article XIX.

We hope you will enjoy your visit, stay longer than you had intended to, and come back to see us soon. The next best thing to living in St. Louis is to be a frequent visitor.
With cordial greetings,
HENRY W. KIEL, Mayor.

About a Town They Once Called Sleepy.

They hand you the above salutation in printed form on behalf of the mayor miles before you reach Union station. After you have washed up and picked your convention the mayor, a placid looking soul with a mild twinkle in his eye, rises and gives you the greeting in person, after which he unostentatiously gets himself off the platform and goes to another convention. A mayor of St. Louis has to be a very conventional person, so to speak.

Go into any St. Louis hotel almost any day and ask on which floor the convention is meeting and "Information" will say, "What kind of a convention will you have—tea, furs, waterways, electrotypers, Methodist Church South, Car Inspectors' and Foremen's association, or the funeral directors?"

They Love Their Conventions.

When she—"Information" being usually a young woman who facilely fills the eye—slips you a pamphlet, the entire contents of which readily group themselves under the caption, "Greatest in the World." Every St. Louisan in good standing rises in the morning with those words on his lips and goes to bed at night weary but anticipant of the bounteous morrow of conventions.

mumbling them. A St. Louisan dearly loves a convention—in St. Louis—and a beribboned delegate with a badge clanking on his bosom is as welcome to him as Mr. Hoover in a Belgian mining town.

Charles Hatfield, head pusher in the St. Louis publicity bureau, admonished his townsmen the other day that "the busy business man, even when on his way from his office to the bank, can refresh himself and benefit our city by stopping convention delegates, easily distinguished by their badges [you bet they are!] and asking them if he can render them any courtesy."

The wonder is they not only do it, but seem to like it. You can stop anybody from a roaring newsboy to a priest to learn the way about, and he'll tell you and walk a few steps with you to make sure you understand. It is very heartening. I stopped a cleric one day, asked a direction, glanced closer, saw the purple, looked again, and blessed if it wasn't the archbishop! He was very kind.

Acres of "Welcomes."

Every big store carries an acre or so of "welcome" banners as part of its regular equipment, and hangs them out with almost as much regularity as they lower the awnings. There is always somebody to be welcomed.

And everybody is welcome everywhere. The toy factory, whose slogan is "American toys for American kids," prints passionate declarations of "welcome to our works," and electric signs assuring you that you are welcome even if you want only information turn darkness into hospitality. I suspect the real purpose of those signs is to get you in and give you a pamphlet about St. Louis.

It seems as if every man and boy in St. Louis carries a supply of pamphlets in that part of his garments which in more primitive but perhaps blither times was reported to be reserved for a flask. Anyway, it is in that locality they reach for them—and they always produce. Seem to get substantial exhilaration out of them, too, and if the delegate can't run faster than the native he is bound to acquire the jubilant information that St. Louis, "fourth city in the union," is the "largest market in the world" for shoes, furs, drugs, mules and hardware, and the "largest manufacturer in the world" of plug tobacco, stoves and crackers, and the "largest manufacturer in America" of street cars, coffins, jeans, soft hats, and seven other things that I can't remember but was assured I used.

The Junior Chamber.

In a careless moment at a convention last week I asked a beardless youth, who was lingering around, with a wicked, pamphleteering look in his eye, what was the purpose of this junior chamber of commerce I had been hearing so much about.

"We specialize," replied this infant, for, by George, he was one of 'em, "we specialize in production, industrial information, transportation with special reference to waterways, and in foreign trade. We have 1,365 members and this pamphlet"—and he made the deadly reach—"will give you our constitution and by-laws and our purposes in detail."

Then he slipped me a 28-pager.

"Can I be of any service to you during your stay," he asked and then "Excuse me, I have to say a few words."

And he did—rattled on for two minutes before a room full of iron-visaged old merchants and farmers and bankers, with a pep and point that quite captivated them.

You can believe it or not, but that kid organization he belongs to maintains a country club on the Meramec river, two tennis clubs and a ward organization—and pamphlets.

Greetings at Sunup.

You get a fresh pamphlet and a free newspaper shoved under your bedroom door every morning in the hotel where I stop. The pamphlet tells you wherein St. Louis has most lately discovered itself to be "the greatest in the world," and the newspaper, which has "Good morning!" stamped on it in purple letters, contains the glad tidings that skunk skins were the outstanding feature of the preceding day's fur sale, the total intake for the day being $1,001,093—"largest in the world."

The supreme 1919 fact about St. Louis is that it is genuinely and joyously crazy about itself.

FRENCHMEN DO POST-GRADUATE WORK AT U. OF C.

Two more Frenchmen, Jacques Grassin of Paris and Antony Constans of Grenoble, have entered the University of Chicago. The former was sent here for a year by the French high commission and the latter for the same period by the A. E. F. student fund.

JACQUES GRASSIN

Mr. Grassin earned the degree of bachelor of Latin, Greek, and philosophy at the Lycée Louis le Grand in Paris and also became bachelor of law after taking two years in the Faculty de Droit of the University of Paris. He is taking a law course here and expects to make finance and trade his life's work. He has also studied the violin for seven years and is proficient in its use.

Mr. Constans comes from the university city of Grenoble in the high Alps and is a son of a successful lawyer in Lyons. He is a graduate in law and English, and is entering the graduate school here for a degree in the latter subject. In France he taught English in the High School of Grenoble.

WOUNDED MEN TO SEEK HELP FOR THEIR PAPER

The workers who have been aiding the Salvation Army drive for the last two weeks will solicit subscriptions to the Fort Sheridan Recall, the weekly newspaper published by the wounded men at Fort Sheridan, tomorrow.

There are more than 4,000 wounded men at the hospital, wounded a year ago, and still undergoing treatment in the army institution. Several of the war activity societies are dropping their work, and the newspaper is endeavoring to secure enough funds to continue the work those organizations were doing.

The most decorated heroes at the hospital will be in the loop district to assist the Salvation Army lassies. Leading them will be Sergt. Robert L. John, the circulation manager of the paper, who is known as the first American soldier to invade No Man's land.

BURKE FILES PETITION.

Robert E. Burke ("Bobbie") last night filed his petition for the office of independent delegate to the constitutional convention from the Thirty-first district.

The Watch Worth Waiting For

The good things of this world are not always the most plentiful or the easiest to obtain. The Waltham Watch has always been a popular watch. Popular in the sense that an increasing number of people year by year have discovered its time-keeping excellence; its remarkable durability; its inbuilt beauty and the reasons for the proud record of the great American institution that created it and stands behind it.

In every part of the world you will meet Waltham Watch owners who will tell you of Waltham performances covering periods of years, some of which date back half a century or more. Their Waltham Watch has proved a real time-keeper, a friend to depend upon, an old comrade that has woven its service into the very warp and woof of their lives.

This deserved popularity exists because the Waltham Watch emphasizes those ideals and abilities which have made American progress in invention, in doing things by a better way—the wonder of the civilized world.

Waltham genius has given rich gifts to man. Not alone by inventing miracle-working machines that first made a superlative watch at a price which even the cheap labor of the foreign watchmaker could never hope to equal, but has also defended American genius in watchmaking by winning gold medals and the highest honors in competition at many of the great Expositions that are now history.

It is because of this standardization of quality that the Waltham Watch is the most sought-after watch in all the world. You will not find it plentiful in the dealers' stores. You will not find it easy to obtain. You must not blame the dealer if he cannot at once supply you.

The Waltham Watch is a watch worth waiting for. Our returning soldiers and sailors have added to this prestige. They, too, will say "Yes." Waltham time-keeping on land and sea has been to them a symbol of home and victory. It was the watch of their forefathers who fought for liberty and that Democracy which has again made the world a better and safer place to live in.

The Waltham Watch is a watch worth waiting for because it is truly American. Every part of it made in an American factory. The labor built into it representing American mechanical skill at its highest development. The wages paid for it going into American pockets. The pride in its supremacy as a time-keeping device—a national pride, and its seventy years of history—a bright record upon the shield of American achievement.

The Waltham Watch is a watch worth waiting for because when you own it—no man can say he has a better watch. There are principles entering into its manufacture which no foreign or domestic watch can boast. In this year's series of Waltham advertisements we have frankly told you what these advantages are and no other watchmaker in Europe or America could write such incontrovertible facts as these which tell of Waltham superiority.

It may happen that your dealer can immediately supply you with the Waltham model you desire—if not, the fact that we are behind on orders is, in a measure, a safeguard to your investment. A watch that most discriminating people want, nay, demand, is also a tribute to your determination to own none other but the watch you waited for—a Waltham.

AN AUTOMATIC SERVANT

To Receive and Deliver Goods

The tradesman simply selects the first compartment marked "vacant," opens the door, inserts his parcel, closes the door and off he goes. No tracking of your kitchen floor or annoying interruptions.

The housewife removes at her leisure the safely guarded parcels deposited in the RECEIVADOR for her. The "taken" informs her at a glance if deliveries have been made.

No littered up hallways, no lost parcels with a RECEIVADOR. Everything snugly and safely guarded whether you are at home or not.

No staying home simply because you expect deliveries. The RECEIVADOR is your automatic servant to receive or deliver parcels.

A Message Housewives, Home and Apartment Owners Have Long Waited For

For years housewives have been waiting for an invention that would insure the safe and convenient receiving and delivering of parcels.

Now that great invention is here. It is the RECEIVADOR.

The RECEIVADOR consists of two cabinets or compartments that fit into your back door or in the wall for the receiving or delivering of parcels from and to tradesmen. The illustrations in this advertisement have been made from actual photographs. They explain to you better than anything we might say, just how this wonderful invention is built right into your home.

Just stop and think what this great convenience will mean to you! How many times you have been annoyed by early morning deliveries or have found that your milk bottles have been broken or stolen. How many times you have stayed at home waiting for deliveries. Or have been disappointed because you were not home. Or have spent many anxious minutes going from neighbor to neighbor in search of parcels you thought MIGHT have been delivered to them. Or have found your deliveries ruined by exposure to weather.

With a RECEIVADOR in your home you come and go without a thought to deliveries. You KNOW they will be there when you get home.

RECEIVADOR

And, too, think how this automatic servant will save you hundreds of steps daily, running back and forth from parlor to kitchen to answer the door. How it keeps tradesmen from tracking up your hallway and kitchen. How it keeps your back porch or doorway from being cluttered up with milk bottles and bundles. How it saves you from danger and annoyance from evil intruders.

Every RECEIVADOR is equipped with the patented interlock feature. This remarkable lock guards your home and your parcels from thieves.

When the outside door of the RECEIVADOR is open so that parcels can be left, the inside door is automatically locked. Only after the outside door has been locked can the inside door be opened. BOTH DOORS OF THE RECEIVADOR CANNOT BE OPENED AT THE SAME TIME. Access to the house through the RECEIVADOR is therefore impossible.

A bundle once put in the RECEIVADOR is there until YOU take it out. The tradesman turns the lock as soon as he puts in the parcel—and it can only be taken out from the inside. The indicator reading "vacant" or "taken" tells at a glance if the compartment is taken or not.

Housewives everywhere hail the RECEIVADOR as the greatest household convenience of recent times. To them it has brought deliverance from countless extra steps and endless annoyance. To apartment owners it has brought a rental advantage that pays for the installation of this remarkable convenience many times over.

There is nothing like the RECEIVADOR. There may be makeshifts, but none offer or can offer the combination of convenience and safety of the patented RECEIVADOR.

See this RECEIVADOR at any of the dealers listed below. Once you have seen it, and really appreciate just what it will mean to you, you will never be content without one.

If there is a RECEIVADOR dealer in your city stop in tomorrow and see this remarkable invention. Let him explain to you its wonderful convenience—how the Interlock feature guards your home and your parcels.

If there is no dealer in your city, clip out the coupon at the bottom of the page and send it to the one nearest you, or direct to us.

It will bring you by return mail one of our illustrated and descriptive booklets that will explain to you in detail the wonders of the RECEIVADOR. Send the coupon without delay.

It obligates you in no way.

A FLAT, A FLAT, MY RIGHT EYE FOR A FLAT! U.S. MOAN

House, Apartment, Room, Bed, Pallet, All Scarce as Hips on a Snake.

New York, Oct. 4.—It threatens to be a long, cold winter for a great many Americans. With snow flurries just around the corner and the mercury all set for its annual shivering descent America is confronted by the most critical shortage in living quarters that the country has ever known.

From every part of the nation reports indicate an acute scarcity of houses and apartments, a tremendous increase in rents and frequent cases of profiteering and eviction. In many instances, more over, there are no prospects of relief.

Families in New York have set up residences in portable garages.

Chicago reports a population 20 per cent greater than her housing facilities.

In St. Louis the situation has led to the chamber of commerce forming a $2,000,000 association for the erection of new homes.

The Farmers' Lucky Lot.

Only the farmer is sure of his fireside.

"Stay away!" is the warning sent out by Detroit, where the city falls short by 25,000 homes.

Boston reports "practically no houses."

Albany lacks 750 houses of filling present needs.

Syracuse has "none for rent and few for sale."

In Wilmington, Del., hundreds of houses are needed for industrial workers.

Trenton, N. J., residents are offering bonuses for a place to live.

Dwell in Friendly (?) Spirit.

In Camden there are many instances where several families are living in one dwelling.

Rents in Pittsburgh are the highest the city has ever experienced.

Unfurnished apartments in Cleveland command $50 and up. Eighty dollars is asked for furnished apartments.

Indianapolis submits that rents are "highernell."

Milwaukee home seekers are offering $50 reward "for a flat." Rents are 50 per cent above normal.

Building operations in Minneapolis are estimated to be $41,018,670 behind normal.

St. Paul has been retarded to the extent of $15,298,434.

No "House Ahoy" Here.

Springfield, Ill., needs 500 houses.

Lincoln, Neb., has "plenty for sale, but none for rent."

Des Moines, paying a rent increase of from 15 to 30 per cent in the past year, reports the housing shortage is serious throughout the state.

Both business quarters and residences are at a premium in Kansas City.

Oklahoma City finds that although a thousand new homes were built last summer, not a one is vacant now.

Many evictions have occurred recently in Dallas.

Denver families are living in garages.

Homeless Baltimore citizens are buying new houses before the foundations are complete. Apartment rents have doubled in two years.

Leave; Destination Unknown.

Persons are leaving Birmingham because they can find no place to live. Where they are going is not stated.

Richmond, Atlanta, and Memphis are suffering as heavily as other cities.

San Francisco is paying a 50 per cent increase in rent.

In Los Angeles the tenants' union succeeded in lowering rates somewhat last month, but rents representing an advance of 20 to 35 per cent in a year still prevail.

Apartment speculators in Seattle are reported to have gained enormous profits.

Portland, Ore., needs 2,000 new houses.

The crisis assumes an international character with the receipt of reports from Montreal. In that city homeless souls who studied the classified columns for relief found this advertisement:

"Furnished room for rent; $100 a month, cash in advance."

Clothing on Lake Shore Hints Swimmer's Death

John Pelliccia, 1 East Delaware place, who conducts a fruit stand in Ohio street, near the lake, found a man's shirt and black tennis shoes on the edge of the lake between Ontario and Erie streets yesterday. He notified Park Policeman William Casey that he believed the clothes belonged to a swimmer who had been in the habit of taking a daily swim there. The initials "P. E. W." were found on the shirt.

Fifty-five Policemen Are Added to Force

Fifty-five policemen have been added to the force, Acting Chief of Police John H. Alcock announced yesterday. Twenty vacancies still remain. These will be filled by Monday.

CHURCH SHOULD SELL ITS GOODS, BISHOP ASSERTS

Not a Club for Those Inside, but for Outsiders.

BY THE REV. F. L. GRATIOT.

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—"The life of Christianity is hindered today because a good many people still look on the church as a kind of club that operates for the benefit of its members, and not for what it can give to the community and to the nation," said the Rt. Rev. James Wise, bishop of Kansas, to the convention of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew this morning.

He suggested a "national consciousness" as the cure for that attitude and the things which caused it. "When we create a church that has a real national consciousness," he said, "we will not have such crimes against American citizenship as child labor and other ills that menace the future of America.

Should Develop "Salesmen."

"The church should develop her sales department to a greater extent. She should become a sales agency for her product no less efficient than the Standard Oil company. The reason that over 60 per cent of our population is unidentified with organized religion is that they are ignorant of its value and power.

"A national church with a national program of salesmanship will utilize to the best advantage the agencies that will reach the mass of our American life. The newspapers, our popular magazines—yes, our billboards—make a point of contact that will get a hearing for a church that really means business and is not afraid to invest her money in these twentieth century methods of spreading information."

He warned the church to follow the example of the nation during its supreme effort "to accomplish a purpose."

At the meeting of the board of missions the Rt. Rev. Henry D. Aves, bishop of the Episcopalian missionary work in Mexico, declared armed intervention in Mexico would set back the work of missions twenty-five years. "The anti-American feeling in Mexico is due to German propaganda," Bishop Aves said, "and that will only be accentuated if we intervene."

Tucker Now at Kioto, Japan.

The election of a native Japanese bishop under Bishop McKim of Tokio was opposed by Bishop Joseph M. Francis on the ground that the Japanese church was an independent church.

Among the foreign missionary bishops at the conference are the Rt. Rev. F. R. Graves of Shanghai; F. D. Huntington, Nanking; I. H. Root, Hankow, China; John McKim, Tokio; Henry St. George Tucker, Kioto, Japan; Lucian Lee Kinsolving, Brazil; C. B. Colmore, Porto Rico; Henry D. Aves, Mexico; Hiram R. Hulse, Cuba.

Robertson's Second Home Nursing Class Starts Soon

Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson's new class—the second—in training women, especially wives and mothers, in the practical art of home nursing, will start at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The course is eight weeks. The classes, day and evening, will be held as before, at the former Loyola Medical School building, Fulton and Ada streets. More than 800 women have enrolled thus far.

THEATER SAFE ROBBED OF $835; WATCHMAN HELD

Robbers armed with fire axes broke into the office of the Haymarket theater, 722 West Madison street, Friday night and, after cutting a hole in a brick wall, chopped through the steel side of the safe and escaped with $835.

Roy White of 3331 Indiana avenue, Negro watchman at the theater, told the police he awoke in time to fire three shots at the robbers as they disappeared. The police of the Desplaines street station are holding White for an investigation of his story.

Judge Hebel Frees Negroes Charged with Race Rioting

Six Negroes, who were among those indicted for rioting, were found not guilty yesterday by Judge Hebel. Those freed were Oliver Daniel, Louis Hill, William H. Henry, Albert James, Circe! Whitley, and Chester Craig.

Charges of Nonsupport Against Engineer Dropped

Charges of nonsupport against F. P. Poole, a civil engineer, were dismissed for want of prosecution yesterday before Judge Fry in the Court of Domestic Relations. Poole was arrested several weeks ago at the Hotel Sherman. Attorneys for both sides said that domestic difficulties had been arranged and that Poole would allow his children to remain with his wife and would support them.

Hundreds Seek Tickets for Hanging of Fitzgerald

Hundreds of requests for tickets to the hanging on Oct. 17 of Thomas Fitzgerald, who was convicted of the murder of little Janet Wilkinson, have been received by Chief Deputy Harry C. W. Laubenheimer, the chief deputy announced yesterday. More interest is being manifested in the Fitzgerald hanging than in any similar event in the history of Cook county, he said.

ASKS CHICAGO TO HELP HIM DIG UP GREEK CHURCH

A man in Greece wants some men in Chicago to help dig a church and some other things out of the ground. He says there have been three churches, one below the other, and the one farthest down is the most desirable because it is hundreds of years old and hard to reach. The man is John C. Grimbery, a former student of the University of Chicago, who is now overseas with the Y. M. C. A. The church to which he refers is the ancient place of worship of St. Demetrius, in the heart of the city of Salonica. About two years ago fire destroyed the church and they unearthed another one just below the first. Now they are calling for help to dig up church No. 3, which has been discovered below No. 2.

Essenkay
THE TIRE FILLER

ESSENKAY, the Better-than-Air Tire Filler, is a light brown, firm, flexible, "live," non-rubber substance molded to fit snugly inside all sizes of automobile casings, taking the place of the Inner Tube and the Air, and making the tire stand up full and round just as if it were properly pumped up with air.

No Punctures
No Blowouts
No Spare Tires
No Spare Rims
No Pumps
No Jacks
No Inner Tubes
No Tire Tools

The principle of Essenkay Installation is to create within the casing an "inflation" affording the pressure and resiliency of air and to maintain that uniform "inflation" continuously until the casing has worn down to the last layer of fabric.

Safety
For the Woman Who Drives

Making motoring safe for women who drive is one thing that Essenkay does which has contributed much to its growing popularity. Soiled hands, soiled frocks, embarrassment and danger incidental to the use of air-filled tires, punctures and blowouts are unknown to the woman who drives with Essenkay the Tire Filler. It is indeed a great satisfaction for her to know that tire troubles cannot occur; thus enhancing greatly the pleasure of every trip. The woman who drives is ever ready to eliminate waste in motoring; her sense of economy would not permit her to endure the high cost of depreciation on air-filled tires when she knows Essenkay the Tire Filler rides like air but cuts tire cost one-half.

Free Trial A liberal Free Trial plan enables interested owners of cars or trucks to apply Essenkay to their individual riding or haulage requirements before deciding to adopt Essenkay transport.

The Franklin Sedan

Distances seem one-third less when riding in the Franklin Sedan because its light weight and flexible construction minimize road roughness, and conceal its real speed from the occupants.

One natural result of this is that persons who drive and ride in the Franklin Sedan are never as fatigued by a long trip as experience with other cars has led them to expect. They do not hesitate, therefore, to undertake longer journeys than they ever dared to attempt before.

And when the owner consults his gasoline and tire mileage, he finds, as proof of the unusual economy effected by exclusive Franklin principles, these actual results:

20 miles to the gallon of gasoline
12,500 miles to the set of tires
50% slower yearly depreciation

Winter or summer, the Franklin Sedan never needs extra attention, because it is direct air cooled, and has no water to boil or freeze. It can be used the year around, regardless of weather.

It is attractive and convenient in structure. Its Wide Observation Windows give unobstructed outlook; its two Wide Doors increase riding view and facilitate entrance; its Slanting V-shaped Windshield adds fine lines and broadens driving vision. Together with the Sloping French-style Hood, these features distinguish it at once from the ordinary car.

Ship by Truck

Stimulating Chicago Business

There are today in active operation several thousand truck-transportation companies. From every large distributing center, and many small ones, these arteries of express trucking reach out, relieving—even revolutionizing—the older methods of moving freight.

The data collected by the Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau of this city show that truck lines are in operation all along the roads which radiate in all directions from this center of commerce.

These companies offer you a service you can depend on.

Already the tendency is toward organizations of financial stability and high efficiency of operation.

When you entrust a shipment to one of these forwarders by truck, you have ample assurance of punctual delivery.

The transport company's truck backs up to your shipping platform. Your consignment is loaded and receipt given. The truck rolls out; is shortly moving on its sure, rapid, uninterrupted course to its destination.

Upon its arrival, the truck goes directly to the receiving platform of the consignee.

Your goods are handled only two or three times. Breakage is reduced to the minimum.

Every box and case loaded on a truck is not only a matter of better service for you and for your customer, but a contribution to our local and national welfare.

By way of contrast, learn from your traffic man the delays and rehandling of the average short haul freight shipment from your plant to a customer. Look into the complications of transfer and redistribution in belt road collections, freight houses, junction points. Consider the many handlings that are necessary, with consequent delay, labor expense and possible damage.

Short haul freight shipments represent a waste both to shipper and the railroad. You probably know these conditions. Correct them. The remedy is at hand.

Ship by Truck.

Get in touch with the Firestone Ship by Truck Bureau, 1920 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. Study the schedules on this page of the truck transportation companies serving this city. You'll discover that short and medium distance freight transportation is being revolutionized through the idea, "Ship by Truck."

The fact is—over half the truck tonnage of America is carried on Firestone Tires

HOSPITAL, CANDY FIRM, PACKER GET SMOKE WARNINGS

Armour Company to Expend $553,000 to End Evil at Huge Plant.

Three concerns—a hospital, a packing plant, and a candy company—were notified yesterday by Health Commissioner Robertson that they will be closed with the aid of the police tomorrow on their first violation of the smoke prevention ordinance.

"We have warned and warned, but reports of violation by certain plants still pour in," said Dr. Robertson. "Summary action, it seems, is all that can be understood, so summary action let it be."

Seven Others Reported.

The plants given twenty-four hour notices to quit smoking or put out their fires were: Continental Candy company, 212 East Austin avenue; Provident hospital, Thirty-sixth and Dearborn street, and the packing plant of Roberts & Oake, Forty-seventh and Cook streets.

Among others reported to Dr. Robertson were: Union Bank building, Vlaches building, Chicago Telephone company, Selz, Schwab & Co., Rich Laundry company, Bowman Dairy company, and the Chicago Towel company.

Armour to End Smoke.

Dr. Robertson's campaign against the violating stacks of Armour & Co. has resulted in an order for the expenditure of $553,000 for smoke abatement, according to a report by Frank Chambers, deputy smoke inspector. Mr. Chambers said officials of the company frankly have admitted that to carry the load required to run the refrigerating plant with the present set of boilers the smoke ordinance must be violated.

The only escape is a new boiler plant, which the company has decided to purchase.

Dr. Robertson was pleased, but when he learned it will be six months before the new plant can be put in operation, he directed Mr. Chambers to make suggestions as to how the violations may be cut down pending its completion.

Red Cross Chief Indorses Jewish Relief Campaign

Indorsement of the coming campaign for aid for Jewish war sufferers has been received in Chicago from Henry P. Davison, chairman of the war council of the American Red Cross, it was announced yesterday. The Chicago campaign in behalf of the millions of sufferers of the Jewish faith in central and eastern Europe begins Oct. 26. It will be conducted along nonsectarian lines and has been pledged the support of Chicagoans of many creeds.

ENGINEERS PLAN CAMPAIGN TO FILL SOCIETY'S ROLLS

An intensive membership campaign is to be launched by the Western Society of Engineers at a dinner to be held in the Morrison hotel next Thursday. Rally luncheons will be held on six days, beginning Oct. 11 and ending on the 17th. The movement is planned for Chicago technical men, by technical men.

In the van of the movement are heads of the biggest business interests in the city and prominent members of the engineering profession. The executive committee is headed by A. S. Baldwin, president of the society and vice president of the Illinois Central railroad, and Edgar S. Nethercut, executive secretary of the society.

Close relationship among engineers, it is argued, must be established immediately if the benefits to be obtained "not only for the profession but also for the public" are to be realized.

It has been ascertained after a survey that there are several thousand technical men in Chicago who are not members of the Western society, many of them not affiliated with any technical organization. The society has 1,200 members at present and believes the drive will raise the number to 3,500.

Among the members of the committee interested in the drive are B. F. Affleck, Maj. E. W. Allen, John W. Alvord, Bion J. Arnold, Col. Dale Bumstead, Maj. H. J. Burt, Frank D. Chase, F. K. Copeland, A. W. Dilling, C. F. W. Felt, L. A. Furgeson, F. F. Fowler, R. B. Harper, J. L. Hecht, William Hoskins, E. T. Howson, E. H. Lee, C. W. Pendell, W. A. Rogers, B. E. Sunny, H. R. Safford, Isham Randolph, and W. H. Finley.

COUNCIL OF FIVE NICE OLD LADIES TO POLISH ARMY

Paris "Wait" Disgusts Them at Price of 14,000 Casualties.

BY THOMAS STEWART RYAN.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Correspondence.]

WARSAW, Sept. 15.—To the average Pole who has stayed in Poland the council of five is a well meaning, helpless body of nice old ladies, whose watchword is "Wait." And Poles have waited until now nerves are strained to the limit.

About two months ago Polish troops had the Ukrainians on the run in East Galicia. They think that they could have kept them running indefinitely.

But the order came from Paris, "Stop!" and Premier Paderewski, true to the allies, hurried from Paris to see that the order was executed. The Polish army halted on an indefensible front. The Ukrainians rallied, and the result was an enemy attack that cost the Poles 14,000 men in killed and wounded. Paris afterward changed its mind, and ordered the Poles to advance again, which they did with fresh casualties.

This instance is being harked up by opponents of the government to show how a gentle policy toward Paris will cost Poland dear. At that time Paderewski restrained the army. But today, the army, and especially Haller's men on the Silesian border, is restless under restraint.

It does not realize what government officials reiterate, that the army cannot fight Germans and bolsheviks together. To fight Germany it would have to conclude a peace with Petrograd, and Trotzky, clever stage manager that he is, might well show interest in his brother workers of upper Silesia, if a Socialist government came into power at Warsaw.

A determined coup would restore Polish hopes, says the war party. And the Roumanians in Budapest have set a precious example which is attracting Polish attention just now.

Un-retouched photograph showing two oil-carrying trucks, completely equipped with Goodyear Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires, owned by the Shaffer Oil and Refining Company and operated in this city

Illinois to Get Shaffer Oil via Goodyear Cords

"Our experience demonstrates the practically all-around superiority of Goodyar Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires for our hardest deliveries in this state and some outside territory. We are adding twelve trucks, entirely equipped with these tires, to our present fleet of 24 units, as a result of our comparison of them and other pneumatic truck tires. Our preference for Goodyear Truck Tires, both pneumatic and solid, is based on quality and service."—Shaffer Oil and Refining Company, Successors to Consumers Refining Company

THE other day an order was signed, sealed and delivered to a certain large manufacturer, specifying twelve new motor trucks on Goodyear Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires for Shaffer Oil and Refining Company.

Officials trace the history of the order to this organization's very broad experience with solid and pneumatic truck tires of different makes and to a summing up of that experience and, thus, to the decision itself.

They recall days when solid-tired trucks turned back from miry routes they could not cover, leaving the deliveries to be made by pneumatic-shod trucks.

They quote pages of annual records showing that solid-tired trucks averaged 4.7 miles per fuel gallon, while pneumatic-equipped units averaged 7.4; and showing that the nimble, cushioning pneumatics saved 50 per cent in oil.

And they list additional results effected by pneumatics: less truck repairs and depreciation; increases in hauling per truck, per driver, per day; important reductions in hauling time.

But in explaining why that order specified Goodyear Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires, they emphasize two reasons—greater endurance per tire and better service behind each tire.

The Goodyear Truck Tire Service Stations listed below are here to give you, if a truck user, exactly that combination no matter what type of tire your work needs—whether Goodyear Solid, Cushion or Pneumatic.

Inasmuch as exceptional results are commonly reported from this combination it is quite reasonable for you to expect such results when you transact your tire business with one of these dealers.

EUROPE'S OLDEST KING READY TO GIVE UP THRONE

Nicholas of Montenegro, 80 Years Old, Pleads for His Country.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Correspondence.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Sept. 15.—In a small, finely furnished, private salon in the Hotel Meurice yesterday I sat at one side of a green baize covered table and talked with the oldest king in Europe. A dark bearded general, one of the king's subjects, was the only other occupant of the room, and he kindly acted as interpreter for the interview.

Interviewing a king is not an everyday occurrence in the life of an American newspaper man abroad; in fact Nicholas of Montenegro is the first and only king who has granted me that privilege.

Nicholas is tall and straight, with the heavy shoulders of a fighter. The brightness of his eyes, the smoothness of his face, the vigorousness of his speech and gesticulation belie his 80 years of hardy life among the mountaineers of his tiny kingdom on the shores of the Adriatic. It was Gen. A. Gvosdenovitch, Montenegrin minister to the United States, who presented me. This interesting personality—fighter, student, and diplomat—I had known in Washington and New York. A cordial exchange of smiles, handshakes, and the mumbling of acknowledgments in French completed the introduction.

We take seats at three sides of the table, the king sitting with his massive back to the windows

Gives Praise for America.

"How fortunate you must feel to be the citizen of a great country which rides so serenely through these troubled days," said the king. "I have studied your country, and through books I know well your great men. In the hearts of my poor people there is the greatest love and admiration for the great foundation of liberty across the sea.

"We of Montenegro love liberty. For 500 years we have fought for it. Our little country was the only spot in all the Balkans that the Turks were never able to possess. In Montenegro we kept the torch of Christianity and western civilization burning down through the centuries. That was our history during the hundreds of years we held our borders against the Turk.

"But in the great war our enemy was the common enemy—the Turks, the Austrians, the Germans, the Bulgarians—and we were among the first to join the cause of the allies."

"What has been Montenegro's reward for her effort, your majesty?" I asked. When the question was translated the king received it with a smile of resignation.

The Reward.

"Our reward," he said, "our reward is the fact that our country was occupied, looted, and devastated by the enemy the same as Belgium. Our reward is that today. Montenegro for its effort on behalf of the allied cause has been deprived of its own independence and placed under the rule of a foreign king. This result is now no a punishment imposed upon us by a victorious enemy, but it is the reward that has come to us from the peace table."

"Why wasn't Montenegro represented at the peace conference, and why hasn't the voice of the smallest ally been heard?" I asked.

"That is what my people ask the world," replied the king. "When the Austrians withdrew from Montenegro the Serbian army moved in and occupied the whole country, where they now rule by force of arms. This arrangement is explained by them under the terms of an unrepresentative conference which was held on the Island of Corfu, by which the Jugo-Slav federation was formed in the name of democracy.

For Balkan Federation.

"A Balkan federation has been the ambition of Montenegrins for years, but not a federation which completely wipes out the history, traditions, and personality of one of its states. The federation is now called the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes. Although it occupies our country and attempts to rule it, the name of Montenegro is not even mentioned.

"The fact is that the Jugo-Slav federation in its present form is not what the democratic peoples of America thought it was going to be when they supported the idea. The Jugo-Slav federation is not a democracy but is a plan of a greater Serbia whereby Serbia has taken over the country of one of her allies by force and placed it under the rule of a foreign monarch. That represents Montenegro's reward for fighting for the allied cause and the further crime is that it has been done under the guise of democracy."

"What are Montenegro's aims now?" I asked.

Wants Wilsonian Principle.

"We want the benefits of the American principle of self-determination. I want my people to have the kind of government they want. I want them to determine for themselves and express their choice. I want them to say whether they care to be a monarchy or a republic or a democracy or a federated state.

"I am old. I am 80 years of age. For sixty years I have reigned and I am tired. I have told as much to the queen, who is with me in Paris. But the honor of my country and the honor of my people force me to renewed effort. I could not retire leaving them under the rule of a foreign dynasty. They call upon me for benediction and leadership and Montenegro's call upon me shall never be in vain. I am asking that the peace conference order the withdrawal of the Serbian forces who are murdering my people.

Wants Yank Troops.

"Montenegro wants a plebiscite to be held under the direction of British and American forces. One regiment of American soldiers and one regiment of British soldiers would restore order. Then an allied mission could procede to register the will of the people by votes.

"If my people want a republic fashioned after your great one, which is dear to them, then I want to be the first to urge the adoption of such a government. Nicholas will never stand in the way of his people. I will abdicate and return with my wife to my mountain home and spend my remaining days in the hearts of my children."

I had heard the oldest monarch in Europe offer to abdicate his throne and turn his country over to the people. As mentioned somewhere above, times have changed, but there is one king who can keep abreast of them.

AUSTRIAN FIRMS WANT AMERICAN MONEY TO RUN

Promise Good Profits and Control of the Plants.

BY FARMER MURPHY,
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Correspondence.]

VIENNA, Sept. 20.—Almost every big industry in Austria is looking toward America to revive it and to put it on its feet. Manufacturers hope to see this done in either of two ways—to have Americans lease and operate their factories, or to buy control of them. Manufactories of all kinds are here, in first class condition, with plenty of labor to be had at what would be small cost in America, waiting only for the breath of life to be breathed into them. This breath of life is credit, coal, and raw materials, but principally credit.

For Americans to come here and to take mills all ready to their hand and run them would appear to offer much more profit than to attempt to market their goods here, for the Austrian has no money and no credit with which to buy raw materials, and any trading would have to be a matter of barter.

Cotton Industry Chances.

The cotton industry offers one of the best occasions for American investment. A leading manufacturer told us of two mills, one of 30,000 spindles, the other of 27,000 spindles, which would be disposed to transfer their management to American hands. These mills used to sell the greater part of their production to Hungary and Roumania. This man gave me figures of wages, sale prices in Roumania, Hungary and Jugo-Slavia, and, with cotton costing 41 cents a pound, laid down at the mill, he said, it was possible to make a profit of 33 per cent.

I was shown the union scale for labor in this industry, and the highest paid worker received 132 crowns a week, which is less than $4 at the present rate of exchange. Most workers received what amounted to from $2 to $3 a week. Those who received the $4 a week came under the head of "specially qualified workers."

One has only to examine the list of companies traded in on the bourse to see what may be opportunities for American capital. Italians began early to buy up the shares of the principal properties. It would be much more to the advantage of Americans because of the high value of the dollar.

The Perlmooser Kalk and Portland Cement company has eleven factories which produced about 60,000 trucks of cement. Its plants are very modern. Its capital at pre-war values was about $2,000,000 and it paid dividends of 8 per cent in 1917 and 10 per cent in 1918. A majority of its stock, giving control, could now be bought for $500,000.

Big Brick Works.

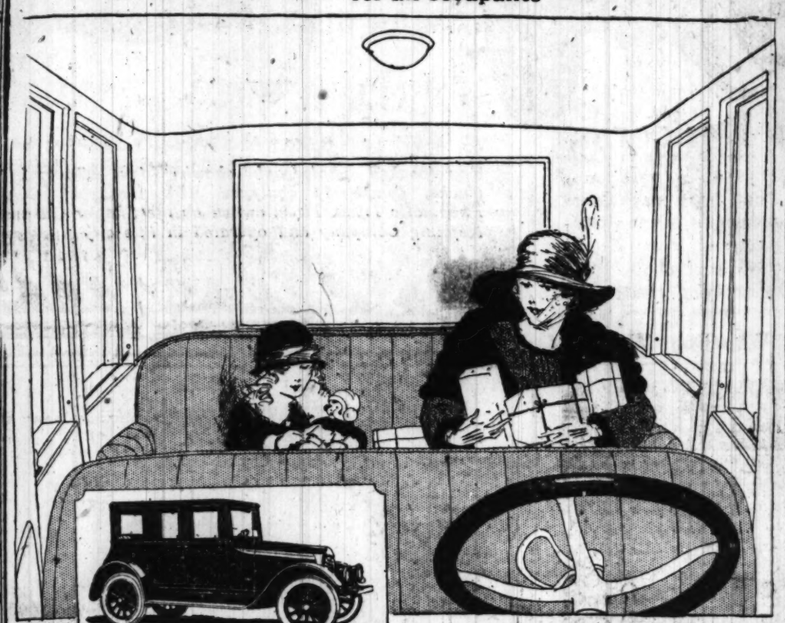
The Vienna Brick Works has five plants and employs normally 1,500 workers. The pre-war value of its capital stock was $1,200,000 and it paid a dividend of 5 per cent in 1918. A majority of its stock could be bought now for $170,000.

The Leykam-Josefstal company, the greatest paper and cellulose factory of the old empire, with three factories in what is now German-Austria, and five in other parts of the empire, had a pre-war capital of $2,500,000. It paid 8 per cent dividends in 1917 and 10 per cent in 1918. Control of it at market prices could be bought for $450,000.

The Portois & Fix company, manufacturers of artistic furniture, which paid dividends of 7 per cent in 1917 on a capital of $600,000, could be got control of for $65,000.

Examples could be multiplied of the same sort of business chances, including great electrical works like the Austrian Siemens-Schukert company, locomotive works, automobile factories, coal mines, manufactories of agricultural implements, machinery, tools and so on.

COMFORTABLE—with generous seating space for all occupants



It's time to think about Winter Driving

Crispy Autumn mornings and evenings carry a suggestion of future inconvenience to owners of other than air-cooled cars.

Thoughts of anti-freezing compounds, motors that are hard to start, possibly of frozen water pumps or radiators, begin to take the enjoyment out of the use of automobiles.

In the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car all the inconveniences of water cooling are eliminated. Freezing weather never affects the operation of the car. Left standing for hours in the coldest temperature, it is always ready to go, with no possibility of trouble in the cooling system.

Dual exhaust valves, aeroplane type, in the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Motor add to smooth, even running and trouble-free service.

In the Holmes Enclosed Models, automobile owners are offered, for the first time, the weatherproof serviceability of air cooling, the economy of high motor efficiency, the easy riding obtained only through full elliptic springs and a light, flexible chassis, in a car of proper size for the comfort of all occupants.

Gasoline consumption averages 18-20 miles to the gallon. Tire service is better than 10,000 miles to the set.

Winter driving is no longer restricted by temperatures. High operating cost is no longer necessary in a car of proper size, and the Price of Economy is no longer restricted seating capacity and cramped discomfort.

URGE BUDGET TO PREVENT PICKING OF U. S. POCKETS

Taft and Glass Hold It's Only Way to Run the Nation.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—[Special.]—William Howard Taft, former president, today urged on the house budget committee a federal budget system that will put responsibility for the government's financial affairs on the president and that will give him the necessary machinery to execute his responsibilities properly.

Secretary of the Treasury Glass also urged adoption of the budget system for the handling of government finances. He declared that the business of the government is being run at a loss and that he was unwilling to go before the people of the country and ask them to subscribe to another issue of government securities in order to tide the nation over a financial crisis.

We of Today Must Pay.

"The burden of the issues of bonds already out must be met by us today," the secretary said. "We cannot pass the burden of meeting the obligations out to future generations.

"There can be no spending by the government but what must be paid, and it must be paid out of the pockets of the people. The burden falls more heavily upon the poor of the country than upon the well to do, and more heavily in turn upon the well to do than it does on the rich."

Governmental extravagance, the secretary said, is costing the United States huge sums of money annually.

Secretary Glass also entered a plea against providing an additional bonus to those who served during the world war on the ground that the government could not afford to levy additional taxes upon the people of the country to provide for it.

Must Control Expenditures.

Recommending that the budget bureau proposed for the government be placed in the office of the secretary of the treasury, Secretary Glass said that the office of the secretary of the treasury should be made something more than an institution through which the government found the way to meet the expenditures which congress makes with a "lavish hand."

"While I do not anticipate a deficit," the secretary said, "more than a billion dollars which will be covered by the payment of outstanding victory note issues at the close of this fiscal year, I do insist that congress must exercise self-control in expenditures."

Suggestions by Taft.

Among the suggestions made by Mr. Taft was that there should be a provision in the law requiring cabinet members to come before the house and senate to justify the estimates of expenditures for the fiscal year covered by the budget and applying to their respective departments. The rule of the two houses would have to be amended to permit this scheme.

"The presentation of a budget by the president will put him on record, will make him responsible, will require him to justify himself before the people," Mr. Taft said. "It will put him on record with reference to the kind of taxation that he urges, in order to meet the requirements of his budget."

Chairman Good announced that beginning Monday the budget committee would begin framing its bill and that the perfected measure would be placed before the house for consideration next Friday.

Urges Co-operation of Teachers and Parents

More coöperation between the teachers and the parents of pupils was advised yesterday by Samuel R. Meck, principal of the Burr school, in a talk to principals of the public schools at their weekly meeting in Fullerton Memorial hall.

LONG PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR FIRE PREVENTION

200 Lectures to Start Week of Training for Public.

In accordance with Mayor Thompson's proclamation declaring Oct. 9 "Fire and Accident Prevention day" and setting aside the six days thereafter as a period for fire and accident prevention work, John C McDonnell, chief of the bureau of fire prevention, has prepared an elaborate list of activities for the week.

Included in the program are fire and accident talks in the schools by firemen, exhibition drills by fire companies for the purpose of encouraging interest, meetings of women's clubs, and civic organizations on fire and accident prevention, and the distribution of printed and filmed propaganda.

The Association of Commerce is taking a foremost part in the week's work.

Two Hundred Lectures Planned.

More than 200 lectures to the school children on the objects of the week's campaign will be made by members of the department in as many schools. The majority of the talks will be delivered the day prior to Oct. 9. On the same day the door to door distribution of the literature will be begun by the firemen.

Important Statistics.

The pamphlet which the firemen will distribute says in part:

"The fire losses in the United States and Canada in 1918 were $317,014,385. The state fire marshals and fire prevention authorities generally agree that 75 per cent of these fires are due to preventable causes, and could be easily avoided by the exercise of reasonable precaution, individual and municipal.

"Over 15,000 are killed and 200,000 injured annually as a result of fire.

"The annual per capita fire waste in the United States is $2.50; in Europe, 33 cents. Reason: The latter has better construction, less carelessness, and increased responsibility.

"The annual loss in earnings due to accidents is estimated at $2,500,000,000. Last year there were 500,000 accidents in the United States."

"Heartbreaking" Charge Worries Boys' Republic

The members of the Boys' Brotherhood Republic sent a letter to Judge Victor P. Arnold of the "Boys' court," yesterday, in which they denied they were trying to get him off the bench, or that they were seeking publicity. They charged him with making that statement, and invited him to come to their Northwest city hall, 1208 North Hoyne avenue, next Friday evening, "and explain to us why you made such a heartbreaking statement aginst us." Maurice Bekson, city clerk of the brotherhood, who wrote the letter, ends it by saying, "We all wait for you, including the B. B. R. boys who have just returned from France."

Starved Rock Tourist Season Closes Tomorrow

Officially the tourist season at Starved Rock state park, near La Salle, Ill., will close tomorrow. After that date there will be no guides or hotel accommodations in the reservation. Many pleasant days are predicted during the month of October, however, and those who desire it was announced yesterday, may visit the park if prepared to furnish their own food and shelter.

PUBLIC REACTS AGAINST STRIKE BOOST OF PRICES

Washington, D. C., Oct. 4.—Growing consciousness on the part of the general public of the disastrous effect of labor agitation and strikes on the cost of living was noted in the review of September conditions issued today by the federal reserve board.

From several districts it was reported that there was "a growing realization on the part of workmen that their interests are bound up with the interests of the community as a whole and that increased efficiency resulting in greater productivity" was imperative.

While labor unrest assumed the predominant place in the industrial situation during September, nevertheless there was no interruption in the usual autumnal swell of business.

"The high retail prices," the review stated, "do not appear as yet to have a noticeable effect in checking consumption, and the demand for higher grade products."

Recessions were noted in certain foodstuffs, raw cotton, textiles and hides. The more conservative feeling noted in August continued, with moderation in prices being urged.

The Coat of Double Use

Air-in is the coat of double use. For fair weather this fall you want a stylish topcoat of good material. For the rainy days you want a waterproof coat to keep you dry and comfortable. Air-in serves the purpose of both—at the price of one. In appearance it is a gentleman's topcoat, but when wet weather comes it gives you complete protection from the elements.

Air-in
"The Coat with Lungs"

We term Air-in the "coat with lungs" because it has none of the stuffiness of the ordinary raincoat. It is scientifically ventilated by the invisible opening in the back of the coat which insures a continual circulation of air. Air-in veritably breathes as you walk.

Go to a good clothing merchant and ask him to explain the many exclusive features which have won such wide favor for this new idea in coat-making.

An ALMOND ORCHARD —and Independence

Your opportunity is here now—to secure a sure income—to have a revenue independent from your salary or from the profits of your business—to safeguard your future against possible changes in fortune or to leave a splendid heritage to your family—and to own a home in the beautiful state of California.

Read below what we tell you about the Paso Robles almond orchards and their profits. Learn how easily you can acquire one of these properties—and then at least look into this proposition. Get down to the bottom of it—get the facts; then make your decision, not from our statements, but from what you actually find out.

Nothing is more important to any man than to make sure of an income aside from the earnings he is making now. None of us knows just how industrial conditions are going to develop. We see living costs rolling up like the rising tide; we read of strikes and discontent; we sense an unrest which seems to forecast vast and revolutionary changes. This means uncertainty for many, but it also means Opportunity for the grower of food products. No matter what the conditions, there will always be a market for what he has to sell.

And here we tell you how to become the producer of a food which is easiest to raise, surest to yield the maximum crop, and always sure to bring a big money return.

The figures we give may seem incredible. We know how they appear to many who have never investigated almond raising and its profits, but we also know that nearly everyone who has made the trip to our properties at Paso Robles, California, to find out about all this, has come back an orchard owner—filled with enthusiasm.

Now we are ready to give you facts which you can easily verify—facts which show you that here is an investment which will bring independence—and an estate which will increase in value year by year.

$2500 a Year for Life

Yes, $2,500 to $3,000 is the return you can look for from a 10-acre bearing almond orchard at Paso Robles. $250 to $300 an acre is being made there now by almond growers—so these figures are not simply estimates—they are records of actual experience. We do not know of any other safe investment which will pay the same return from the small amount of money required to obtain one of these orchards. Below are facts you ought to read—and then ask us for detailed information.

Safety and Large Profits Proved by Experience

Other men are making big money out of almonds—have been making it for years. They can't supply the demand. All the suitable land in California if covered by bearing orchards could not supply the market. Every pound raised here will always be sold—and we shall always be sending abroad for more. A business like this is not a speculation. Can you think of any investment which is safer and more sure to pay profits than raising a food product for which the demand is always greater than the domestic supply? Go to Paso Robles and ask the almond growers and other business men what their actual experience has been—or get the figures from the records we have on file—figures from actual production—not simply estimates.

10 Acres and 700 Trees —and a Steady Income

Your 10 acres at Paso Robles will be planted with 700 selected, pedigreed trees—the kind of trees which in full bearing yield from 20 to 30 pounds annually. Almonds sell from 25½ to 35c a pound. Your cost for care and harvesting is $40 to $50 an acre. Figure your net income. See if you can find stocks or bonds which will pay such profits. Do you know of any place as safe to put your savings as in land with an almond orchard on it?

We Plant and Care for the Trees

No need for you to hesitate because you are not "up" on almond growing. From the day we sign the contract your tract is under the care of our experts directed by G. A. Nehrhood, California's leading almond authority. Your trees will be planted and cared for until they are in bearing—this without any cost to you. And if after the contract period you want to have this expert service any length of time, arrangements can be made for it.

You can thus stay where you are, and have this money-making orchard developed for you—then go later to make your home in California if you wish. Wherever you go, wherever you live, there is a steady income assured from your almonds. Nothing easier to make money from than a bearing almond orchard. Your crops are imperishable, the market always ready, and the prices are fixed by the growers themselves through their own associations.

California

Offers You the Cream of Almond Districts—at Paso Robles

"Nowhere else such soil for almond growing as at Paso Robles"—say the experts. And that opinion is verified by the actual results. The heaviest crops of the best, meatiest almonds come from the trees grown in the wonderful marl adobe soil at Paso Robles. Not a crop failure in 35 years. Ample rainfall. Therefore no irrigation. High, rolling land above the frost line. And, the most beautiful section of California to live in—a charming city with great hotel, schools, churches, and fine houses—if you want to make your future home in this picturesque part of the country. No more pleasing, more satisfactory place in the world than this—and a place where you can have an independent income from your own ground. Living costs cut to a minimum—freedom from the unrest found in purely commercial communities—the association of people of enterprise—and an assured life income. Isn't all this worth at least investigating?

A Little Saving Monthly Brings You All This

Just a moderate investment and you own a Paso Robles almond orchard. You can save it from surplus earnings. A small payment down and small monthly payments will reserve the land, get the planting and care of trees free, and your clear title and deed per terms of contract. You become a California almond orchard owner simply by putting part of your savings for a time into one of these properties. No big sum to pay at any time. And your investment is safe—not affected by business failures, strikes or the wave of unrest which has brought such big problems to so many industries.

Your Crops Will Pay Half

Pay only half the price out of your pocket. We will accept payment for the balance from the sales of the almonds after the trees are in bearing. We must see that the orchard "makes good" for you before we can fully be paid. It is to our own interest to keep your property in the best possible condition. We willingly make this arrangement because we know that nothing obtained from the soil is surer than Paso Robles almond crops. And of course this plan makes it easy for you to get possession of one of these splendid properties.

Big Trust Company Custodian of Funds

Every dollar paid in is safeguarded—first by the responsibility of this Association and its directors; second by the Title Insurance & Trust Company, Los Angeles (capital and surplus $2,500,000) which is custodian of the development fund and holds title to the land in the interests of buyers. Clear title and deed delivered to you by this Trust Company when terms of contract are completed. And when you take possession you are in a business of sure profits—as determined by you and the other growers—your money is not in securities bounced up and down by market conditions. It is in California's finest almond soil with a producing orchard on it. Don't delay.

Limited Acreage and Growing Market Means Advancing Value

Why do California orange and lemon orchard lands bring $1,000 to $3,000 an acre today when the same land was once cheap? Because the best land for growing these fruits is taken up—and the demand for the crops is growing. The same conditions will hold good with almonds. The finest land for growing them is going now into orchards. When the bulk of it is sold, the land values will surely rise to several times present prices. Your purchase now means a splendid income return on your investment, plus a large increase in property value. Returns in profits from a bearing orchard run about 10 times the average interest on bonds and mortgages—and there is the profit on the land itself if you ever decide to sell.

Here Is Our Money-Back Guarantee

If you visit our property, or have someone representing you do so, and do not find this investment to be as exactly presented in our book—and you will have thirty days in which to make your investigation—we agree to refund the payments you have made, together with your railroad and Pullman fares paid to inspect the property.

Look, Also, Into These Beautiful Acre Homesites

A home in California—why not have it? Whether you buy an orchard or not—you should ask us to show you plats and photographs of the wonderful homesites we have laid out on the hills overlooking the Salinas Valley and the city of Paso Robles.

An acre in every one of them. We will plant half of it in fruit and nut trees (pears, peaches, cherries, apples, figs, prunes, nectarines, apricots, almonds, walnuts, etc.) and care for the trees for four years—no extra charge for trees, planting or care. You can build your home on the other half—and if you want to raise poultry, there's plenty of room. Every modern improvement will be there—electric light, water and phone connections, cement sidewalks, etc.—and a cement east and west highway giving easy access to the ocean beach runs through this property.

Here is your opportunity to secure a home in California's garden spot—but early action is necessary. This whole purchase gave us only 400 lots and they are going rapidly. Many orchard buyers have taken these acres in addition to their orchard lands and there have been purchasers of the homesites alone. Soon there will be an exclusive residence section adjoining the city of Paso Robles, and the property will be worth much more than present prices. It is available now on easy terms—you can reserve it, and occupy it now or later.

Where Else Such Opportunities as These?

Look into every proposition you have been offered—figure your returns from money put into stocks, bonds or mortgages, and then let us show you in authenticated figures what your money will earn for you when invested in a Paso Robles almond orchard.

Make your decision on the facts as you find them. Go to Paso Robles and see the orchards there (you have read our money-back guarantee). Learn at first hand just what the profits in almond growing are—compare living in California with living elsewhere (although buying does not necessitate locating there)—consider what a life income of $2500 or more would mean to you and then you can make up your mind, sure of having all the facts before you.

Come to Our Offices and Get All the Facts

901-906 Lytton Bldg., 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Daily

Evenings By Special Appointment

Let us show you large colored photographs of the almond orchards at Paso Robles and views of the city itself. We will also give you detailed information about the profits to be made from one of these orchards; tell you how the local associations and the State Almond Growers Exchange fix the prices which give every grower a sure profit; give you our prices and terms on these properties, and answer all the questions you may ask.

On Monday evening, October 6, at 8 o'clock, there will be a meeting in our office at which stereopticon pictures of California, Paso Robles and our orchards will be exhibited, and we invite those interested in the purchase of an orchard or a homesite to be present.

Important Suggestion

Reserve your orchard now and get this season's planting. Last year people who delayed their decisions too long had to wait a year to have their trees put in. Even with our big force of men and our machinery, we can plant only a certain number of acres per season. At least look into this now.

FREE THIS BOOK

If you can't come to our offices, here is a remarkable book we will send if you will mail us the coupon. Filled with remarkable illustrations showing actual scenes in this great almond district. Tells all about almond growing in general and its profits and explains our proposition clearly. The most complete book on almond raising. Prepared under the direction of experts. SYDNEY of RED MOUNTAIN HOUSE

by Vingie E. Roe

Illustrated by Frank B. Hoffman

She Fooled the Sheriff, to the Hurt of Her Heart and the Freeing of David from the Shadow of Bars.

IT was summer in the West Coast hills—summer that hazed the jumbled slopes with enchanting blue, that made the noonday drowsy with soft gold sun, winey with light cool winds. The tall pine trees whispered their eternal song, weaved on their rooted feet. Bright little streams ran and shouted on the slants; trout lay like waving shadows in pools and below rocks. Manzanita was thick on the ridges; madrone and buck brush were everywhere.

The stillness of the great lost land was appalling. It accentuated the dropping of a pine cone from a high tip, made the call of a camp-robber bird carry far.

And to the man stretched idly on a blanket in the dense shade of a fir thicket it brought with small, clear distinctness the sound of a voice singing. Very faint and far away it was, a thin gold thread of sound that cut through the great cool spaces with a sharp and sweet precision.

The man sat up abruptly, glanced swiftly around his camp, and listened with inheld breath.

It had been long since he had heard a human voice—and this was enchanting. He rose and walked with a quick and graceful step to the camp's edge. He was a tall man, slim built and young, and he was no native of the land. His dark eyes were swift and keen, full of live intelligence. His straight dark hair was trained back from his face in a strict fashion that held true even through the neglect of camp life. His clothes had once been of fine weave and texture, though now they were much the worse for wear. They and everything about the man and the camp seemed to have had a daily acquaintance with the bright water of a little stream that tumbled by a stone's throw away.

As he stood and listened with a hand on the boll of a towering fir that sentineled his doorway a strange expression grew in his face. It was a wistfulness and longing and keen enjoyment rolled into one. He tipped his head the better to hear those far off silver notes that rose and fell and rose again, higher and higher in an abandon of freedom. There was no settled theme to this singing, nothing of rote or boundary. They were elemental notes, like the water's chuckles or the bird's careless trill, but they were beautiful, wonderfully beautiful.

For a long time he listened, standing as still as the great tree beside him. Then the music stopped and he drew a deep breath.

"O u t-t e trazzinies Tetrazzini!" he said softly, "with the hills for sounding board!"

Then he stepped out from the dusky shade and strode swiftly away down the dropping slope. He walked fast and keenly searched the drowsing wilderness ahead, and presently he saw what he sought, the singer coming slowly along between the laurel bushes, and it was a girl on a great white horse. At the sight of the two young things, each in the flower of its pride, he stopped and the sensitive corners of his lips drew in with a sudden twitch.

Seline followed her in and sat down, sweeping them together in order with an efficient hand.

"The young Dianna!" he whispered. "And—a steed from the sun god's chariot, no less!"

The singer was slim and straight as an arrow, and she sat in her cattleman's saddle like one born thereto. Her hair was red-brown, and it blew in a smoke of fine curls all over her proud head. Her eyes were long and narrow, and as blue as the violets that grow in shaded spots, and their brows and lashes were not red-brown, as one would have expected, but very black. Her skin was the golden tan of the out of doors, for she wore no hat, and the glow of sunset shone in her cheeks.

The horse, thewed like an ox and built in flawless perfection, threw up his huge head, stared at the man, and blew his pink nostrils wide. The silver cloud of mane that tossed down his arching neck billowed against his rider's breast. They made a never to be forgotten picture and the man looked at them so hard that a slow flush rose in his lean face when he became conscious of it.

The girl did not notice, for she was al

Directions for Cutting Out the Debutante Fold-a-Way Doll

Mount the doll on heavy paper—an old magazine cover will do nicely—when dry trim off the black lines around the dolls: cut into the double lines on the bases to make locks, and into the double lines on body to make slits into which the fastening tabs of the dresses fit. Fold over directly on the dotted lines at the top of the head and the dotted lines at the feet in opposite directions. Bring the bases together and slide the locks from one side into the locks on the opposite side. The doll will then stand alone

It will not be necessary to mount the dresses, etc., but cut into the slits of the dresses; fold directly on the dotted lines and fit the fastening tabs into the slits. Dolly's clothes are put on and taken off like real dresses, they fit on tightly and will not drop off; and just think! you will have backs to all the dresses as well as fronts, and Dolly himself will stand up straight without any unsightly easel. praising him as frankly. And then she smiled, and it was as if the sun shone after rain.

"Hello, stranger," she said easily.

"Hello," the man answered, and came forward.

He looked up and she looked down and they were instant friends.

"Where on earth did you come from, Dian?" he asked gently.

"From Red Mountain house," she laughed; "an' my name ain't Dian—it's Sydney."

"Glory!" he breathed. "Sydney! And here in this great wild land! Where's Red Mountain house?"

"Fifteen miles from here—over in th' Long Ridge country."

"How did you happen to be so far away, alone?"

"Far? Alone?"

She leaned over her pommel and laughed like a young child.

"Mister, I've ben out four days at a time with my grub tied on Silver's saddle, slep' in my blankets on top o' Steep Stone mountain, an' brought in more head of steers than any man dad's got."

He regarded her in wonder. Then he nodded.

"Yes," he said with conviction, "I believe it."

The girl slouched sidewise in her saddle and took him in from head to foot with her long blue eyes.

"How long you ben in here?" she wanted to know. "An' what's your business?"

For the first time his glance flickered from hers, shot down the slope and across to the farther hill.

"About four weeks," he answered, "camping. Doctor ordered hills and no work. So I fish and rest and look at the clouds."

"Happy?" she asked with amazing frankness.

The man glanced up again. "Well, not exactly. Too lonesome."

He waved a hand at the silent grandeur about.

"Got everything on earth I need—but a human face to look at."

A quick sympathy sobered the blue eyes from their smiling.

"Bet that's th' truth," she said. "I'd be that way myself. Well, you can look at me a while. Won't that help?"

"I should say! Will you come to camp and rest a bit? I've got tea and hardtack and there's a dozen trout rolled in moss ready to cook."

"Only a dozen? Hell!" she said simply. "I can eat more'n that myself."

The man gasped, then doubled up and laughed delightedly.

"Come along!" he said. "I'm in luck this day!"

He walked beside the big white horse and by the time they reached the camp in the fir grove he knew that her dad ran cattle in the Long Ridge country, that he owned the Red Mountain house, that she was his only daughter, and that she was the princess of the region, all from her artless talk.

She looked keenly at his possessions as she dismounted.

"Tenderfoot camp," she mused aloud; "too much duffle. Pack horse?"

"Sure," he said, "and a good saddler as well."

The girl sat down on his spread blanket and surveyed things with her keen blue eyes.

With joyful alacrity the man built a fire, made tea, broiled the trout, opened cans, and spread a repast fit for a king. They sat on the clean earth, across from each other, cross-legged, and ate with the gusto of youth, and the girl proved her simple statement of the dozen trout, for she calmly appropriated seven of the twelve and openly regretted that politeness made her "divvy" on the rest. But if she had eaten all he put before them both he would not have cared, so delighted was he with her presence.

It was a wondrous ride. They talked eagerly of a thousand things.

For an hour they talked, spiritedly and with unflagging interest.

Then the girl glanced at the sun, dropping toward the west, and rose abruptly.

"Got to go," she said. "Silver's restless to be on our way."

"Where on earth—and when—will I see you again?" the man wanted to know as he boldly took her hand. It was a small hand, firm and brown and as full of character as her face. It clasped his fingers as frankly as if she had known him always.

"Why," she said, "I ride these hills frequent. Might run a-crost each other sometime."

"Not might," he corrected; "must."

"Then Red Mountain house's over beyond th' second ridge from here an' down th' creek always."

For a moment she looked deep into his eyes and the man felt a thrill shoot down his nerves. Those blue eyes of hers were so keen, so frank, so full of spirit and understanding—true woman's eyes, true comrade's eyes. At the end of that moment his own darkened, as if a cloud passed over light and flickered once more down along the slope, up the hill beyond. When he loosed her hand and said good-by it was with a certain wistfulness.

"I'll find Red Mountain house," he promised as she rode away.

. . . . . .

At dusk John McKnight stood on the porch of Red Mountain house and watched his daughter come loping up along the flat on Silver. His blue eyes, keen and long with a myriad fine lines at the corners, narrowed in a smile. He was big and portly, jovial, proud, wealthy as wealth was counted in the country a hundred miles from a railroad, and his word was the standard for square dealing thereabouts.

Several others lounged and smoked on the porch—miners, a cowboy or two, an Indian from the reservation south along the river, and one who leaned against a post with arms folded across his breast and gray eyes fastened on the loping horse and its rider.

"Ain't they a pair, Buck?" asked McKnight; "th' best two in th' Long Ridge country, bar none. I'd back 'em both in spirit an' heart. The girl is like her mother—dead these twenty year—an' th' horse harks back to his great-grandsire, th' blue-white stallion that old Pete Hollis owned down at Pomos Bar. Natives both, but thoroughbred!"

The other did not answer, but the look in his face was reply and John McKnight nodded.

"Hello, Buck," cried Sydney as she swung out of the saddle, flung Silver's rein on the pommel, and slapped his hip. "How's th' sheriff of Menlo county?"

Buck Seline unfolded his arms, reached out a hand and took hers, which he held tightly a moment, smiling down at her from his six feet two.

"Same as I was last time I was through here," he drawled, "plumb foolish—over John's—buttermilk."

He was the best sheriff Menlo county had ever had and that mild beverage was his standard drink. They said he could ride harder on it, shoot straighter, fight longer than any man in the country on the "red-eye" of the region. And all the world knew that he loved Sydney McKnight with an enduring passion that dated from her little girl days. He and John McKnight were fast friends, and he had wooed the girl straight through her girlhood, to no avail. Or so it seemed to those who looked on.

Sydney was hail fellow well met with all the men of Long Ridge. She was a princess in her own right, a reigning queen in her domain with abject subjects spread like a carpet at her feet. Why should she love only one of them? She loved them all and was loved in turn. So she laughed at Buck Seline, rode with him, quarreled with him in spirited tilts, admired him immensely, and had for him a deep and healthy respect.

"You're one he-man, Buck," she told him sometimes, "an' I'd sure hate to be a drifter with you on my trail. I don't believe there's a man livin' that could outwit you. Only a woman could do that trick—an' I'm that woman."

"Yes?" he said in his slow voice that was like melted honey what time he spoke to her. It could snap like steel at others.

"You bet."

"Don't be so sure," he sometimes answered idly.

Tonight he scanned every line of her face, the little head blowing with its smoke of curls in the soft wind, the oval cheeks smooth and dusky with red, and the very heart in him rose up and shone in his eyes.

"Where you been, you young Indian?" he asked. "Gone all day when I dropped by to see—John."

"John?" scoffed Sydney. "You know good an' well you came to see me."

"Modest!" said the sheriff delightedly, though seeming to deride her. "Sure ain't lost none o' your cocksureness sence I was here. Ain't—ah—reconsidered that little proposition?" He finished with his smiling eyes devouring her face.

"Nope," said the girl, "an', for goodness sake, Buck, let up on me about that, won't you? I'll give you three kisses tonight after supper if you won't ask me to marry you again for a year."

As if she had struck him, the man suddenly straightened up along the post and the healthy color went out of his tanned face, leaving it ashen. He looked out across the sloping meadow where the McKnight horses ran and his lips shut hard.

Instantly she was at his side, her hand on his arm, her cheeks flushed, her blue eyes upraised and imploring.

"Didn't mean to hurt you, Buck; honest, I didn't," she pleaded. "Forgive me—please, please forgive me!"

She put an impulsive arm up around his neck, pulled his head down, and kissed him on the cheek, supremely oblivious of the onlookers. They all knew her, anyway—had seen her do the like before.

If she had asked him to forgive a knife thrust in his breast the man would have done it. Therefore he smiled and caught her hand in a grip that hurt, but the gray look did not leave his face, and presently he stepped off the porch to go down to the corrals with McKnight, while the girl banged the screen door and went noisily into the deep old house, where the Indian women cleared away the evening meal.

"She's a wildcat, Buck," apologized the father, "but yet I can't seem t' find th' nerve to take her to task. I feel like shakin' her sometimes—but I—I jest can't say a word to her—I dunno."

"I do," said the sheriff. "I'm just th' same—water in her hands."

McKnight looked at him affectionately.

"In all but one way, Buck," he said, "she can wind you around her little finger—until it comes to this." There I think she'd fail."

He raised a hand and touched the silver star shining on the sheriff's vest.

And Seline smiled, unanswering.

When he rode away next day it was with the same soft smile for Sydney, standing in the morning sun at his horse's side, and the incident of her request was washed out of his heart as if it had never been. She could, indeed, wrap him around her little finger, and he wondered sometimes just where his indulgence of her would stop. She was so sweet, there in the early day, so straight and young and gay!

And if Buck Seline, knowing her from babyhood, could see in her these marked sweetnesses, one other there was on whom they had flashed with amazing effect—the dull dark man in the hidden camp over beyond the farther ridge.

For a week after that visit he saw her on every green background, in every passing white cloud, on every purple shadow of the twilight. Now it was her gay red mouth, laughing and impudent; again the curve of her dusky cheek, and then those long blue eyes, so quick, so deep, so changing—wonderful eyes!

Day after day he absently whipped the stream for trout, and he fell into the pleasant habit of day dreams. He listened for her voice on every wind, wished for her presence across his fire. But she did not come and he could wait no longer. Against his better judgment he saddled the good bay horse that grazed in a glade below his camp and struck away over the ridges and "down the creek aways."

It was noontime of a golden day when he saw Red Mountain house, basking like a feudal hold at the great hill's foot, its meadows and corrals spread out about it, its watering troughs and wagons attesting a stopping place for mountain freight teams. And on the porch when he rode up was the girl he

The Fortieth Door

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some exploring in Algeria when he is detained by Hamdi Aziza, a native official, who is jealous of his beautiful young wife, Aimée. Ryder is imprisoned in the fortress of Hamdi, and escapes by climbing down the outside wall. He finds himself in the apartments of Aimée, who is entertaining a lover. Ryder is discovered by the lover, who escapes. Aimée tells Ryder that she found the secret passage by which he escaped in the apartments of a former lover, and that she will help him escape if he will help her get away from Hamdi. Ryder promises, and Aimée tells him to wait for her at the window. She returns with a veil and a cloak, and Ryder climbs down the wall. He finds himself on a narrow ledge, and, after a long search, finds a window with a light in it.

self up, reflecting that it was well it was night and that no lady was sitting within her shelter to be affrighted at this intrusion of fingers and toes.

From the jutting top of this projection he surveyed his further field of operations. The window with a light was two stories higher yet and to the right. There were two other windows with lights on the second story, very much farther along, and he wondered painfully if these were the rooms of Aimée.

That boudoir in which he had hidden through the end of the long reception had been upon the water. And there had been a door into an adjoining room, for he had seen a sallow faced attendant passing in and out.

A wild longing seized him to crawl on and peer into those windows. But it was a difficult, almost an impossible distance, and even when there he would be like a fly on the outside of a pane with no way of getting in.

The unknown girl had promised him a way through her window, and he had confidence in her ingenuity and daring.

So he went on, worming cautiously along old gutters and ledges and jutting balconies until at last he was clasping the lower grill of that mashrubiyeh from which her light gleamed.

Instantly the light went out.

"Wait!" he heard her voice say sharply over his head. She was standing by the window fumbling with the woodwork, and in a moment he heard the click of a knob, and then, just opposite his head, the screening grill slipped aside and an aperture appeared.

"Quick!" admonished the voice, and quickly indeed he drew himself up and in, reflecting whimsically as he did so that this girl had first helped him out of a hole and then into one.

The next moment she had moved the grill into place and lifted the cover she had placed over her triplet of candles on a stand.

Triumphant, her eyes dancing, her teeth a gleam of light between those scarlet lips of hers, she looked at him for the admiration she saw twinkling back at her in his eyes.

"But not me—no!" she protested, her supple hands gesturing towards the magic casement. "I found it here. It is very old—you understand? Some other, long ago, found time dull and so——"

Delightedly she shared the flavor of that secret of the vagabond lady of long ago who had devised this cunning entrance for her lover.

On some dark night like this, with the gatekeeper drowsy with old wine, some other stripling had climbed that worn facade before him and slipped through the secret space and stood triumphantly before some daring, laughing girl who had cast aside for him her veil and her fear of death.

From the slackening grip of his astounded arms she stepped backward.

What ingenuity, Ryder wondered fleetly, had smuggled in the carpenter for the contrivance, what jewels had gone to the bribing, what lies had been told. And what had been the end of it all. Evidently not the discovery of the opening.

He hoped with singular intensity for the safety of the daring young lovers, that unknown youth whose feet had foreworn the path for his feet and that dead and gone young girl who had dared anything rather than endure the mortal ennui of those hours behind the veil.

These thoughts all went through him like one thought as he stood there, his eyes roving about the dim, shadowy room of old divans and eastern hangings, and then turning back to the glimmering figure of its mistress.

She was staring frankly at him, her eyes boldly curious and examining. They were not dark eyes, he saw now; that had been the impression given by the kohl about them and the black line of the brows penciled into one line. They were yellow eyes, golden and glowing, scornful and lazy lidded.

As she looked at him these eyes smiled slowly. She was seeing in this lover of her rival a singularly delightful looking young man, for all his dust and disarray, a slender, bronzed, hardy looking young man, with dark, disordered hair straying across a white brow, and audacious, eager eyes, in which the fear of death, so lately glimpsed, had left no daunting reflection.

Slowly she lifted her hand, and with deliberate softness put back that straying hair of his.

"Poor boy!" she said slowly in English, and then, smiling ruefully, she held out her hands for his inspection. The grime of the bricks had discolored its scented delicacy, and he saw bruised finger tips and a torn nail.

"I'm infernally sorry," he said, quickly.

Her smile deepened at his look of concern, as he held, a little helplessly, the witnesses of her work of rescue, which seemed somehow to stray into his keeping.

"It is nothing—but you—poor boy," she said again, in that English of which she seemed naively proud.

"If you could give me some water," he suggested, and drank deep with delight the last drop she brought him from an earthen jar. It seemed to wash from his throat the taste of that dust and fear.

"I can't begin to thank you," he murmured. "I only wish that I could do something for you."

She looked up at him. They were standing close together; their voices cautiously low.

"Perhaps, yes, you can."

"It's not doing anything for you to save Aimée," he told her. "That's what you are doing for her and for me. But if ever you want me for anything after this—my name is Ryder—Jack Ryder—and you can reach me at the Agricultural bank."

He had a vague vision of some day repaying his enormous debt by assisting this girl, grown tired of her Hamdi, out of this aperture and into a waiting boat. He would do it like a shot, he told himself gladly; he would do anything on God's green earth if only she helped him get Aimée away from that infernal villain.

"Jack," she repeated, under her breath, and then in her slow English, "I like—Jack."

"Don't forget it. I'll always come and do anything for you. And if you'll tell me your name——"

"Aziza."

"Aziza. I'll never forget that. And now, if you'll tell me how I can get to her and then the best way out——"

"Why you so hurry?"

"Why?" he looked a little blank. "I can't lose a minute—he may be with her."

She came a little nearer to him, her head tilting back with a slow, indolent challenge.

Gone was the silken mantle that had been about her below stairs, and he saw now that she was a vivid, exotic shimmer of gauzy green against the saffron veil that fell from her henna hair. There was barbaric beauty in her, in the bold, painted face, the bare, gold banded arms, the slender, sinuous lines, and there was barbaric splendor in the heavy jewels that winked and flashed.

It struck Ryder that she was gotten up regardless. In pride, perhaps, on her rival's wedding night? Or had there been some defiant, desperate design upon Hamdi?

She did not miss that sudden prolonging of his look upon her.

"You like me—yes?" she murmured, and then, slipping back into the vernacular, "I—I am not the stupid veiled girl of the seclusion—not forever. I come from the east, the deserts. I have seen the world. Men—men, I know. I danced before them, not the dances of the Cairene cafés," she uttered with swift scorn, "but the dance of the two swords, the dance of the serpents. Men threw the gold from their turbans about my feet when I had danced to them. And others, English, French——"

She broke off, but her eyes told many things. "Then—Hamdi," she said slowly. "Him I ruled—and his palace. But I have known other things."

Closer yet she came to him. Her eyes, golden fires of eyes, were smiling up into his, her scarlet lips gathered in soft, sensual curves. Her whole silken, scented body seemed to slip into his embrace. A bare arm touched his neck, resting heavily.

"Sweet—heart," she said slowly, in her difficult English.

It was the deuce of a position.

No man can rudely snatch from his neck the arm of the lady who has just saved him from a harrowing death. And a lady who was risking more than her life in sheltering him—decidedly the situation was delicate.

It was not the lady's fault that her impetuosity, the impetuosity which had been his salvation, now plunged her into amorous caprice. There were obvious handicaps, moral, social, and ethical, in her upbringing. She was a child of nature, a nature undisciplined, unruly, tempestuous.

And even queening over Hamdi and his palace must have offered little diversion to a wild dancing girl, familiar with the excitement of more varied conquest.

Ryder was horribly embarrassed. He was visited with a fearful constraint, a chivalrous wish not to hurt her feelings, and a sharp prevision of the danger of offending her.

He took the first turn of least resistance.

He did not need to bend his head; their eyes were on a level. He simply kissed her. And she kissed him back. It was distinctly more than a kiss; it was fire and red flame, and soft insinuation. He hated it for its deliberate intention and the implication, that he was to be snared with such flagrant, subduing stuff. He hated himself for the leap of his blood and for the Puritanical discomfort of his nature.

Her arm about his neck was pressing closer. It was the moment for action and Ryder acted. Very firmly he put his hand upon her hand, withdrew it from its clasp about him, and raised it to his lips.

His kiss was respectful gratitude and an abdication of the delights of dalliance.

"Good-by, my dear," he murmured. "Now, if you will show me the way out——"

Her eyes a gleam between half closed lids, she studied him. It occurred to Ryder that probably never before had her hands been detached—and kissed—and put away. He must be a phenomenon, an enigma.

Then her lips parted in a faintly scornful smile.

"You afraid—you? You want—run?"

"I'm horribly afraid," he said earnestly. "I want to get out of here as quick as I can."

That was putting, he considered, the very wisest construction upon it.

Negligently her gesture reminded him of the opening in the window. "Here you are safe," she murmured in the vernacular. "And the doors are locked——"

"Yes, but—but Aimée isn't safe, you know—and I must get her out of here."

the open door there stood the man she loved, the man with a price on his head, the man for whom destiny waited there in that room behind!

Like a cat she was across the room and out before he could speak. She pushed him out of the light, back in the darkness, and she was keen as a taut wire, ready for anything.

"David," she whispered, and she thanked God that every man at Red Mountain house save the sheriff was at the stables with a sick horse. "David! O, David, kiss me!"

She held up her lips, clung a moment to him as we cling to our dead, then pushed him from her.

"I'm a strange girl, David," she panted, "not like th' women you know! I—I'm—not true an'—an' faithful, like you ben a-thinkin'. There's another man—David"—her breath was coming hard—"an'—tonight—he's here—there—in th' room beyond. I'm—I'm goin' to—to marry him—and' I want you—to go—away—before he—sees you."

She was swaying on her feet with the magnitude of the effort and the man stood like one in a dream, bewildered.

Presently he wet his own dry lips.

"I don't believe it," he said flatly. "Sydney, darling, I don't believe it. You are lying. For what God-blessed purpose I don't know; but you are lying."

And then, suddenly, there came the sound of a chair scraping on the floor as some one arose in that inner room.

"I'll prove it," the girl snapped and leaped for the door between. With a hand on the knob she opened it and stood there in the light, quiet, graceful, smiling, as if the blood ran slowly in her veins and peace were in her heart.

The sheriff stood at the table with a paper in his hand.

"This here entry o' fifteen head——" he said, but Sydney cut him short.

"Buck," she said courageously, "sit down. I want you to know that—I—have reconsidered that—little proposition. We'll ride to Weaver sometime next week an' be—married in th'—courthouse."

With a slow, ecstatic oath the man laid down the paper and strode toward her.

As he came broad into view Sydney McKnight flashed out a hand and covered the telltale star on his breast. Even to the last infinite notch she made perfect her sacrifice.

"So this is what has been a-workin' in your mind, sweetheart," he said softly, wonderingly, his deep and tender eyes upon her ashen face. "An' I misjudged you!"

Then he took her in his arms and laid his loving lips gently upon her own.

She suffered the caress—because in her sinking heart she knew that she had made good—that she had outwitted him—she alone of all their little world!

"Go finish them papers, mister!" she laughed, pushed him back, and banged the door between.

For a long moment she stood against it, until from the outer darkness of the shadowed porch there came the sound of feet that went unsteadily down the step, away into the silence; then the creak of a saddle, the soft thud of lessening hoofs, sounds that pierced her very soul with white hot iron!

Then she drooped against the yellow painted panels with shaking lips that formed soundless words.

"David!" she whispered. "O, David! Across th'—world—barefoot—my hand in th' fire—th' knife in my heart! But—it had to be! O, David!"

SYDNEY OF RED MOUNTAIN HOUSE

had dreamed of, clad in a calico apron, her tawny hair tied at her neck with a ribbon.

He had seen other women, many of them, in satin and silk and glittering with gems, women whose voices were attuned to silent corridors, whose speech was flawless, and yet never in his life had he known one whose presence sent down his nerves the wondrous thrill of joy that shook him at sight of this stranger, this mountain maid of the slurred "r's," the careless ease, the swaggering pride!

He met John McKnight and talked of Seattle, of the Yukon, of the far north. He spent a pleasant hour and when he rose to leave Sydney offered to ride "a piece ways" with him, cupped her hands to her lips and called lustily for Silver an' be quick about it to the Indian boy at the lower corral.

Strange and wonderful are the ways of youth!

These two rode down across the meadow, entered the pines that clothed the sharply lifting slants of Red mountain, turned in their saddles, looked eagerly into each other's eyes, smiled, and promptly reached out to clasp each other's hand! So they rode a way in silence, while the man's face was flushed with an emotion that fought in his heart, with voices that warned and called, cross tides that go nowhere.

"Seems like we've known each other always, don't it?" said the girl. "Long—long time."

"Have," he answered tensely, "always."

Sydney McKnight had lived all her life on Red mountain's skirts. She knew nothing of the cults and isms of the outside world, of reincarnation and its like. Yet with the natural quickness there was in her she understood and nodded her tawny head.

"Yes," she said, "we have so."

It was a wondrous ride, that "piece ways." They talked eagerly of a thousand things—far corners of the world he had seen; the lore of the West Coast hills where she had lived. She told him why the redheads chose a certain tree to bury their acorns in, how the mother doe hid her fawn in the thicket, and that no one, not even her father's prize trapper, could catch the old he-wolf that lived on the headwaters of the stream below and killed its bounty's worth of calves each season.

When they parted, high on the top of the ridge, it was with a promise to meet again, to ride the green ways and to know each other better.

The man went on to his distant camp with his head whirling, and Sydney sang all down along the slope like a lark at dawn.

Thus do great things start, leap into being, full panoplied.

Three days later the girl sat on Silver and looked at the man across a little stream, and he splashed through it, eager as a boy, to catch her hands and all but pull her down to his shoulder.

"Lord," he said between his teeth, "there isn't another girl like you this side of heaven!"

She laughed, a ringing peal.

"Nor there, either," she said, "for th' preacher that used to come in to Baker's Corners said they didn't cuss in heaven."

So they rode and talked again and forgot the world and all that was therein, and Sydney was late at Red Mountain house and the man at the camp, who said his name was David Hilmer, lay on his blankets far into the night, staring sleeplessly at the stars between the fir tips and beat his brain and his heart for a solution.

"O God! O God!" he gritted with his face against his arm. "Why didn't I find her sooner? Why? Why?"

Twice in the weeks that followed he rode down to Red Mountain house and snatched a keen hour among the idle loungers, the riders, the Indians there. It was like nothing he had ever experienced, and he lived the days as they came, in a certain intoxication of tingling joy. He watched Sydney among her people and saw that her rule was one of loving tyranny—knew himself for a willing subject, too.

And the girl, wise with her lifelong rule of men, knew that for her the sun, moon, and stars shone in his speaking face, that the winds of heaven blew on her heart with the touch of his hand.

One other there was who sensed these things and was secretly troubled—John McKnight, thinking of his friend, the sheriff. But he was wise and held his tongue, thinking that a free rein is sometimes dulling to speed.

"Let 'em alone an' mebby they'll run themselves out," he told himself.

But he was wrong. It was the real thing that blossomed in the two young hearts there in the sounding wilderness of the pine clad slopes that turned the world to paradise.

"David," said Sydney straightly, sitting high on the rim of the world where the pine shadows trembled, while the man lay stretched beside her, watching her face and the little curls that blew about her cheeks, "David, how long you goin' to camp on Little Fork?"

A sudden paleness spread across his features and he looked away across the gulf of blue hazed space.

"God knows!" he said. "I should be gone by now."

"Why?"

"Because I should—but I'm not!"

"An' why not?" she probed simply.

"You know why!" he flung out passionately. "Because I—cannot leave!" And he rolled over on his face, caught her hand, and pressed it beneath his lips against the rocks.

There was tragedy in the action, the tensity of anguish, and with the basic daring of her nature the girl leaned over and put an arm about his neck.

"Then don't," she said; "there's room at Red Mountain house fer me an' mine—always."

"Lord," he said thickly, "little true heart, you don't know what you're saying!"

For a long moment he lay still, without a breath in his lungs, fighting some inward battle. Then he sat up, smiled and sighed, and, drawing her into his embrace, kissed her upon the lips, softly, reverently.

"I want you to know, Sydney," he said solemnly, "that whatever may come in the future—I want you to know that I love you—love you with every beat of my heart, every ounce of strength and goodness and honor there is in me. O Sydney dear, I love you!"

"An' I love you," she answered simply. "I'd—I'd do anything on earth fer you, it seems—follow you barefoot across th' world, put my hand in th' fire, stick a knife in my heart, if it had to be."

There was an odd note of savagery in her voice and she was staring away down the green slope with tragic woman-eyes that probed the future.

After that there was always in their meetings a sense of sadness, of mystery. Sydney, a westerner born, whose precepts were ingrained from birth, did not ask him for explanation of those strange words of his concerning that uncertain future. What he chose to tell her he would tell her, and she must be content. But many a time they two stood on some sunny slope, beneath some drowsy pine, and the man held her in the bend of his arm, kissed her lips, looked long and deeply into her true eyes, kissed her again, and sighed.

Glory and fear rode together down the bitter-sweet days and they took them as they came.

. . . . . .

And then once again Buck Seline came by Red Mountain house. He was always on some mysterious errand, always coming and going in silence as to his destination, his purpose. He sat with Sydney in the summer dark on the porch and talked idly of the happenings of the country.

"Do you know anything about them cattle that Dick Bistree stole from th' Harkways?" she asked interestedly.

"Somethin'," he said briefly.

"What?"

"Sent him in to Weaver jail four days ago."

"Good!" she said.

The man smiled his little cool smile.

"Some savage, ain't you?" he wanted to know. "You like t' see a man shut up in jail?"

"No," she answered, "but I don't like t' see a rustler get away with th' goods. Knows better, darn him."

Seline twirled a twig between his fingers.

"Yes," he said, "they all know better. An' it's my trick to make 'em pay. An' yet it's funny what sort o' man will do them stunts. Now this here Dick Bistree. Likely 'ad. Good lookin' an' sharp. Jest full of life an' devilment. Thought he'd make a haul on somebody else's work. An' now he's shut up."

There was a gentle note in the voice of the best sheriff Menlo county had ever had, as if his heart was with the men "shut up," and yet he was known to be rock and iron to the evildoers.

"Good enough for him!" said Sydney with the righteous conviction of youth.

"Yes, sir, it's funny," went on Seline, "what sort o' men go wrong. See here."

He fumbled in a pocket of the vest he wore over his flannel shirt and brought out a bunch of those fateful cards that every sheriff of every county of every state in the union gets, whether by fast mail train, by horse stage, or by pack mule in the forgotten places. He shuffled them over, straining his eyes in the soft darkness, selected one, and struck a match.

"If I show you this, Sydney," he said, "o' course you'll keep my counsel?"

"Sure, Buck," said the girl interestedly.

Then he held the flare, shielded in his palm, against the white card.

At one side there was the picture of a man, at the other a description. Her suddenly dilated eyes could scarcely scan the printed lines: "Dorran Hilliard, 5 feet 11; dark hair, brushed straight back; dark eyes, clear skin, refined and educated; wanted in Boston, Mass.; crime, embezzlement"—for the face that looked up at her from the yellow circle of light was the face of the man in that camp beyond the ridges!

For one awful moment she swayed forward and all but fell across Buck's arm. The world swung in a monstrous arc. Then she heard her own voice laughing and saying: "All right, Buck; I guess I got another touch o' malary. Felt it comin' on fer a week or so. Have to take some quinine."

But Buck Seline was not deceived. All the livelong hours of that night he sat and smoked and did some tall thinking, but got nowhere. To save his soul he could not puzzle it out, for he had no slightest inkling that the man he sought was in his own county, much less that Sydney McKnight knew him, for neither John nor she had mentioned the stranger, for different reasons.

And in her big room far at the back of the ranchhouse the girl paced to and fro and wrung her hands together in tearless agony and thought and thought, also. What should she do? What could she do? Buck Seline was iron, that she knew—a man of honor. But he loved her. How well he loved her only he knew, but she could guess. Many a task had she set him in the bravado of a girl's first awakened power, and he had performed them to the letter. Could she go to him now and tell him the truth, ask him to ride away from his bounden duty, let this man go free?

She had a cold presentiment of what his gray eyes would look like—suffering, apologetic, sorry, but calm and steady. No, Buck Seline would do his duty. That she knew, as did her father. When it came to that silver star on his breast he was adamant. And she could not help a thrill of admiration for him that it was so. Nay, she must outwit him, as she had bragged once she could. But she heard again his slow drawl: "Don't be so sure o' that."

With dawn these two were out in the cool shadows of the house, the one washing at the well on the back porch, the other in starched apron, going about the ordering of the day's work.

"Hello, Buck," she said brightly.

"Hello, Sydney. Feel better this mornin'?"

"Sure. All right now." And she sang as she banged the screen door into the house.

That day was one long battle of wits, veiled and careful. Seline was to have gone away, but he stayed. Carefully Sydney seemed to favor his staying, though that was the last thing she wanted, for David—she could not think of him under any other name—was likely to ride down sometime in the twenty-four hours ahead. They had planned for the following day a trip up Long Ridge, starting at dawn from Red Mountain house.

And, subtlest of the subtle, Seline sensed her cross-purpose. He left his horse in the corral and idled about the porch, the barns, the wagons. What he waited for he did not know, but he waited. And Sydney was strung like a singing wire. She did not pray, for she knew not how. She was elemental, basic, depending on herself. What was done must be done by her. By her own wits she must sink or swim, and that other with her! When she thought of him "shut up" in dull gray walls the world reeled and a deadly nausea seized her.

No, sir. Not while she lived. She'd save him or die in the attempt. She tried to have Silver saddled and to slip away for a dash into the hills alone, but the sheriff forestalled her by offering to ride with her. She found suddenly that she must do some bit of forgotten work. And always Seline's gray eyes under his hat brim were searching every thing, every person about the ranch. He was in the dark, but working just the same.

So the day passed and the long shadows fell, and the heart went down from her throat a bit.

Perhaps, O perhaps now—— But she caught a faint far sound as of some one coming down the breast of the great hill—and she tried to go out—but Buck was at the door, coming in. She wet her lips and hummed a wordless melody.

And for once the man was lulled into ease—the first time that day; the first slight margin on her boast made good!

"Buckie," she said, "I wish you'd do somethin' for me tonight. Will you?"

"Sure," said Seline, smiling; "anything—almost anything."

"Bah!" she said and snapped her fingers airily, while she strained her ears for a nearing sound, "almost! Well, this won't strain your conscience none. Dad gave me a lot of cattle reports to copy, an' I hate the things like poison. Won't you do 'em for me?"

"Certain will," said the man, and he was looking at the smoky fluff of red-brown curls on her little head, gold in the light of the old fashioned coal oil lamp on the wall.

Sydney opened a door from the big front room into a smaller one behind. There on a table in the middle of the room lay a mass of papers, pen, ink, all ready. Seline followed her in and sat down, sweeping them together in order with an efficient hand.

The girl leaned above his shoulder, sweating. He had helped her before in this same task, so he fell to work—and Sydney, leaning closer, put her rosebud mouth to his cheek for a fleeting moment, then flashed away and banged the door between! On the other side she stood a moment with a hand against her heart—for a foot struck the porch without, and in the dark square of

The Fortieth Door

by Mary Hastings Bradley

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Ryder, a young American, is doing some excavating in Egypt, and is induced by Jinny Jeffries, a pretty American tourist he has known, to attend a masked ball at her hotel. He obtained a Scotch costume from a friend, Andrew McLean, an attaché of the English government, and at McLean's he hears the story of a French scholar who disappeared in the desert fifteen years before. The man was reported dead, and a wife and baby girl were left; now the inheritance of an estate makes it suddenly important to hunt up the child. But all trace is gone. McLean shows Ryder a miniature portrait of the young Frenchman, curiously mounted. At the ball Ryder is fascinated by a mysterious young girl in a Mohammedan costume, who will give no hint of her identity. He follows as she slips away and finds she is the daughter of Tewfick Pasha, a Turkish official in the neighboring palace. At parting in the garden, to the girl's horror and amazement, Ryder kisses her. That night her father informs her he wishes her to marry a repulsive old man to save himself from ruin. Ryder sees Aimée again, and when he learns that she is to be married leaves her in anger and returns to the desert to his excavations. There he finds evidence which convinces him that Aimée is the daughter of the Frenchman who disappeared. He determines to rescue her, and returns to Cairo. The pasha is suspicious and on his guard, and says that Aimée is his own daughter. Jack knows that he lies and finds a way to send Aimée the story of her French parentage. Aimée is unable to escape and is forced to carry through her foster father's plan. At the marriage feast Jack appears before the unhappy bride. He succeeds in giving her hope of rescue. The groom, coming later, is surprised in his love making by Jack, who, in turn, is overtaken by Hamdi's slave and made prisoner. Jack is buried alive in the castle walls and Aimée's plan of rescue is defeated by the Turk's deceit.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

ESCAPE—AND AZIZA.

IT was a sound. The faintest scraping and knocking without that wall. It went through him like an electric current. And then a roar burst from him that fairly split his ears, the reaction of his quivered nerves and racking fears of his uncertainties, his tightening terrors.

But now—nothing. He could not hear a thing. A delusion? A torture of his final hours? No, it came again. More definitely now, a little grinding and scraping.

Faster and faster, a muffled, driving thud.

A jubilant reassurance sang gayly through him. He had expected this—this was what he had predicted. Hamdi was no foul fiend. He was a devilish uncomfortable customer with antiquated notions of revenge, but now he had shot his wad and was going to undo his tricks.

Ryder braced himself to present a care-free jauntiness—an air somewhat difficult to assume when one is trussed like a spitted bird in a hot coffin space, with hair falling dankly over a steaming brow, with a collar like a string, and an indescribable pallor beneath the bronze of one's face.

Something stirred. One end of a brick was driven in against his chest. Then he felt the blind working of some tool that caught it and worried it free.

It seemed to him that through that dark aperture a current of cold, delicious air came rushing in about him. The blows sounded against the adjoining bricks, and he thought of the glorious joy of seeing out again and feeling that he would welcome even the sight of Hamdi's blond mustache and the eunuch's hideous grin.

Now the aperture admitted a pale gleam upon his chest. Staring steadily down he caught a glimpse of the fingers curving about a brick, and his heart, that had steadied, began to race again wildly. For they were not the fingers of the black, nor yet the wiry joints of the general.

They were soft, white fingers, with a gleam of rings.

Aimée! Somehow, somewhere, she had managed to come to him, to achieve this rescue.

"Aimée!" He breathed the name.

"S-sh!" came a warning little whisper, and impatiently he waited until that opening should be greater and permit of sight and speech.

His helplessness was maddening. If only he could raise his hands—could get those bonds out! He twisted; he writhed; he tried to lift his elbows and get his wrists in reach of the opening, but the coffin was too diabolically cramped for movement until the hole was very much larger. Then, with a convulsive pressure, he swung his wrists within reach, and, after a moment's wait, he felt a thin blade drawn across the silk.

The relief was glorious. He swung his hands free, rubbing the chafed wrists, then thrust an opened hand out into the opening, and, with instant comprehension, a short, pointed bit of iron was put within it.

Now he could do something! With furious strength he attacked the bricks edging the hole, and as he pried free each brick he could again get a glimpse of those white, delicate fingers lifting it carefully away.

And now the hole was large enough. He twisted about and thrust out a leg, and then, with a feeling of ecstasy which made the official literary raptures of saints and conquerors but pale, dim moods, he wormed his way out of that jagged hole and turned, erect and free, to the shrouded figure of his rescuer.

She had drawn back a little against the wall, a gauzy veil across her face. Beside her, upon the stone floor, a solitary candle sent its flickering rays into the shadows, edging with light her slender outlines.

Ryder took one quick step to her, his heart in his throat, and put out eager, tender arms. But in the very moment that he was gathering her to him, even when he felt her pliant body, at first resistant, then softly yielding, swept against his own, he felt, too, a little palm suddenly upon his mouth.

"Hush!" said the soft, whispering voice, cutting into his low murmur of "Aimée!" and then, in slow, emphatic caution: "Be careful!"

He had need of that caution, for under the saffron veil was not the face of Aimée. He was clasping a young creature that he had never seen before, a girl with flaming henna hair and kohl-darkened brows, a vivid blazoning face that smiled enigmatically, with a certain mockery of delight at the amazement he reflected so unguardedly.

. . . . . .

From the slackening grip of his astounded arms she stepped backward, still smiling faintly and holding up in admonishment the palm she had pressed against his mouth.

"But what—what the dev——" muttered Ryder.

"Come," she whispered, catching up her candle, and, after holding it high for a moment, staring at him, she extinguished it suddenly and turned to lead the cautious way across the stone spaces, while Ryder closely followed.

Not Aimée, then! But some messenger, he could only suppose. Some confidant, at need. A handmaid? The whisper of her silks, the remembered gleam of jewels in the henna hair flouted that thought, and not troubling his ingenuity with alternatives, he was content to follow her swift steps.

They were now in those open, rubbishy spaces where he remembered the crumbling masonry and broken arches of old, disregarded mosques; now they were again inclosed in narrow stone walls, winding past cellars and storerooms.

The girl's advance grew more cautious. Often she stopped and listened, peering ahead into the darkness, and now, as she took another turning, her care redoubled and Ryder needed no exhortion to imitate it. Obeying a gesture of her arm, he followed at a greater distance, prepared, at the warning of a sound, to flatten himself against the wall or dart into some cranny of retreat.

They were now in the cellars. The corridor was widening out before them with a pallid showing of light, crossed with many bars, at some far end. They stole towards it. It was a window, or barred gate, he saw, and he heard again that lapping of restless water against stone.

He could see, too, in the dimness the curve of a stair near the gate.

Abruptly his guide checked him. Wary and noiseless, he waited while she stole forward to those stairs, peering up into the gloom, attentive for any sound from above. Apparently satisfied, she went on towards the barred gate and bent down over a spot of darkness which Ryder had taken for a shadow.

He saw now that it had some semblance to human outline.

Closely the girl bent and he caught the pallor of her hands, searching swiftly, and then a muffled clink. Next moment, a wraith with soundless steps, she was back at his side again, urging him on with her. They passed the stairs; he felt the soft yield of carpet beneath his feet; they passed that recumbent figure and now he heard the rhythm of a sleeper's heavy breath escaping, mufflediy, from the folds of a thick mantle which the sleeper's habits had wrapped about his head. For all the mantle he was aware of the fumes of wine.

"I saw that Ja'afar had his drink," said the girl suddenly in softly whispered Turkish, her head close to his. "He is my friend. I do not neglect him." And under her breath she laughed as she exhibited the great bunch of keys she had taken from the imbiber.

Stooping now before the gate, she fitted the key into the lock. Then, over her shoulder, she looked up at the young man and asked him a quick question.

He did not understand. That was the trouble with his vernacular. It would go on very well for a time, when he had a clew to the sense, or when it was a question of every day expression, but a sudden divergence, an unexpected word, was apt to prove a hopeless obstacle.

Now she repeated her question again, more slowly, and again he shook his head.

Now she stood up, frowning a little, and began again in English: "You—no, I not know—— This way? You do it?" A sudden smile broke over her face as she made a swift, pushing gesture with her hands that with her pointing to the water outside, sent Ryder a sudden enlightenment.

"Swim? You mean, do I swim?"

She nodded. "Not go——" She made a swift downward movement of her hands and then pointed again to that water just outside the gate.

"Not go down—not sink?" interpreted Ryder. "No, indeed. I can swim," he assured her, and revisited with smiling satisfaction she knelt again before the barred gate.

Open it swung with so sharp a crack that both glanced at the figure behind them and then at the shadowy gloom of the stairs. But no alarm sounded. Outside the gate Ryder saw the darkness of fairly wide, rippling waters, visited with floating stars, and beyond a low lying, dun bank.

Escape was there. Freedom! Safety! He felt an exultant longing to plunge in and strike out, but he turned, questioningly, to the mysterious rescuer.

"Aimée?" he asked, under his breath. "Where is she?" He repeated it in the vernacular, distrusting her English, and in the vernacular she answered: "You want her? You want to take her away with you?"

She laughed softly at the quick flash in his eyes and hardly waited for his speech.

"Good—what a lover! You are not afraid?"

He did not trust his words to satire and he assured her, mendaciously, that he was not afraid.

"Good!" she said again, with a showing of white teeth between her carmined lips. "You take her—you take her away from him. That is what I want. You understand?"

Very suddenly he understood.

. . . . . .

This was no emissary from Aimée. This was no philanthropic bystander. It was some girl of the palace, jealous and daring, conspiring shrewdly for the removal of her rival.

"Take her away," she was saying, urgently. "Out of this palace. We want no brides here." Lowering and sullen, she turned bitter on the word.

"Tonight I was watching," she went on swiftly. "I heard—the noise—and then the whispering. The darkness has ears and eyes—and a tongue. And so I waited out there."

He could not distinguish all the quick flow of her speech, but he caught enough to understand how she had lurked in the halls, jealously spying, defying the eunuchs' authority, and how she had caught with passionate delight that stifled alarm of scandal. Later, hanging over some banister, she had seen the Ethiopian pass with his burden, and had stolen down afterwards, stalking like a cat, and had discovered the lantern gone, the door unlocked. And then she had watched until the pair emerged without the burden.

She had not been able to get hold of the key to the door. But she had resolved to explore, and so she had furnished the waterman with his wine, drugged, Ryder gathered, and had stolen past him on the other route to those underground foundations to which her suspicions had been directed by the mortar and dust upon Yussuf.

Evidently she knew the possibilities of the place and the mind of its master. And when she found the old niche freshly bricked and the mortar at hand she had not needed more to assure her that here was the burial place of her rival's lover.

Now, for the boon of his life, he was to relieve her of that rival. Or try to.

"For once—he might not kill her," she whispered. "But if, again—" Her eyes glowed like a cat's in the dark. "Take her away. Make her name a spitting and a disgrace. Her memory a shame and a sting. Is she beautiful?" she broke off to demand. "They say—but slaves lie——"

"Can you believe a lover?" he said, whimsically, for all his impatience. "She is a pearl—a rose—a crescent moon——"

"They say she is very pale and thin——"

"She is an houri from Paradise," he said, distinctly. "And now, in the name of Allah, let me get to her. Tell me the way."

"Will she go gladly with you?" the low, insistent voice went on, and at his quick nod: "Holy prophet, what a bride!"

She clapped her two ringed hands to smother the impish joy of her laugh. "A warning to those who can be warned—he will not be so eager for another stripe from that same stick! It was his cousin, Seniha Hanum—Satan devour her!—who made this marriage. Always she hated me. But now I will tell you how to get to her. Look out, with me."

Kneeling at the gate, over the dark flow of the water, she drew him down beside her, and, thrusting out her veiled head, she pointed upward and to the right to a jutting balcony of mashrubiyeh, where a pale light showed through the fret work.

"There—you see? That is my room. And, if you climb up, I can let you in. There. Up," she repeated in English, resolved to make certain.

"I see. I can get there," he assured her, measuring with his eye the dim distance.

"At once," she said. "I will be there. I cannot take you with me through the upper hall—it is dangerous even for me to be caught. But no eunuch wants my displeasure."

He could believe it, watching the subtle, malicious daring of her face. Even in the gloom he caught the steady lidded arrogance of her kohl darkened eyes and the bold insolence of a high cheek bone. She had a hint of gypsy.

"And you can get me in? You're a wonder!" he whispered. "I can't thank you enough."

"Rid me of her," said the girl, swiftly. "But not—not him. You must swear—what is it that Christians swear by?" she broke off to demand. "By the grave of your father? Yes? You will swear not to hurt him, to hurt Hamdi, by the grave of your father? Yes?"

Ryder nodded quickly. His father, to be sure, was in no grave at all. He was, allowing hastily for the difference in time, in his treasurer's cage at the bank in East Middleton, but he did not wait to explain this to the girl.

"I swear it," he repeated. "I won't hurt your Hamdi, since that's your condition. But we're wasting time."

"Up, then. And if you fall down—do like this."

Smiling mischievously, she made the gesture of swimming. "Allah go with thee—and with me also," he heard her murmur, as he stepped out to the ledge of the entrance, twisted himself agilely about and, climbing up the opened gate, swung himself up to the stone carving overhead.

Below him he heard the gate swing shut. He did not hear her lock it. Fervently he hoped she had not, since it was a possible exit for any one in a hurry; but at any rate he need not worry about a way out of the place until he had got into it again.

And the getting in was not any too simple. It was work for a mountain goat, he reflected, after a short interval devoted to tentative reaches and balancing and digging in of hands and feet. The distances were far greater than the first glimpsed, foreshortened perspective had allowed him to guess, and there was only the starlight to illumine the gray face of the palace.

He had no idea of the time. Somewhere about the middle of the night or early morning, he judged vaguely by the stars, although it seemed impossible that so few hours had passed.

The river was all silence and darkness. No luggars with their sleeping crews were moored below. He seemed the only living, breathing thing clambering across the face of time and space.

Gingerly he kicked off the nondescript black shoes he had worn with his disguise that afternoon, and essayed a perilous toe hold while he reached for the interstices of a mashrubiyeh window just overhead.

Once gripping the rounds, he pulled him-

LEAVES from a PROVOST MARSHAL'S NOTEBOOK

The Women in Room 27

This is the fifth of a series of short stories by Maj. C. E. Russell, a provost marshal with the A. E. F. in France. Each of these stories is based on actual experience of the major while in France and throws a light upon the side of the service which is so little understood.

They would go out in the boat and drop the message overboard in a small bottle.

ARCHERCHON, a pretty French town situated on the inside of the hook that forms Archerchon bay, and about thirty miles west of Bordeaux, is a summer resort where in normal times the faster French set gathered, and where even during war times quite a cosmopolitan crowd was to be seen. Many beautiful villas are here. Before the war the Casino was known as a second Monte Carlo, although now used as a hospital; while on the outskirts of the town was located the race track. Near was Camp Hunt, one of the largest artillery training camps, where the new guns of our army were tested out and the men were trained in handling them. As Archerchon was the only place nearby where our men could go for recreation, naturally on Saturdays and Sundays the place was thronged with officers and soldiers. This town was also frequented by the Americans from Bordeaux, who would come here for a swim and to spend a pleasant day. It was not an uncommon occurrence for a thousand Americans to be here on a Sunday. Consequently here was a place where information needed by the German high command could easily be gathered, and here some of the best German spies were sent to operate.

Germany, when after information from the American army, used women whenever and wherever possible. The Germans knew the well known trait of the American—that he always showed all women the same consideration which he showed toward his mother and his sister, and that it was almost beyond his conception that a woman would stoop to the work of a spy. This made him an easy source from which to obtain information. In Archerchon Germany had placed among other spies three very clever women. These women were busily engaged in gathering information and were in some manner getting it out of France and into Germany.

One day, on the train to Bordeaux, two officers were overheard by one of my men commenting on the fact that these women were entertaining them every time they came to Archerchon, and that in every case the women paid the bills. These officers thought it a good joke. This was such an unusual occurrence, however, that it was investigated. It was found that these women were giving many parties to American officers, that all these parties ended with plenty of wine, and that the women always paid the bills. In France, as well as elsewhere, when a woman pays a bill for a man's entertainment there is something singular about it, and if he is a real man he would be wise to watch out.

Additional suspicion was directed to this town from the fact that our intelligence department had discovered that the German high command had detailed information on what was going on at Camp Hunt. They knew much about our new guns, the strength of the batteries, their location, and the number of guns to a batttery. This was a very serious matter, and we were instructed to spare neither time nor expense in getting those who were responsible.

We first assigned to the case two of our women operatives to watch these women. They listened to the conversation between these women and our officers, and noticed that after the wine began to flow freely they carefully brought the conversation around to the size of our guns, the number of men in a battery, the sailing of ships, the expected arrival of convoys, and various other topics of interest to the German intelligence department. One night, at one of these parties, an officer told of the expected arrival of a convoy and bragged that we had driven the German submarine off the seas, that they didn't dare to try to sink any of our boats, and that this convoy was not even protected by submarine chasers. This convoy was bound for Bordeaux. [Bordeaux does not lie on the coast, but is situated about thirty miles up the Gironde river. In order to get into the river the ships have to pass a bar that can only be crossed at high tide.] When the convoy mentioned by the officer arrived at the mouth of the river a German submarine was lying in wait for it, and succeeded in sinking two of the ships before being driven away.

At another time these women entertained certain officers from one of the American transports that was unloading at Bordeaux. They so cleverly won the friendship of these officers that they succeeded in securing an invitation to visit them on board the ship and have luncheon with them. The invitation was gladly accepted, and after the luncheon these two officers showed the women over the boat. They were shown the various instruments used to locate and escape from a submarine. The officers even went so far as to explain to them the new instruments used in steering the ship in a zigzag course. The poor fools paid dearly for their folly, however, for the ship was met by a German submarine within 200 miles of the coast and sunk. There was no doubt in our minds but that these women had in some way succeeded in sending the information out to the submarine that sank the boat, and that they were responsible for sending many good men to their death—men whom they had entertained and by whom they had been entertained.

We had no direct evidence, however, and we did not wish to arrest them until we knew just how they operated, who assisted them, and who was the ringleader. It was necessary that we obtain sufficient evidence to convict them, as we wanted to make an example of the entire number. We could have arrested them as dangereus to the public welfare, but that was altogether different from a conviction. This was an offense that was punishable by shooting, and we wanted to be absolutely sure that we were not sending innocent people to their death. Then, again, we wanted to get them all, so we decided to change our tactics and send one of our men on the case.

Attached to our department was a clean cut American officer who spoke French and German fluently—a man of the type that would attract the attention of this class of woman. This officer may have a sweetheart in the United States, so we will call him Jones, which was not his name. Jones was instructed to cultivate the acquaintance of these women, and if possible secure their story. He proceeded to the town, secured an adjoining room in the same hotel, and gave out as his reason for stopping there so long that he had been gassed and sent there to recover. He was well supplied with money and was soon successful in becoming acquainted with these women.

His first report, sent us a few days after his arrival, convinced us that we were shadowing the right people, and that he had found that they were signaling out of their room at night by flashlight. He also reported that at certain times they would hire a boat for a sail on the bay. He noted that they always hired the same boat, that they always went alone, and that he never could obtain an invitation to accompany them. They would go for a sail, then land on the opposite shore of the bay, where we had a naval hydroplane station, and visit some of the officers they knew who were stationed there.

After this report was received, at night we placed men in a boat out in the bay to watch the windows of the hotel through glasses. Of all the work entailed in securing the evidence in this case none was so trying to the patience of the men as was this lonely watch out in the harbor. Out there it would grow rough, cold, and damp, and sometimes it seemed as though the very mosquitoes must surely be in league with the Germans, for they certainly did their best to drive us away. Many nights our watch went unrewarded. But at length our vigil came to an end, for we saw them signaling with a small flashlight out of one of their rooms. Even in their signaling, however, they were very cautious, for they did not come directly to the window, but instead kept away back in their room, and the rays of the light were directed just one way. We watched them signal and then tried to locate the receiving station on the opposite shore. Not the sign of an answer did we see. Yet it was necessary, if we were to be entirely successful, that we find that link to the chain of evidence.

We decided to give them enough false information to keep them busy with their signaling, so another officer was sent to join the first. Jones had been very successful and was fast reaching the point where he could tell almost anything and have them believe it. He had centered his attention on one of the women—the one who had looked as if she were the weaker sister of the three and had the most jealous disposition. The arrival of the new officer gave them an opportunity to ply him with questions, and as he was well supplied with false information

WITH the A.E.F. in FRANCE

by Maj. C. E. Russell

he kept them busy. All this time they were signaling; yet we could not seem to locate the receiving station because of the clever manner in which the signaling was done. Finally we called in the navy to help us, and with the aid of a map they plotted out a small area where only it was possible to see the signals.

On this district we centered our efforts. We placed some of our men to watch the houses, and finally located the right place. This was a cottage occupied by a man who passed himself off as a Belgian who was in Paris when the war started and was unable to get back to his home. With the assistance of the French we arrested the male cook who was employed by this man and had one of our own men placed there as cook in his stead. This man soon discovered that after these signals were flashed and the women had gone on the boating trip, the man would also go out on the bay in his power boat. Each time he went out on such a trip he in turn that same night would flash signals toward the point where there were more cottages.

Our next move was to place a watch on the cottages on the point, where we finally located one that at night was sending out flashes to sea. This always took place at 9 o'clock, again at 10, and so on until a red light was seen to answer. We found that after such a night of signaling the man who lived in this house would swim out to a ledge off the shore; also that at other times there would appear out at sea two red lights for a second, then an interval, then two more red lights, and then darkness.

After we had learned all this we decided it was time to start in the real work of rounding them up. Our first move was to strengthen the hand of Jones by arresting him for desertion. As this was only a ruse he was immediately released. All this, however, gave him added prestige in the eyes of these women. He confided to the one toward whom he was devoting his attention that his papers were really forged, that he was an American deserter and a German who didn't intend to fight his own flesh and blood.

We were anxious to locate their headquarters, if possible. Accordingly, we arranged for Jones to forge a pass and invite them all on a trip to Paris. They went to Paris, remaining there a week, but although he tried his best, Jones could not get them to tell him anything about the headquarters.

The next step was to create strife among the women, and Jones, who had been making love to one of the women, threw her over for one of the others, thus causing jealousy. It is a truism that if you wish to induce a woman to talk first make her jealous. Jones, through his brother officer, let it be known that he intended to marry this other woman—and then the fun commenced. By his careful playing upon her jealousy, accusations and counter accusations flew so fast and furiously around the heads of our two officers that we soon had the complete story, as follows:

Cruising along the French coast was a German submarine whose duty it was to gather the information picked up by the various spies and to take it direct to Germany. When these women received word of the expected arrival or sailing of a convoy they would signal the news to the house on the other side of the bay, and this house would pass it on to the cottage on the point. From here they would pass it to the submarine, which in turn would wireless it to some submarine in the neighborhood. If, however, they had what was classed as general information they would send a different kind of message and then the next day would go out in the boat and drop the message overboard in a small bottle, which was weighted so it would sink, but which had a small float attached. This bottle was always dropped in a certain place.

The supposed Belgian would then come out in his boat, pick up the bottle, and keep it until he had notified the cottage that he had a message to pass on to Germany. He would next take his boat and sail around the point at the time the people there were in bathing, and, passing close to the shore, would hand or drop the message overboard to one of the swimmers, who came from the house from which we had seen them signaling to the submarine.

The swimmer would hide it under his bathing suit, carry it into the house, and keep it until he had a chance to notify the submarine that he had a message. After he knew the submarine had received his signals he would swim out to the ledge and secrete it there.

That night the submarine would send in a boat, pick up the message, and with other messages picked up along the coast return to Germany.

We now had full knowledge of their method and plenty of witnesses to convict. So the next move was to close the net and arrest the whole crowd. Even in this we had to be very cautious. Men were placed at the various cottages, all watches were set to agree, and at 9 o'clock the arrests were made. In the case of the Belgian he discovered us before we could reach his room, and just as we broke in the door we heard the shot with which he ended his worthless life. The man at the point was arrested, but before he could be brought to trial he succeeded in hanging himself in his cell. The rest were tried and convicted. The women and the ringleaders were sentenced to death, and the remainder were sent to the French penal colony in Africa.

WHILE THE GETTING WAS GOOD

by ONEY FRED SWEET

The College Professor's Wife Catches Up With Conditions.

THE woman with the little girl beside her gazed pensively from the car window upon the fields, with their patches of gold and seas of green beginning to stretch familiarly. She was going to the old home for her vacation, but somehow this time there was little thrill to the trip. It had been an exciting journey those times when she had taken it at the end of each of her college years—and the spring when the professor who had taught her love as well as Latin had accompanied her to Prairie Junction on their honeymoon. But she had just gone through a hard year trying to make the professor's shrunken dollars serve, and the child at her side had taken from her a good deal of the exuberance of youth. Yet it was the same old path toward the old home.

The old town would remember her—Ardis Moore, the girl. It had called upon her often enough in the bygone when a "highbrow" touch was needed to a program of any sort. They would all be interested in her daughter. But in place of the old pride there was a pang. Perhaps it was because of the conversation of the two men in the seat behind her that so distinctly reached her ears.

The two men behind her were discussing topics that she had sighed to be free from—profiteers and strikes and the high cost of living. Somehow she had felt that in going to the old home, in going back to the town hallowed by the memories of her care free youth, she would leave behind her the problems of her new home that during the last year had ground away the sweetness of existence. It was a modest old home to which she was going—the home in which she had romped through girlhood. She realized now that her father had been pretty much a dreamer; it had made no difference then. But had discontent crept everywhere? Was the price of food the topic of every breakfast table? Would she and her child find their visit looked upon as an added burden?

She had planned the trip with all the old anticipations—the making over of clothes for herself and Inez, the lunch on the train. And money, if that was all anybody thought about any more—well, she opened her bag to make sure that the $500 in bills was still there. It was her money from years of private tutoring—the money that she was going to return to her father in a bunch—money that he had lent her for her career in college.

She glanced back to the passing fields, seeing something of their old beauty. The same sort of tiger lilies were growing along the native prairie of the right of way. There was the familiar hum of insects—the same hum, no matter what the price of corn in the nearby fields. She looked up hurriedly as some one coming down the aisle spoke her maiden name.

"As I live and breathe," panted the lady. "On your way home, Ardis? Prairie Junction may be small, but I tell Ed you can't travel anywhere without meeting some one from there."

"It's Clara Hilkers, isn't it?"

"I don't wonder you didn't know me right at first. Ed's always jumping on me for getting heavier all the time. But you ain't changed much, except you look older. You always was thin."

Clara waited for the child to change to a vacant seat across the aisle and, adjusting her baggage, flopped herself beside her old schoolmate. She was returning home from a Chicago trip, and from hat, a season advanced, to her $20 pair of shoes, she bespoke a series of shopping tours in which the clerk's "These goods are high, madam, but they're going higher," had irritated not a whit.

"Let's see, you married a school teacher, didn't you, Ardis?" puffed Clara, rearranging her furs. "Don't take any offense if you ain't still married to him. I didn't mean nothing by it. I tell Ed he needn't be too sure of holding me. It's nothing nowadays if——"

"Prof. Moore stayed to take up summer work," interrupted Ardis. In the old days she could never have imagined herself envying one of the Hilkers girls—hoydens who had left off their schooling in the grades. Yet in that moment she was making comparisons. She knew that her own hair had been given no professional dresser's touch, that the things she wore had been haggled over with the thought of economy rather than style. And she had always felt so self-sufficient heretofore—had pitied girls like Clara Hilkers. The man behind her in the soiled linen suit was discussing the rise in land values. He was quoting figures that made her gasp—his prospective buyer for the Sam Jorgens farm at $340 an acre. She remembered it as being held at $100. And she was nearing home—the old home. It had crept everywhere then—this topsy-turvy money madness.

The train boy came along and Inez, across the aisle, tantalized by the proximity of the basket, lifted a face full of appeal.

"Aw, let the kid have it," laughed Clara. "You're only a kid once."

And Ardis capitulated, the exaggerated price flippantly demanded by the boy giving her a twinge. It was only a straw, but it was an added straw.

"Ed certainly cleaned up this year," Clara began, apropos of the incident. "He knew there was a shortage in his line and he hung on until he got his price. I never gave that fellow much credit for being clever—you remember Ed—but you've got to hand it to him. The fellow working for him asked for a dollar a week raise and Ed tacked another 20 per cent on his stuff 'on account of the increased cost of labor.' Got by with it, too. Well, Ed says this way, 'They're all doing it, and you've got to get while the getting is good.' Everybody's got money, more than they ever had before. The country's lousy with it."

"Everybody?" questioned Ardis. The train sped along.

"I suppose you've got a car," rattled Clara in accompaniment to the wheels of the train. "I told Ed if he didn't get rid of that tin can he's driven for two years I wouldn't be seen out with him again. People judge you by your car, don't you think so?"

"Yes," answered Ardis thoughttfully. "I guess they do."

She heard little of Clara's account of their car experiences. She was thinking, thinking about things that she had thought she was going to leave behind—the raise in the price of milk that had gone with the driver's increase in wages that had surpassed what her husband had always referred to as his "salary." Poor old professor with his four years of training and his midnight oil and his stress on character and culture! How proud she had been of him when they had visited the old town on their honeymoon! Even when the struggle had come with the days of reconstruction, the petty economies and the sacrifices had not embittered. His salary was fixed, he had explained with that faith of his; he was neither a capitalist nor a member of organized labor. His work, that was the important thing.

When she looked up she saw that Clara was appraising herself and her child. An hour before she would not have read so easily the other woman's thoughts. But she had been thinking along sordid lines and she had become sensitive to the sordid thoughts of others. She saw herself now a shabby woman going back home with a shabby child.

"We're almost there, aren't we, mamma?" Youth as represented in the child across the aisle was still Youth.

Ardis made no answer. The man in the soiled linen suit who had occupied the seat behind had risen with his baggage and gone to the front of the train. Ardis studied him as one studies the hitherto unseen owner of a voice that one has heard distinctly for miles.

There was no time for fond memories to swell the pulses as Ardis stepped with her child on the familiar depot platform. It was not an age for fond memories. She saw the man in the soiled linen suit take the bus to the hotel, then she walked swiftly toward the waiting automobile for hire.

"I want you to hurry us out to the Sam Jorgens place," she said crisply to the driver. And then to Inez, "It's only a few blocks to grandpa's, but we won't go there just yet. I want to show you the place, dearie, where I used to board when I taught school in the country."

It was all familiar country save for the touch of late summer upon it, but Ardis missed the nod of the goldenrod and the song of the meadow lark and the fact that the white clouds raced along with them in the blue above. Such things passed unappreciated. One could not be in harmony with everything, and Ardis was straining to be in harmony with the times.

They drove into the yard just as Sam Jorgens was coming in from the field for dinner.

"It's Ardis," he greeted. "It can't be that you want the school again. They've consolidated them all together now. I don't know——"

"No, no," she interrupted, and she tried to laugh. "I—that is we—we want to buy your farm."

"H-m-m-m," he sobered. "Well, I've talked of selling, but it isn't like the old days, Ardis. I would want around $300 an acre. I'm afraid——"

"It's a big price," she bargained in a voice that she could hardly believe was her own. And then—it was against her grain, but she added, "You know how I always loved the dear old place. Suppose we draw up a contract and that I pay you $500 down."

It was in a real estate office in town later that afternoon that Ardis dealt with the man in the soiled linen suit. He tried to get a better price from her on the 320 acres than $325 an acre, but inasmuch as he had his prospective buyer at $340 he was inclined to accept the terms, noticing that the lady's bloodless lips remained thin set.

And then Ardis and her child went down the street home—to the old home. The lot where the apple tree had stood had been sold to some one who had erected a mansion that caused the old house to shrink forlornly in its shadow. The porch needed paint, and the aged couple that came bewilderedly to greet them hinted all too soon of lives that were being lived on a saved daily dollar that wasn't a dollar any more, but Ardis was ahead of any explanations.

"We're here for my vacation," she gasped in a tone hinting of reaction from a strain, "and there's not to be a single mention of how much everything costs. Our car will be here in the morning, a better one than Ed Hilkers drives. Inez and I will have to wear these old things until our trunk gets here at the end of the week. I don't care, mother, if bacon costs a dollar a slice and Inez eats three slices."

She sank in one of the old rockers, held her hand to her head and laughed. But it wasn't the same sort of laughter of hers that had rung there in the old days. It was the sort of laugh that is hampered by bloodless lips thin set.

How I Improved My Memory In One Evening

The Amazing Experience of Victor Jones

"Of course I plate you! Mr. Addison Sims of Seattle.

"If I remember correctly—and I do remember correctly—Mr. Burroughs, the lumberman, introduced me to you at the luncheon of the Seattle Rotary Club three years ago in May. This is a pleasure indeed! I haven't laid eyes on you since that day. How is the grain business? And how did that amalgamation work out?"

The assurance of this speaker—in the crowded corridor of the Hotel McAlpin—compelled me to turn and look at him, though I must say it is not my usual habit to "listen in" even in a hotel lobby.

"He is David M. Roth, the most famous memory expert in the United States," said my friend Kennedy, answering my question before I could get it out. "He will show you a lot more wonderful things than that before the evening is over."

And he did.

As we went into the banquet room the toastmaster was introducing a long line of the guests to Mr. Roth. I got in line, and when it came my turn Mr. Roth asked, "What are your initials, Mr. Jones, and your business connection and telephone number?" Why he asked this I learned later, when he picked out from the crowd the 60 men he had met two hours before and called each name without a mistake. What is more, he named each man's business and telephone number, for good measure.

I won't tell you all the other amazing things this man did except to tell how he called back, without a minute's hesitation, long lists of numbers, bank clearings, prices, lot numbers, parcel post rates and anything else the guests gave him in rapid order.

When I met Mr. Roth—which you may be sure I did the first chance I got—he rather bowled me over by saying, in his quiet, modest way:

"There is nothing miraculous about my remembering anything I want to remember, whether it be names, faces, figures, facts, or something I have read in a magazine.

"You can do this as easily as I do. Anyone with an average mind can learn quickly to do exactly the same things which seems so miraculous when I do them.

"My own memory," continued Mr. Roth, "was originally very faulty. Yes it was—a really poor memory. On meeting a man I would lose his name in thirty seconds, while now there are probably 10,000 men and women in the United States, many of whom I have met but once, whose names I can call instantly on meeting them."

"That is all right for you, Mr. Roth," I interrupted, "you have given years to it. But how about me?"

"Mr. Jones," he replied, "I can teach you the secret of a good memory in one evening. This is not a guess, because I have done it with thousands of pupils. In the first of seven simple lessons which I have prepared for home study, I show you the basic principle of my whole system and you will find it—not hard work as you might fear—but just like playing a fascinating game. I will prove it to you."

He didn't have to prove it. His Course did; I got it the very next day from his publishers, the Independent Corporation.

When I tackled the first lesson, I suppose I was the most surprised man in forty-eight states to find that I had learned in about one hour how to remember a list of one hundred words so that I could call them off forward and back without a single mistake.

The first lesson stuck. And so did the other six.

Read this letter from Terrace J. McManus, of the firm of Olcott, Bonynge, McManus & Ernest, Attorneys and Counsellors at Law, 170 Broadway, and one of the most famous trial lawyers in New York.

> "May I take occasion to state that I regard your service in giving this system to the world as a public benefaction. The wonderful simplicity of the method and the ease with which its principles may be acquired especially appeal to me. I may add that I have already had occasion to test the effectiveness of the first two lessons in the preparation for trial of an important action in which I am about to engage."

Mr. McManus didn't put it a bit too strong. The Roth Course is priceless! I can absolutely count on my memory now. I can call the name of most any man I have ever met before—and I am getting better all the time. I can remember any figures I wish to remember. Telephone numbers come to mind instantly, once I have filed them by Mr. Roth's easy method. Street addresses are just as easy.

The old fear of forgetting (you know what that is) has vanished. I used to be "scared stiff" on my feet—because I wasn't sure. I couldn't remember what I wanted to say.

Now I am sure of myself, and confident, and "easy as an old shoe" when I get on my feet at the club, or at a banquet, or in a business meeting, or in any social gathering.

Perhaps the most enjoyable part of it all is that I have become a good conversationalist—and I used to be as silent as a sphinx when I got into a crowd of people who knew things.

Now I can call up like a flash of lightning most any fact I want right at the instant I need it most. I used to thing a "hair trigger" memory belonged only to the prodigy and genius. Now I see that every man of us has that same kind of memory if he only knows how to make it work right.

I tell you it is a wonderful thing, after groping around in the dark for so many years, to be able to switch the big searchlight on your mind and see instantly everything you want to remember.

This Roth Course will do wonders in your office.

Since we took it up you never hear anyone in our office say "I guess" or "I think it was about so much" or "I forgot that right now" or "I can't remember" or "I must look up his name." Now they are right there with the answer—like a shot.

Have you ever heard of "Multigraph" Smith? Real name H. Q. Smith, Division Manager of the Multigraph Sales Company, Ltd., in Montreal. Here is just a bit from a letter of his that I saw last week:

> "Here is the whole thing in a nutshell: Mr. Roth has a most remarkable Memory Course. It is simple, and easy as falling off a log. Yet with one hour a day of practice, anyone—I don't care who he is—can improve his memory 100% in a week and 1,000% in six months."

My advice to you is don't wait another minute. Send to Independent Corporation for Mr. Roth's amazing course and see what a wonderful memory you have got. Your dividends in increased earning power will be enormous.

New Way to Wash Your Face Beautifies Your Complexion

Beauty specialists agree that the secret of a perfect complexion is a thoroughly clean skin. A specialist has perfected a new substance, Ara-Mara, which is not only excellent for washing the face, but it cannot injure the most delicate complexion. It will not, can not grow hair. All you do is to gently massage it into the skin and wash with plain warm water. It not only cleanses thorougly, but it lightens the complexion much better than lemon juice or face bleach. It is surprising to see how fresh, clear and wholesome the skin becomes, even after only one proper treatment. Those who use it declare it has done more real good than any complexion treatment they ever used. It's a wonderful treatment for enlarged, clogged pores and irritations. It certainly is a great blessing to those who are afraid of wrinkles and who have dull, sallow, lifeless complexions. You can always get Ara-Mara at any big store. If you live out of town and your home dealer has not got it, you can order fifty cents' worth of Ara-Mara by mail of Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th Street, New York.

La-May Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well, it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. Save this notice.

"A dollar Pro-phy-lac-tic Hand Brush has performed yeoman service on my hide for nearly four years. It has removed grime and proved first aid to skin invigoration with unabated efficiency all that time.

"Today—this very morn, in fact—as I looked it over there was no sign of senile decay—no evidence of weakness—apparently it was there in all its youthful sturdiness.

"I never analyzed its make-up nor pondered on the why of its vitality. But I do know that many other brushes, not nearly so satisfactory, came and went ere its coming. We never really got to know them, but this fellow has become a household friend, as permanent as my easy chair and reading lamp, and we have grown to regard it as a lifetime investment."

MARIE DORO is almost due to be touring the screens again. At the present time she's over in England, you know, with Herbert Brenon, making pictures with the English background.

This slender, dark-haired lady with the brown come-hither eyes was born in Duncannon, Pa., in 1885. (She doesn't care who knows it.) She was educated in New York and started her stage career in 1901. "Granny" was her first venture. Later she made history with Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes"; in "Oliver Twist"; "The Morals of Marcus" and "Butterfly on the Wheel."

The first pictures made by Miss Doro were for the Paramount service, among them being "Oliver Twist" and "The Lash." In appearance this little star is five feet four inches tall, weighs 115 pounds. Whisper—she would like to be a great writer!

Mae Tinee.

BETTY COMPSON sprang into fame overnight as the star in "The Miracle Man." Before her marvelous interpretation in this picture she had merely figured in comedies. She started her screen career with Christie. Before then she was on the stage and figured mildly in vaudeville.

Miss Compson was born in Salt Lake City. She has blue eyes, light hair, swims and is somewhat of a musician.

Perhaps you saw her in "Crazy by Proxy," "A Bold, Bad Knight" or a dozen other slapsticks. Now, however, she is with George Loane Tucker at the Brunton Studios, Los Angeles, and methinks we're due to see her in some really fine productions. Anyhow—here's hoping so!

How to keep your nails looking freshly manicured all the time

YOUR nails look unbelievably lovely after their Cutex manicure!

They are so shapely, so exquisitely groomed; the cuticle edge at their base is as smooth, firm and even as if they had just had a professional manicure. You are delighted with their appearance.

Keep them looking lovely, always!

Spasmodic attention won't do it—having your nails manicured occasionally may only make the cuticle look worse in the long run. But, with a bottle of Cutex at hand, it is so easy to keep your cuticle always smooth and firm.

So little trouble, too

Once or twice a week, according to the rapidity with which your cuticle grows, dip the end of an orange stick, wrapped with absorbent cotton, into your bottle of Cutex and work it around the base of each nail, gently pressing back the cuticle. Carefully rinse the fingers in clear water, pressing back the cuticle as you dry your hands.

Thousands and thousands of women would tell you that in half the time it takes for the ordinary manicure, they can, with Cutex, keep their nails always in noticeably lovely condition. Use Cutex regularly, and you, too, will find that it does away entirely with the cuticle cutting and trimming that ruins the appearance of your nails.

"So smooth does Cutex leave the skin at the base of the nails, I never think of allowing my cuticle to be cut."

WILLIAM C. BULLITT may and may not go down in histor as the man who spilled the beans. At this writing it seems a bit uncertain. Anyway, as a former attache to the American peace commission, he testified before the senate committee on foreign relations that Secretary of State Lansing, in Paris, expressed opposition to the league of nations and a belief that the American people would reject it if they realized what it meant. Secretary Lansing is still advocating the league in his public utterances.

Not how they look—

but how they feel when you wear them

See where the waistline of this Kayser Knit union comes! Just where it should. That is why it doesn't "ride up" into the middle of your back.

An ordinary knit union suit. Read how foolishly it is made—no shaping at all.

A Kayser Knit Union Suit. Read how differently THIS is made—how carefully shap'd.

TO tell if underwear will fit, you have to put it on! And then, of course, it is too late to change it. Too often you have found knit cotton or lisle union suits whose shoulders went straight out, the sides went straight down—and the material was either "skimped" or too bunchy.

But now comes a knit union suit shaped to fit.

In Kayser Knit Underthings, the shoulders don't go straight out, they slope to fit your shoulders. The arm sizes are not just slits, they are shaped, and they are roomy. The back is narrower than the front—the front is shaped to fit—the fabric is soft and "gives"—the seat is specially shaped to stay closed!

In Kayser Knit Underthings you will find the same good line and style, the same careful sizing, the same attention to nice detail that have made Kayser Silk Underthings and Kayser Silk Gloves standards of value throughout the world.

ROXANE

makes finer cakes and pastries because a great portion of the gluten is removed in the milling. The amount of gluten in bread flour harms cakes and pastries, so all Domestic Scientists advise bread flour for bread only—cake flour for cakes. But one-fourth of the flour from a bushel of finest wheat is accepted for Roxane—just the softest, whitest, lightest part. Three-fourths are rejected. Yet the wheat is soft Southern Indiana winter wheat—the finest grown, for domestic use. Roxane makes amazing cakes.

Nucoa—The Butter That's Better

Of course, you like choice creamery butter—but how do you like its price? If you can buy something more delicious than the average cow butter—cleaner than some of it; therefore in every way better, for less money—isn't it worth trying?

Nucoa Nut Butter is the absolutely pure and creamy churning of coconuts and milk. It is made clean, wrapped in parchment and sold in sanitary cartons.

Costs less because coconuts are more plentiful than cows.

Instead of Cow Butter—

NUCOA

The Original Nut Butter

"Nucoa is just plain wonderful". It stretches the spending power of your dollar, and it's the highest grade nut butter ever churned. Made of coconuts but with the creamery butter taste. Buy a pound of Nucoa on our recommendation. You will never regret it.

Branded "Oleomargarine" to comply with the Federal law of 1886. Nut butter was then unknown. Nucoa contains no animal fat. You buy it white and color it yourself in a minute. Capsules containing the same color as used in cow butter are free. Directions surround each print. We are denied the right to color Nucoa at the churn. War and a Poet

Of all the strange things that have come out of the war, none is more amazing than the transformation it wrought in Gabriele d'Annunzio, the Italian poet and novelist. The beginning of hostilities found him rich, successful and luxurious, known for his erotic writings, his bizarre clothes, and his many lawless love affairs. He was an esthete, a dandy, and a philanderer.

At 51, an age when most men are rejected for army service, he learned to fly and showed such prowess as an aviator that he was mentioned many times in communiques for conspicuous bravery, elevated to the command of a squadron and hailed as one of Italy's most daring birdmen.

Now, at 55, he emerges as the firebrand leader of one of the most picturesque revolts in history, defying the allies and the peace conference, ignoring his own government and disconcerting the world at large by occupying Fiume with an army of personal followers. And this is the man who, six years ago, was noted as the possessor of two dozen silk dressing gowns!

PART 6

The Thin O'Line vs. the Crinoline

by Corinne Lowe

THE hats, reading from left to right, are a Henry the Second mode carried out in velvet and satin in two tones of old blue and set off with old blue ostrich plumes tipped with silver; a white felt turban embroidered in jet and silver; a black velvet which, trimmed with sable and sable tinted ostrich, shows one of the popular "off the face" models of the fall, and a Russian head-dress effect in gray duvetyn corded in silver edged with castor fur, and completed by tassels of dull gold. The hat in the circle below is a back velvet faced with Talbot's new tone, ivory, and covered by ostrich, also in ivory, tiny fronds of which are pinned down by ivory pins.

If it is true that straight is the line of duty, we evince a strange preference for duty, for the simple, slim silhouette of the above gray duvetyn trimmed with bronze black satin is perhaps even smarter than the bouffante line.

The long waist of so many recent Paris models is illustrated in this frock of old blue satin and black velvet. It is worn with one of the popular hindoo turban effects—this of black velvet finished with aigrette of monkey fur.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

CRINOLINES may be in, but it isn't exactly a case of Mary-Go-Round. Our modern crinolines go only half way around. The fact of it is that these bouffante frocks of the fall are very unlike the crinolines which back in the late fifties used to eclipse the parlor sofa and almost cover a side of the wall. For the distinguishing feature of the new silhouette is that the front is generally flat. It is only at the sides and back that bunchiness is affected.

One of the most popular ways of achieving this side fullness is by the aprons which are doubled over on either hip, extended to the back, and tied in there by a narrow belt. Then there are dance frocks which are feather boned at the sides and back. But these hip hedges are not by any means universal. The fact of it is that the crinoline style was a summer one made up for Paris fashionables who practice their fashion at Deauville. And it is a significant fact that both Callot and Cheruit, two crinoline pioneers of this July mode, have come out with the narrow silhouette for autumn.

In the second place, the full skirted, accented on the hip frock was a novelty of the summer. Here in America we shall probably wear it for afternoon and evening. But the real novelty is, as usual, found in the old thing. And the old thing is the narrow silhouette.

We are showing today two frocks illustrating the slim mode as the conservative, well dressed woman will want to wear it. At the lower left is a gray duvetyn trimmed with black-brown satin and old bronze buttons and accompanied by a Louis XIV. hat of tete de negre velvet and ostrich. At the lower right the long waisted style of this fall is given in a frock of old blue satin with corsage of black velvet—we have already spoken frequently of the new manner of making the bodice of material contrasting with the skirt—and finished with a deep sash combining the old blue satin with black brocade. The completing touch is given by tassels of black jet. With this costume is worn one of those Hindoo turbans of which one sees so much. This is of black velvet and the aigrette is of monkey fur.

Women may be changeable, but their hats this year are even more so. One may wear a beret or a tam or a wide brimmed sailor or a Louis XVI. hat tilted up in the back, down in the front. There are all sorts of adaptations of the tricorne and there are Breton sailors. And you find among the eccentricities more hats that echo some historic type than have been assembled for a long time. One of these is a small turban, which is so much like that worn by Mme. de Stael in her famous portrait, that it has been called the de Stael.

One of such picture hats we show on this page at the upper left. This was inspired by the mode of Henry II. of France, and it is made of velvet and satin in two tones of old blue. The ostrich plumes are old blue tipped with silver.

The millinery colors most favored by the French are black and white. One sees, however, much jade, much blue—ranging from soft old blue to the brilliant royal—jade, brown, and the nasturtium shades. This latter is much used at present in charming, wide brimmed felt hats which are now taken out of the domain of purely sports wear and used as the winter's substitute for the leghorn. One of such hats noted recently was a lovely nasturtium shade faced with black velvet and piled about the crown with ostrich plumes in tete de negre shade. It was really charming.

It is quite a dressy little turban of felt, in fact, which we show at the left of the center group. Made of white, it is dashingly embroidered in black jet and silver. Right below it in the center of the group comes a black velvet set off with sable and sable colored ostrich. And, by the way, these off the face styles are perhaps the smartest of the season, which is not good news for the woman with the off the face nose!

The hat which imitates the Russian headdress! We don't seem to be able to convalesce from it, do we? At all events, this becoming mode is the one followed in the hat at the right of the group—a gray duvetyn corded with silver, edged with castor fur, and adding tassels of dull gold to its previous treasure of silver.

Fighting the High Cost of Dress

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

TALKING about the high cost of shoes and dresses and hats is a long way from being listed among the leading platitudes. It is too live a subject. And too vitally a part of our daily care to be glossed over!

How to make $10 do the work of $20 is the great mathematical problem every one of us is trying to work out on our own little slates. Trying to make the weekly stipend balance with the list of necessities for a reasonably decent appearance is the sum we are falling down on.

But there's one thing. We cannot just lie right down on the job and not show some fight.

"Well, how are you going to fight it?" asks a girl who wants to know.

To help her and sisters of hers with the same problem I went out investigating a little bit. What I found was not that her story about the high cost of anything from a handkerchief up made it almost forbidding was all wrong. I found that with many companies where there was a loan system in connection with the welfare work girls on small salaries are forced to borrow money to help out. And that there have been more calls for loans since this last high cost panic than ever before.

No interest being charged on these loans by employers in many cases made it advisable for the girls to borrow there, if money has to be borrowed.

But what a pity that being in debt has to be added to one's other living troubles these days! It has a way of wearing the heart to a discouraging degree, and that in turn reacts on the health and energy.

I was getting a bit discouraged over the investigation until a discovery was hit upon by the head of a welfare department of one of the big commercial houses.

"Yes," she said, "trying to keep up an appearance these days is a job in itself. And I am right here to state that I think the girl who earns her living and has home obligations to meet, which few of them are without, and can keep herself up to par every way, is made of exactly the same good fighting stuff as our young men who marched away to war, and deserve medals for valorous conduct.

"The old story, too, that it doesn't matter how you look if your work is O. K. is extinct. A girl has to look well to get on. In my fifteen years' experience in this work I say unqualifiedly that the girl who gets on is the one who does keep up her appearance.

"But," she said, "it is not the spender who gets on. It is the judicious buyer. But more important than that, it is the girl who puts physical perfection first, who puts it ahead of dress.

"And that's where the girls now can put up their best fight against the high cost of dress. It may sound like tommyrot to say a girl can save on dress if she keeps her skin and her hair and her nails in excellent order. But it is true! She can! And these latter are things that need very little if any money expenditure.

"Another thing, too important to forget to mention, is the absolute cleanliness which advertises the daily bath fan.

"Some one laughingly summed up the situation the other day with: 'We'll have to put up a soap and water fight.' And when you think it over there is much to it.

"Anybody in doubt, I ask them," she added, "to just take a walk through the department stores where the girls are in uniform black. I never go down the aisles and look over the girls behind the counters but I am moved to the protoundest admiration at the general smartness displayed. It is not the dress, although that must be neat and have immaculate collars and cuffs. But it is the well groomed hair, the manicured nails, and the clean skin.

"A thing I have noticed in my experience here. When an employer or department manager is looking for a girl for promotion it is never the girl with the expensive outfits who is chosen. It is the girl who looks wholesome. It is the girl who wears sensible, becoming things. It is the girl whose hair and collars and skin and teeth and nails are what they ought to be."

Isn't there psychology worth thinking over in that?

There is!

So, rules for the big fight might be made to read like this:

First, the daily tubbing—morning and night, if possible—but once a day sure. A sponging, if by any chance the tubbing is not possible. As some woman said on a camping trip: 'I feel cleaner when I sponge because I work twice as hard to get clean. In the tub I let the water do it." This is the only way possible to keep clothing and body free from body odors. If there is a tendency to excessive perspiration use a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water, and apply it at night before retiring. Make three applications and then an application once a week to ward off recurrence.

Second: The hair to be kept free from oiliness and dandruff has to be shampooed twice a week at least. Then brush it every night for five minutes to get the day's dust and dirt out and you will be amazed at the end of a month what this regular five minute brushing will do to the improved health and looks of the hair.

Third: The finger nails must be given a few minutes' cleaning every night before retiring to save time in the morning. A manicure once a week which you can do yourself. I will mail you instructions if you do not know how to do it yourself. They're simple.

The skin: The skin will be taken care of with the daily bath to an amazing degree. But give it an extra little scrubbing at night with warm water and the soap that best agrees with your skin. Rinse and then rinse again in cold water and if you can possibly arrange rub a little ice over the skin to close the pores. A tiny little skin food or cold cream massaged into the skin at night after this wash will preserve the youth of the skin.

Then a few clothes virtues, such as keeping the heels straightened, the waists clean if it necessitates washing out every night, and the same of collars and cuffs.

Now what do you think of that for fighting principles?

Enjoying the Feast.

This is one I remember well. My husband was superintendent of the public schools, and was quite fond of inviting home to dinner a teacher or pupil informally. He was fond, also, of Pumpkin pie, and on one of these occasions I made a beautiful pie and set it on a small stool on the back porch to cool. As my husband and his guest were about to sit down to the table they passed a window looking out on the porch, and lo and behold, there was a circle of the neighbor's chickens surrounding that pie and enjoying a feast! It certainly was a funny sight, but not one I could enjoy.

Plenty of Change.

The most embarrassing moment I ever experienced was when I entered a postoffice to buy a 2 cent stamp with a $5 bill. The clerk and onlookers had a hard time to suppress their hilarity, but when I received all the $4.98 I gathered it up and made a hasty exit look slow.

Father at the Races.

My aunt's most embarrassing moment happened when she went to the races with a young man. The day before the races she asked him if he would bet on the horses. He said that he did not believe in betting. She told him she was glad of that, because no one in her family believed in betting. The next day they both went to the races. When a certain horse was nearing the finish line, to her extreme mortification, she saw her father jump up and shout: "Go it, Buck! I've got $200 on you!"

Not Hubby's Car.

The other day I was going to see a movie, but, before leaving the house, I pinned a note on the table for "friend hubby" saying that I was going to the theater, and to come over. I sat through the picture, and, as hubby had not come, I left the show. Seeing what I believed to be our green car in front, I hopped in, thinking that hubby would soon be out. A young man came up to the car, and said, "Pardon me, but you are in my car." Somehow I managed to explain how I happened to be in his car, but after this I shall always be sure whose car I'm in.

There for a Good Time.

While entertaining our club one evening our hostess felt it her duty to ask a member to sing. Realizing what we would have to endure, and without stopping to think, I suddenly exclaimed, "O, we came here to have a good time; let's play cards." The painful silence which followed, together with the look which the would-be singer gave me, made me truly experience the most embarrassing moment of my life.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

By Jane Eddington.

PEPPERS AND HOW TO USE THEM.

MAGNUM dulce, which means great sweet; new sweet upright salad; sweet mountain; ruby king; fancy wrinkled; Neapolitan salad; Chinese giant; bull nose, of which the sweet mountain is an improved type; cayenne, long, red, and hot; cayenne pickling, dwarf and good to dry; celestial, ornamental; cherry, small and round and good for pickling; elephant's trunk, long, mild, bright scarlet; mammoth golden queen, large, yellow; golden dawn, mild, yellow; red chili, good, hot, hot pickling; red cluster, small and pungent; sweet Spanish monstrous; tabasco, hottest of all—all peppers! Such are the homely and picturesque, the romantic and even heavenly names of some of the pepper family.

Peppers; green, red, and yellow salad; cayenne; peppers drying; slices of stuffed peppers for garnishing.

We have three classes of peppers in this list, of which the salad pepper is the chief, as far as wide use and increasing popularity are concerned. The only name for this class in the old American cook books was "bell pepper"—its shape determining this name, as the various shapes today determine so often what each species shall be called. Last year "they" took a perfectly old sort of pepper, with a single snub nose instead of a nose with a trefoil point, or one with a "quad" point, and called it by a perfectly new name, dumdum. Whether that name will persist or not remains to be seen. I hope it does not.

The pickling and drying peppers are mostly hot, except those used for "mangoes," and some of the salad peppers are deceptively hot. When a sweet pepper is hot we say it grew on a hot bush. Because we may get such peppers in the market, it is always safe to taste a pepper, in preparing it for a salad or for seasoning, unless we know our bush. The green capsicums—the cosmopolitan and scientific name for peppers—seem, many of them, to have grown on hot bushes this season, for they have been neither mild nor sweet, which is the proper definition for a salad pepper.

The seeds of even the sweetest green pepper are yours sincerely hot. Some cooks even think this seed heat is radiated into that inflation or inside room in which these seeds grow; therefore, after removing the seeds carefully, so as not to "pepper burn" their hands, they rinse out the interior most carefully. This is a wise precaution, even if the idea of the cooling of the room is fanciful, for one pepper seed in the throat will produce a close imitation of strangulation. As to the fruits of plants having temperatures, just pick the next snowberry you see. You will find it has a refrigerator temperature, even on a hot day.

It is not alone on account of the tricky seeds that I would hesitate in advising any but the best and most careful cooks to use the salad pepper generously. I do not at all agree with the statement that "no salad can fail to be improved by slices of green pepper, cut thin and lengthwise." It depends entirely on who makes the salad. Unless the salad is a good blend of materials and dressing, I think the pepper adds a crude taste.

Filled or stuffed peppers make no appeal to my taste, but if cooks have learned to do the work well, the filling may be deliciously flavored with the help of the pepper. Fish hash, made of salt codfish and potato, blended with a little cream sauce, may be raised from its plane of middle class to high class cookery by stuffing it into peppers properly prepared. This means that the peppers are blanched before they are filled, so that they will retain a good part of the green color after their oven experience, and not be that ugly black shade which too many of the stuffed peppers we see served have.

Yes, the care taken in the preparation of peppers has not only much to do with their agreeableness of flavor, but greatly to do with their appearance as well.

By the way, an all too common direction for the preparation of peppers is, "cut off one end and remove seeds." I have found this direction in no end of recipes, but which end? For general use it is certainly best to cut off the seed or stem end this way: Run a slender pointed knife around the stem cap from a quarter to a half inch outside the lid, so that the cone of seeds will come out whole. You can cut into the pulp and not remove any cap. The pith part of the seed cone, after the seeds are scraped off, may be used to flavor soup, sauces, boiled fish, and so forth. If there are seeds along the ribs or filaments, remove them. Most cooks remove the filaments also.

A wasteful use of the pepper is that where only nice slices from the nose end are cut off and filled with cheese and the rest thrown away. If wrapped in waxed paper to prevent it from drying up, part of a pepper may be kept in the icebox for days. The upper part of the pepper pod is too much inflated to make nice slices for filling with a salad dressing, cheese, etc. Such preparations make pretty garnishes to salads and meats, and it is not necessary to eat the pepper, if we do not like it raw and with the skin on.

Any woman who can cook at all ought to be able to use sweet green peppers effectively in the sauce foundation often called Creole or Spanish. This may be no more than one onion, one tomato, and one cut-up green pepper, gently fried together and used to cook some vegetable in or some fish, or to warm up meat in or to use over a fish or meat or vegetable, served separately. Or these may be stewed together, the tomato furnishing enough liquid, and mildly seasoned with salt and butter for a delicious sauce. One of the nice things about this is its great adaptability both in use and in quantity. You may use almost any proportion you choose of any of the ingredients.

One of the homely and simple uses of the green pepper is that of flavoring cold boiled potatoes warmed up in milk, with it, finely chopped, calling the mixture potatoes O'Brien. Careful cooks do not have cold boiled leftover potatoes, unless they plan to have them, and this dish is all the better if the potatoes are freshly cold. Nicely chopped and cooked with the milk, and finely chopped green pepper, and perhaps a little red, until well bound together this mixture may be folded like an omelet.

Green pepper blanched, skinned, and chopped fine is an addition to almost any cabbage salad, especially one served with a sour cream dressing. And some people like green pepper in a fish salad or with it, as well as they like cucumber. But this, again, depends on the nice work you do in preparing the pepper. When you can taste the separate ingredients in a salad when you have a portion in your mouth, or, rather, when you get the same taste from these that you would if there was nothing else with them, I consider that the salad has not been well prepared.

From Spain and the Spanish otherwheres and from Italy we get a world of pepper sauces. The foods in such countries generally make up in strong flavor for what they lack in quantity. The "beef eating" nation of history still eats its foods in great quantities and almost without flavorings. You "takes your choice," but it requires more patience, more nice work, more liking for food as a fine and worth while thing, not a degrading thing, to use flavors nicely, and the pepper plant's main contribution to a dietary is flavor. It is astonishing how many refined people there yet are in the world who think it a little disreputable to like food, or, at any rate, to confess to that liking.

As to the pepper, there are notable dishes geographically that depend for character upon it. For color and shape a small red pepper cooked whole in stews and other combinations is as beautiful as any jewel of any country in the world.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of sesquation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Six-teen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

By Elizabeth O. Hiller.

Breaded Tripe.

The best tripe for breading and broiling is the fresh honeycomb tripe. Wipe tripe as dry as possible, dredge with fine cracker meal; then dip in olive oil or melted butter, drain well, and roll again in fine cracker meal. Place in a well greased double wire broiler and broil five minutes on the smooth side. Turn and broil the other side five minutes under the gas flame or over a bed of glowing coals. Remove to a hot serving platter, spread generously with butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and serve with tomato sauce.

Chicago Cooler.

Put two tablespoons of rich cream into a tumbler and pour on one bottle (split) of sarsaparilla and stir thoroughly until blended and foamy; serve immediately. If imported sarsaparilla is used four tablespoons of cream may be used in each glass in place of two, as directed above. A dash of nutmeg may be added at the conclusion of beating.

Stuffed Tomatoes.

Wipe and cut thin slices from the stem ends of six uniform sized tomatoes. With a teaspoon carefully scoop out the seeds and soft pulp; sprinkle inside with salt, invert on a plate, and set aside in a cool place for half an hour. Cook two tablespoons of butter with one tablespoon of finely chopped onion until slightly colored, add one-half cup of finely chopped cold cooked chicken or veal, two tablespoons of finely chopped cold cooked lean ham, and one-half cup of soft bread crumbs; moisten with tomato pulp, and season with salt, pepper, and a few drops of tobasco sauce. Place in buttered custard cups, sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs, and bake in a hot oven until tomatoes are soft. Remove from cups, place on rings of hot buttered toast, and serve around a roast shoulder of veal.

Chocolate Bread Pudding.

Soak two cups of stale bread crumbs in one quart of scalded milk, thirty minutes; melt two squares of unsweetened chocolate in a saucepan, placed over hot water; add one-third cup of sugar and enough milk taken from the bread and milk to make of the consistency to pour; add to mixture with one-third cup of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, one-half cup of blanched and shredded almonds, one teaspoon of vanilla, and two eggs slightly beaten. Turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake one hour in a moderate oven. Serve with hard sauce or sweetened cream.

Uncooked Pepper and Cabbage Relish.

Remove the stems, seeds, and white portion from six mild green peppers and one large hot red pepper. Wash peppers and chop moderately, then pass them twice through a meat chopper, using a fine knife for the second grinding. Remove the wilted and imperfect leaves and hard core from one large firm head of white cabbage and finely chop [do not grind cabbage]. Add prepared peppers and mix thoroughly. Then add three tablespoons of white mustard seeds, two tablespoons of salt, one cup of sugar, and cold pure cider vinegar to cover. Mix well and turn in sterilized pint glass fruit jars, seal and store in a cool place. The relish may be used at once or if stored as directed and pure vinegar is used, it will keep all winter. Serve with raw oysters, clams, lobster cocktails, etc. Two large mild white onions may be finely chopped and mixed with the cabbage and peppers if the flavor is desired.

Chili Sauce.

Scald, peel, and chop twenty-five medium sized ripe tomatoes; turn into a colander to drain off superfluous water. Cut a slice from the stem ends of two large red peppers, remove the seeds and the white portion; finely chop. Peel and finely chop six medium sized white onions. Wash, scrape, and finely chop six heads of crisp celery. Mix vegetables thoroughly, add one pint of pure cider vinegar, one and one-half cups of sugar, one and one-half tablespoons of salt, and one-half a nutmeg grated. Tie in a square of cheesecloth the following spices: One-half tablespoon of cloves, one-half tablespoon of allspice, and one tablespoon of stick cinnamon broken in small pieces. Add spices to mixture, turn all into a preserving kettle, and bring to the boiling point and let cook slowly two and one-half hours. Remove spice bag. Turn sauce while boiling hot into sterilized half pint glass jars, put on new rubbers, set covers in place, and seal. Store in a cool, dark place. To prevent fading, wrap jars in brown paper, label and store.

Two Drops Will Do It Without Fuss or Trouble. Never Fails.

There's only one way to get rid of a corn, and that is to peel it off as you would a banana skin. There is only one corn remover in all the world that does it that way, and that is "Gets-It." It is because of this fact that "Gets-It" is today the biggest seller among corn-removers on this planet. It means the end of "corn-fiddling." For hard corns, soft corns, very old corns, young corns, corns between the toes and calluses, it means a quick, certain finish. "Gets-It" is applied in 2 or 3 seconds. All you need is 2 or 3 drops. As easy to do as signing your name. It does away forever with tape, plasters, bandages, knives, corn-diggers, scissors, files and blood-bringing razors. Ease your corn-pains, be corn-free at last.

There's No Corn "Gets-It" Will Not 'Get.'

"Gets-It," the only sure, guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by E. LAWRENCE & CO., Chicago, Ill.

44th ANNIVERSARY SALE

NOTHER YEAR! Another stone in the structure of honest service this store has reared! And today the same forward-looking policy that has built up The Fair from the little 16x80 foot store of 1875 to the vast institution that it now is still holds this store steadfastly to the task of value-giving, of keeping up quality and keeping down price.

This is our forty-fourth birthday, and we are celebrating with a week of extraordinary sales that will stamp this as one of the most remarkable events Chicago has ever known. In every section of the store you'll find values unmatched and, we believe, unmatchable, for profits have been disregarded, scarcity of goods and present high costs entirely lost sight of, in our determination to give the people of Chicago bargains they would not soon forget. To tell of the first day's offerings requires four pages—four pages chock full of good news for the thrifty shopper—and every day throughout the week will bring forward scores of new bargains. (In some cases, where quantities are limited, it will be impossible to fill mail or phone orders; watch for such notations in this advertisement.)

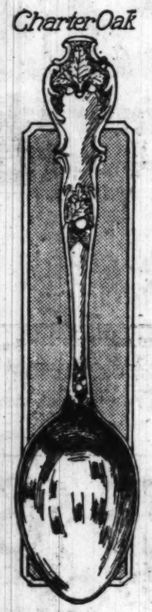
1847 Rogers Bros. Silverware

(Discontinued Patterns)

At Half Price

Charter Oak



Sharon

DURING the war Rogers Brothers (1847) found it necessary to reduce the number of patterns they were making and so, for the first time in many years, discontinued some patterns. This has made possible the several extraordinary sales we have held in the past year. However, we are now informed that we have every dollar's worth remaining of the beautiful Sharon and Charter Oak designs, and that it will probably be many years before another such opportunity will arise.

We have about $10,000 worth of these two beautiful French gray designs of Rogers' "seventy-year plate," and each piece carries the same guarantee you would receive if you paid the full regular price. It's a wonderful chance to stock up—but you'll have to act promptly.

Because of limited quantities of some items, we cannot accept mail or phone orders.

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bess "The Tribune," Chicago.

Harriet and her mother were returning from a visit to the shopping district when they were overtaken by a hailstorm. The mother, being much frightened, told little Harriet to pray, omitting, however, to tell her just what she was to pray. Harriet sweetly complied, praying "Dear Lord, please send us some more of the nice little balls, I loves to eat 'em." K. S.

Bobby and Mildred went into the country to visit their cousins, Willie and May. At home they were in the habit of attending Sunday school, and their mother packed their best clothes in a separate suitcase. But as their time was mostly spent in fishing and picnics in the woods, the children did not know when Sunday came. On their return their mother found their Sunday clothes had not been worn and asked them why they had not dressed up on the Sabbath. "Why, mother," Bobby replied seriously, "there wasn't any Sabbath in the country."

We had learned the family name of our new neighbors and so were somewhat surprised when their small daughter, while playing with our children, announced that her surname differed from the rest of the family.

"Why, that isn't your mama's name, is it?" I asked.

"O, no, but she got married again, and you see I stayed just like I always was."

Kenneth had a few lines to speak at a pageant which the kindergarten was giving. He knew them perfectly when he left home, but upon his appearance before the audience he was seized with stage fright.

"I thought you knew every word of that piece," said his mother afterwards.

"It was in my head, but I ran out of voice," said Kenneth.

We were at the movies to see Mildred Harris (Mrs. Charlie Chaplin), and the picture proved to be rather pathetic. The picture was about half over when I heard a little boy behind me say: "Mother, I don't see anything funny about this picture."

"It isn't supposed to be," answered his mother.

"Well," said the little boy, "Isn't that Mrs. Charlie Chaplin?" McK.

An older brother had recently married and Bobby had been told that he could call his new sister-in-law Mary, instead of Miss Harbour as before. A few nights later, when a devoted admirer of his older sister was entertained at dinner, Bobby caused much embarrassment by inquiring: "Mother, how soon can we begin calling Mr. Carter Mary?"

While visiting my brother in the country I observed that his daughter had no playmates and promised that I would send one of my own little girls out to stay with her during vacation.

"When Verona visits you she will bring more sunshine into your life," I remarked.

"But we don't want more sunshine, Aunt Emma. What we wants now is more rain," replied the small farmerette.

Robert had finished the evening meal and had politely asked to be excused. As he started to play his mother began serving those still at the table with watermelon. Realizing he had left too soon, Robert ran to his place and as he climbed up in his chair said: "I'd forgotten the watermelon, so excuse me back."

During a recent oil tank fire, while the city was enveloped in a dense black smoke, Richard was told by his mother that the oil tanks were burning; a playmate suggesting that it was castor oil, Richard said: "Let it burn."

We have been trying to teach son the wisdom of buying a small amount of good candy, rather than a larger amount of an inferior grade. Recently he returned from the corner grocery with a small amount of pure candy and remarked, "Mother, I see now that the cheaper it is, the gooder it ain't."

M. B.

Frances was asked by her mother if she enjoyed the party she had been to that afternoon.

"O, I had a lovely time. There was such a lot of ice cream and things. But, mother, do you know Janie ate twenty-one cocoanut cookies?"

"Frances," said her mother in shocked surprise, "how could you have been so rude as to notice?"

"Well, you see, I could not help but notice, 'cause it was five more than I had room for."

R. W. P.

Betty was throwing the books over the library floor, when her small brother, Bobby endeavored to stop the destruction by main force, but making Betty scream. Aunt Bess hastened upon the scene, saying, "Why didn't you use a little tact, Bobby in getting Betty to stop?" Bobby looked up thoughtfully, saying, "Why, Aunt Dess, I couldn't, 'cause I don't know where you keep your tacks."

The surroundings of their new home in the city didn't look promising to my niece Dorothy, so after gazing disconsolately out of the window upon the rows of houses and busy streets she said, "O, can't we walk somewhere, mother, and find a bluff with a pump on it and have a picnic?"

George had been away from his mother about a week and had just begun to miss her. One night as he was undressing for bed he came running in with great excitement.

"Is mother here?" said he in great surprise at not seeing her there.

"No, son; why?" replied his father.

"Well, it heard like 'er," was the answer.

A demure little maid, the only child of fond parents, was undergoing a strenuous lesson in time telling. The effects of her lesson were shown the next day, when a visitor, after asking many questions of the small maiden, as visitors always do, came to the inevitable question, "And what is your age, my dear?"

"O," came the happy reply, "'bout half past free, I think."

NEGRO SUPERSTITIONS by DORIS BLAKE

YOU have undoubtedly heard about wearing a rabbit's foot for luck. Do you know what is the significance of it, where it is to be carried, and why it is lucky? Well, here it is:

"The rabbit's foot is esteemed a powerful talisman to bring good fortune to the wearer and protect him from all dangers," says an authority. "As this belief is more or less common throughout the south it may be well to state how the charm is prepared, for the benefit of those who wish to be put on the royal road to health, wealth, and prosperity.

"It must be the left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit, and that is one caught in a graveyard, although one captured under the gallows would probably answer as well. It must be taken at the midnight hour and the foot amputated. The foot must then be carried secretly in the pocket until by chance the owner happens upon a hollow stump in which water has collected from recent rains. The foot is then dipped three times into this water and the charm is complete.

"Among the Negroes and uneducated whites of the south the reputed possessor of this potent talisman is at once feared and respected."

Some of the other Negro superstitions are:

When you go opossum hunting, grease the left front foot of the dog with bacon fat and slit the left ear of the first opossum you catch to insure good luck.

Two hairs from a rabbit's tail and an inch of opossum tail will secure the possessor from sudden death, if worn in a small bag over the heart.

If you put your shoes under the bed at night with the toes turned out you will never travel. Turn the toes in for luck.

If you kill ants, the rest of the colony will begin to dig your grave.

Put pennies in a dead Negro's eyes and he will get to heaven.

When you hang a horseshoe for luck, hang it always with the gate down. Keep the luck in.

Take the white hair from an old Negro's head, roll it into a little ball, burn it, make a wish while you are burning it, and your wish will come true.

Soak a string in turpentine, tie it around the ankles to keep the rheumatism away. Wear a rag soaked in turpentine to keep "misery pains in the back" away.

If you accidentally put on an undershirt wrong side out, you must leave it that way or you'll have bad luck.

If a black cat crosses your path from left to right in the dark of the moon, it's extremely bad luck. To break the spell make a cross with your right foot in the dust and spit in the center of the cross.

Never tell fortunes with an old deck of cards.

To go through a graveyard safely throw salt over your left shoulder.

To have luck at craps, rub the palm of your hand with resin concealed in your pocket.

When you clasp your hands behind your neck the old Negroes say you are praying for your mother's death.

Stick a straw in your hair to cure hiccoughs.

A superstition among Negroes is to the effect if you have a knack of baking cake or doing anything else particularly well, you must on no account teach any one else or you will lose your knack.

You will lose a good friend if any garment becomes unpinned and drops off.

Negroes consider it unlucky for a hairpin to drop from the hair. It signifies a loss of a friend or crosses in love.

If in taking off your shoes they fall in the form of a cross, it is a sign of a journey.

If your shoes tear in the back, you will never be able to save any money.

Drop your shoe—a letter for you.

If you have a cross in the left boot heel made of nails, it will keep off evil spirits.

If you're struck with a broom, you'll have to go to the work house. If a broom is pointed at you or passed over your body, that act shortens your life.

Upset the sugar bowl and it is a sign you will receive money.

If two persons happen to strike their heads together, they will soon become bitter enemies.

If you upset a tub of water, you must look for trouble. It means a poor, lazy, and spendthrift husband.

The skin of a rabbit's stomach tied around a baby's neck helps it cut its teeth.

A bridegroom mustn't use a red handkerchief on his wedding day or he'll wipe away his wife's affections.

The more beads one can get by borrowing or buying the better luck a couple will have after marriage.

If a person caves in the earth with his or her foot when standing by a grave, it is a sure sign of his or her death.

It is a Negro saying that if a man has buried three wives he will bury six.

Negroes do not share the prejudice of the whites against cross eyes. They believe that a man or woman so afflicted as that to be a special favorite of the dark powers, to be protected against many ills, notably against snake bites, and even to have in some cases the power of infecting others with good luck. The Negro girl whose eyes look in opposite directions has no trouble in getting married, whether she be of good figure and otherwise pleasing features or not. If any of her children also have crossed eyes, she becomes celebrated, and is looked upon as "sho 'nuff cunjer."

To cross the street from corner to corner, repeating three times "bread and butter," is good luck.

Spit over your left shoulder when meeting your enemy and it will prevent him from doing you any harm.

On starting out on a journey, spit on the first stone you see so as to come back safely.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

About Kissing.

"Dear Miss Blake—I am a young girl of 16 years engaged to marry a boy of 18. Now before we were engaged I used to kiss him good night and allow him to put his arm around me when we were in his car. Now, after him taking me to dances and spending his money on me, don't you think it right of me to allow him to do so? After our engagement he told me he admired me because I wasn't a killjoy or 'old maidish.' What can you say about this? Please explain why you don't approve of kissing.

"PEGGY."

Perhaps, Peggy, it's because I'm older than you are and much wiser in the ways of the world. You see, Peggy, you're not married yet. You're only engaged, and there's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip, you know. Some day when you're a little older you will realize the truth of my convictions on this subject.

Now She's Sorry.

"Dear Miss Blake: As I have been a steady reader of your column I am now coming to you with a story of my own. I have been keeping company with a young man for seven months and he claimed that he cared for me very much: I likewise.

"I told him one night that I would not see him that following Saturday night, as I did not feel as though I would care to go out and I would be busy. He seemed rather peeved about it and said he would call me up during the week, which he did. After talking a while he told me that he could not see me Sunday, as he would be busy.

"Now, Miss Blake, doesn't that sound like spite work to you? Well, it did to me and I told him it was all right. It made me so angry that I wrote him a letter, telling him that we had better be friends and not quarrel than be sweethearts and always have misunderstandings. He answered my letter and said he thought that if I felt that way about it he would be contented. He said that we could always be good friends.

"Well, at the time I received the letter I didn't care much, but now, Miss Blake, my heart is simply broken because I first realize how much I really do love him. What would you do in a case of that kind? He always asks me to dance with him and is very friendly to me. But I now realize my mistake and would like to mend it. How can I do it? Thanking you in advance and wishing your corner luck.

"GERTRUDE."

Inconsistent creatures, aren't we women, Gertrude? We've all done foolish things like that on impulse, usually when our vanity has been touched a bit. Why don't you tell the chap perfectly frankly and openly that you wrote that letter in a peeve and you have been sorry since for having done it?

Of the Independent Kind.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 18 years of age and keep company with a fellow two years my senior. I am very sensitive and misunderstand his ways, so it seems. I am of the independent kind and can not rid myself of the habit. He does not approve of my being independent and gets stubborn about it. Otherwise he is a very nice young fellow. How can I explain to him, and should I still keep his friendship?

"S."

When a man is in love with a woman he wants above all things to feel that she will solicit his good judgment where decisions have to be made. He likes to feel a protective attitude and it's the wise young woman who, even though independent at heart, caters to this little vanity of the male, if so it may be termed.

He's Her Cousin.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a cousin who insists on kissing me when we are alone, but I do not let him, and he also asks to take me out, but I always refuse, saying that we are too young. Am I right in not letting him kiss me, although he is my cousin? DOTTIE."

An amorous young cousin, isn't he, Dottie? Stick to your present behavior and grant him no favors on account of this relationship.

"Is This Love?"

"Dear Miss Blake: Is this love? I have three friends—the first has lots of money and never works; the second is a salesman and earns about $90 a week, and the last is just a common sailor with never a cent to his name.

"I would be more than willing to give up the first two just for the sake of the last, but you see there is one very difficult obstacle in the way—the sailor doesn't like me. Shall I keep on trying to make him like me or shall I choose one of the first two? I can't go with all three, for they have decidedly objected to my doing that.

"I don't care for the first two, although they are so good to me, and it seems funny to me that I should care for some one that doesn't care the snap of his fingers for me and never bothers to take me out anywhere. Tell me, please, Miss Blake, what to do.

"BLUE EYES."

Eeny, meeny, miney, mo—you'd better let them all three go.

Real Love Stories

THE PURPLE HYACINTH.

ONE of the youngest and most famous men of the United States—a man whose name is constantly before the public, a man who, judging from his natural optimism and loving good nature, would easily give the impression of being happily married—is living almost the life of a martyr.

When a young chap attending one of the colleges of a classic town in a middle western state, he went around occasionally with and called upon one of the girls of that town. She is the daughter of a well known and wealthy man. As a girl she was good looking and was considered a good "catch."

This young man was not in love with her, nor was he looking especially for a wealthy girl. His people were both wealthy and influential. Imagine his surprise upon being congratulated upon his approaching marriage to the young woman mentioned. It was his first knowledge of it. The girl had had their engagement announced in the newspaper columns and had given an announcement party. She was preparing in real earnest for her coming marriage.

He racked his brain for the reason, but he could remember nothing that would justify such proceedings. Owing to the prominence of both families, and the great respect the young fellow had for her father, and the girl being a good looking, highly educated person, he did not stop to think of later consequences. And so they were married.

The sad part of it all is that he was really in love with another girl, one who no doubt would have proven a great help to him in his work, for with her natural beauty, grace, and knowledge of business and social affairs, she would have supplied the "missing link" in his career.

He is a good husband—a noble fellow. His wife has turned out to be a nagging, penurious sort of woman, who only gets pleasure out of the reciting of her physical ills. She has a lovely home, a dear little boy, who is just like his father; in fact, has everything that heart could wish for, except the right kind of a disposition and a broad mind. The girl he loves is still single and she cherishes a bit of purple hyacinth. But she is brave, too.

A Combination Range Which Always Works

Built in a "New Way" that Makes it the Simplest and Most Successful 3-Fuel Range—Tests Prove it

The gas and coal cooking top sections in this combination range are separate and distinct and the (two) 2 in 1 (one) baking oven has no trouble-making parts installed in the heat circulating flues. This is why the burns gas, coal or wood and operates as successfully with one fuel as another. With this range you can cook with comfort, winter or summer and enjoy the convenience and economy of being able to burn any fuel.

Investigate the "New Way" Plan of Oven Construction

The "New Way" plan of construction eliminates the placing of gas burning equipment in the oven flues. The gas burner and dampers can in no way disturb an even continuous flow of heat to all parts of the oven when baking with coal.

When baking with gas a perfect heat circulating oven just like a gas range is formed in a moment's time.

This wonderful improvement in combination range building can only be obtained in a Detroit Jewel "New Way" Combination Range, because the construction is patented—other range builders cannot use it.

Call on the Detroit Jewel dealer and ask him to explain the "New Way" patented plan—When you learn its advantage and the freedom from baking troubles it gives, you will not be satisfied with a Combination Range built any other way.

This latest improved range is made in 3 finishes: Beautiful Blue or Gray all Porcelain Enamel or Black with White Porcelain Enamel and Nickeled Parts

Leading Dealers Everywhere Sell This Range

Every dealer who sells the Detroit Jewel "New Way" Combination Range will be glad to show and explain its many advantages. Seeing the range will convince you it is the most serviceable and complete cooking equipment obtainable, yet it occupies no more floor space than an ordinary coal range.

Most Dealers Sell This Range On the Easy Payment Plan

Mary King

SUCCESS IN SPITE OF HANDICAP.

THE possession of a higher education is of inestimable advantage to the business girl who aims at the pinnacle of success. By studying the want ads of the daily papers it is not surprising to find the number of employers who prefer college girls or girls who have had at least four years of high school training, increasing every day.

Looking about us at the women who occupy the most enviable positions in business we discover that a number of them have had university training, or at least four years of high school. But when a conspicuous instance is brought to our attention of a woman who has had little schooling attaining a desirable position, it is bound to make an unusual impression upon us, which is justified by so remarkable an achievement.

A story of just such an achievement was told to me the other day, and as it is bound to be a source of encouragement and consolation to the girls who through force of circumstances have had their education curtailed, I will tell it here.

When Miss D. was in her last year at grammar school her father died suddenly. As his death left her mother without any means of livelihood, and as there were five children to be taken care of, Miss D., being the oldest, left school and secured through some friend of the family a humble clerical position at a small salary.

After working a year at her first job Miss D. found that the girls who did the stenographic work for the firm earned more money than the other clerks, and were given the better jobs, and although it meant a great sacrifice she attended the evening classes of a stenographic school.

The work was hard for her at the start but she struggled along for three years at a salary little larger than the one she had been getting. While the work was hard, it was wonderful training for her, and laid the foundation of her later success.

She was naturally an ambitious girl, but conditions at home stirred her to the utmost, and while she stayed on at her first job for three years with the realization that it held no future for her, she felt the experience to be invaluable. At the end of that time, confident that she could fill any stenographic position, and as it was necessary for her to make more money, she made a change.

During the following two years Miss D. changed positions several times until finally she made a connection that promised success. Her position was secretary to the president of a small but prosperous firm. When she found the firm was rapidly growing larger she lost no time and spared no energy learning everything she possibly could about the business and its management. No task was either too simple or too difficult for her to handle, and she gave an untiring service to the firm. During a readjustment of the business when the capital stock was being increased Miss D. was given an opportunity to invest some of her savings in the firm's stock, and last year as a reward for extraordinary service she was elected to an executive office in the firm.

Her position now is one that few women have equaled, as the firm has grown considerably since she started working for it, and she has under her supervision hundreds of employés.

While Miss D.'s schooling was necessarily cut off, her education really never stopped, as she never missed an opportunity to improve and enlighten herself.

Lift Off Corns!

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns and calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

CHROMATIC SCALE OF COLORS, SHOWING COMPLEMENTARIES

Embroidery design can be transferred to material by the aid of a sheet of carbon paper.

Embroidery design in old blue and bronze-green applique, and outlined with black button-hole stitches, on a champagne-colored foundation. The dress is black cloth remodelled from an old loose-fitting coat.

Taking a look at the color circle, we find the yellow to lie opposite to the purple, while orange lies across from the blue. These complementaries are nature's own method of restoring the balance, or, rather, to relieve eye fatigue.

One reason why blue is generally less becoming to blondes than some other colors is that blue has a trick of "picking up" any particle of yellow in complexion and hair, and thus gives a greenish cast to face and hair. Only the red gold blonde should wear blue of the colder tones. But any shade of purplish blue will be found vastly more becoming to the pale yellow or pure golden-haired beauty.

Tender heliotrope, lilac, and violet, also green tones with the yellow predominating, are good colors for the pale yellow or moonbeam type of blonde. Black and ivory tones are striking on this type if they are handled right.

The lovely gray-eyed blonde can wear jade and sea green if white is brought next to the face. The gray-eyed type also looks well in warm shades of French blue with a dash of black for contrast.

On the auburn-haired girl almost any tone of blue looks well. The whiteness and rosiness of her skin is accentuated by the deep notes in royal and navy olive. Blue-green is lovely on this type, also bronze tints with enough green in them to strike a happy balance. The auburn-haired woman looks splendid in snowy white and black, but let her beware of the purple shades. She can "get away" with mouse colors, putty, lead, and gunmetal. Turquoise blue and silver would be ideal for evening wear for the ruddy-haired beauty. She must stay on the cool or upper side of the color circle.

The embroidery pattern today offers several possibilities. The tendency in embroidery this year is to have bold, distinct designs. Applique work is new and popular and easy to do. The design illustrated was done in applique work: the roses in a lovely old blue, while the stems and leaves were done in a rich bronze-green; all was outlined in black buttonhole. The foundation was champagne colored broadcloth. This ornamental front was worn with a black cloth dress remodeled from a loose fitting coat. The design can also be done in heavy outline and filled in with the popular darning stitch.

Among the Guests.

One of the most interesting and amusing weddings that I ever attended was that of a widow and a widower. The bride was the mother of five children by her former marriage and the groom the possessor of six young hopefuls. The two families ranged about even in ages, from 4 to 12 years. The bride had been employed as housekeeper by the groom for a couple of years before they made up their minds to marry.

The bride had dressed the two "sets" of children, all girls, exactly alike and I never will forget how during the ceremony they were all seated in a row on a long settee at one side of the room. They each had their hair brushed smooth and shiny, and braided straight and stiff at each side of the head and each braid was tied with a large bow of new ribbon, just alike, bought for the occasion. Many did laugh at that wedding.

That was nine years ago, and that bride has proven that she is a wonderful woman. She has brought up those eleven girls with rules just as straight and stiff as were those braids that day.

The four eldest have married well, while the youngest, now thirteen, graduated from grammar last June.

Under a Lantern.

It was to be quite a fashionable home wedding, with several attendants, beautiful gowns, and elaborate floral decorations. We dressed carefully for the event and approached the house with pleasant anticipations. What was our astonishment to find the house in total darkness!

A voice directed us to the dressing room, and we groped our way up the stairs, colliding with several guests who were coming down. At the top a young girl lighted a match to help us on our way, and explained that the electricity had given out, in some unaccountable way, and there was no gas in the house.

We finally found our way to the drawing room, where we stood in eerie darkness for some fifteen minutes, hearing voices all about us, but unable to see any one. Then some of the men of the wedding party raided a nearby small grocery and procured a quantity of large tallow candles, which were placed about the rooms and a barn lantern hung in the bridal bower.

After these were lighted the wedding proceeded, and all agreed they had never seen a prettier one, for the soft candle light on dainty gowns and flowers made an almost fairylike scene.

Being Superstitious.

The ceremony was under way and the minister had just called for the ring. The ring was not to be found in any of the bridegroom's pockets. He quickly turned and drew a ring from the finger of a woman guest before she was aware of what he was doing. The minister continued the ceremony, at the close of which the guest demanded her ring. This the bride refused to give, being superstitious. The ensuing scene was unpleasant, but ended in the bride's keeping the ring.

Jack and Jill.

Several girls in our crowd promised each other that they would be married in the exact spot that they became engaged in. One of the crowd certainly gave us a race for our money when we had to climb down the steep side of a hill and witness her wedding ceremony. When out riding she and her "young man" had upset down this hillside, and it was here he proposed to her.

Joy All Round.

Here is a case where a mistake was remedied in time. A young woman's fiance was reported killed in France nearly a year ago. Some time ago she became engaged to another man. The wedding day was set, and on that day the couple appeared at the little church, but before the ceremony had begun the soldier lover appeared upon the scene. The report of his death had been without foundation. He at once had a few words with the intended bride of the other man. Then the wedding was performed according to schedule, except that there had been a change of bridegrooms, and the soldier had won out at the last minute.

The jilted man failed to stay jilted, for the first ceremony had scarcely been finished, when another couple walked to the front and requested the preacher to tie another knot. And he did. The second couple was the jilted man and the first bride's sister. The latter had attended the wedding, and as it afterward was known, she had loved her sister's civilian fiance and he had loved her, but too late they had found it out, for both were too honorable to do what they supposed would mar her sister's life.

But the return of the soldier lover had released them and so the matter was quickly settled to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

WORDS OF SYMPATHY.

THERE are few of us so hard hearted that we do not sympathize with our friends when they are in trouble or mourning the loss of some one in their families, but there are many who, either from indolence, carelessness, or ignorance of what to say, neglect to show or express their deep sympathy and affection, often when it is most wanted.

The shortest kind of note—personal, sincere, and tender—a friendly call—even a warm handclasp and a cheery word—these are the things that touch the heart of one in sorrow, things of no intrinsic value in themselves, yet they keep the machinery of life in good running order.

Let each one of us remember to do his part in this way and to share unstintingly that we all have in abundance—our fraternal good will, and the expression of it when others in distress have special need of it.

G. D. K.: There are three possible ways in which to reply to a wedding announcement. A note to the bride to wish her joy, a call upon her as soon as possible after her "at home" date, and a gift, if you wish to send one—any of these three is correct. In fact, the first two are almost obligatory, although many people are careless about such apparently small matters.

MRS. H. L. J.: For a small, informal luncheon to be given in late October, you might serve cream of tomato soup with tiny cheese crackers. French chops, sweet potatoes southern style, peas, hot rolls, tea, head lettuce with French dressing and crackers, and chocolate mousse. The hostess is usually served first, especially when dishes are passed. Thus the guests are spared the embarrassment of not knowing how to help themselves to a seemingly intricate concoction. Place cards may be used if you wish, although they are not absolutely necessary.

M. M. B.: A tailored suit is a useful thing to have to wear to the office when you are to take luncheon at a large hotel. This costume, with a pretty and appropriate hat, is the correct one for any function that may take place during the day, excepting only those large and formal affairs where afternoon gowns are almost a necessity.

* *

L. R.: If you will write me again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be happy to mail you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

* *

S. R. E.: To introduce your wife's sister or brother, you may say, "My sister-in-law, Miss Smith, Mr. Jones," or "Mrs. Jones, may I present my brother-in-law, Mr. Smith?"

* *

M. VAN H.: Upon receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall be happy to mail you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

MARION G.: Hats are not worn with evening frocks. Invitations to luncheon require a reply written in the third person. Upon receipt of an addressed and stamped envelope I shall be happy to mail you a list of books on etiquette.

* *

D. S.: When a man tells you he is glad to have met you, you may simply smile and thank him. You might add, if you care to, that you have enjoyed knowing him.

* *

I. M., C. S., A. W., R., and A. N.: If you will write to me again, enclosing stamped, addressed envelopes, I shall be happy to mail each of you a list of reliable books on etiquette.

* *

C. S. C.: Yes, it is customary to leave cards when returning calls, as well as when making them for the first time. If you send your card in it is really not necessary to introduce yourself again to your hostess, as that is sufficient.

Varied Activities of Women

In all the seventeen years she has been president of the state board in Pretty Prairie, Kas., Mrs. Elizabeth Demarest has never had a loss or employed a lawyer.

Mrs. Flora W. Hoffman, who started in business in Kansas City as owner of a baby shop, is now director of sales policy for a New York firm at a salary of $15,000 a year.

Germany's first woman mayor is Frau Schuchardt, the wife of a saloonkeeper, who has been elected to the executive chair in Steinberg.

Southern women who raise poultry are learning through clubs organized by the department of agriculture and the state colleges to market their products cooperatively, and in 1918 disposed of more than half a million eggs through this method.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson has the honor of traveling farther than any other of the first ladies of the land. She has traveled approximately 25,000 miles in less than a year.

Miss Chizu Takamori, a teacher in the Hirashima School for Girls in Tokio, Japan, is now in this country for the purpose of learning American ways of cooking, which she will teach to her pupils on her return to Japan.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP COMPANY

The Ideal Fruit

Every intelligent food expert will tell you that you ought to eat more fruit. Some fruits are insipid and we soon tire of them. Others cost so much they are a luxury. Others spoil easily and are difficult and expensive to put up.

Cranberries are the ideal all-the-year-round fruit. They keep well. They are easily and quickly prepared. They are attractive in appearance. Their slightly acid quality is wholesome, and their peculiar tang is delicious. Everybody likes them.

Eat more Cranberries! Not only on Thanksgiving, with turkey, but every day in the year. Cranberry Sauce with all meats; Cranberry Jelly for breakfast and supper; Cranberry Butter as a spread for the children's bread, and Cranberry Pie for dessert. Put them up now to use for Winter and Spring.

Cranberry Sauce

One quart cranberries, two cups boiling water, two cups sugar. Boil the sugar and water together for five minutes; skim; add the berries and cook, without stirring, until they are transparent. Five minutes cooking over a hot fire is usually time enough to make the sauce clear.

Strained Cranberry Sauce

If a strained sauce is preferred, cook the cranberries and water; then press through the strainer, keeping back the skins; add the sugar and finish the cooking as suggested.

Cranberry Pie

Have ready a partly baked pastry shell; pour in filling when cold, made by cranberry sauce recipes; put strips of pastry over top and finish baking in a moderate oven.

Cranberry Meringue Pie

One and one-half cups sugar, two cups cranberries, one-half cup cold water, one tablespoon flour, two eggs, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, two tablespoons powdered sugar. Cook sugar and water to a syrup; add the cranberries. Cook until the berries have popped. Cool a little. Mix smoothly in a bowl the flour and yolks of eggs; add three tablespoons of the juice of cooked cranberries, then add to the berries and simmer for three minutes. Stir in butter and vanilla and set aside to cool. Turn filling into deep pie crust previously baked; cover with meringue made from stiffly beaten whites of eggs and powdered sugar. Place in cool oven to set and slightly brown the meringue.

Cranberry Jelly

Cook until soft the desired quantity of cranberries with 1½ pints of water for each 2 quarts of berries. Strain the juice through a jelly bag.

Measure the juice and heat it to the boiling point. Add one cup of sugar for every two cups of juice; stir until the sugar is dissolved; boil briskly for five minutes; skim, and pour into glass tumblers or porcelain or crockery molds.

6 lbs. of Cranberries and 2½ lbs. of sugar make 10 tumblers of delicious jelly.

Cranberry Butter

Three pints cranberries, ½ cup water, 2 cups sugar (or 2 cups of white corn syrup).

Cook the cranberries and water until the skins of the fruit are broken; then press through a sieve, and cook this pulp until it becomes quite thick; add the sugar (and syrup if you use it), and cook for ½ hour over a very gentle fire, stirring constantly. When slightly cool turn into jars, and cover closely.

This makes a delicious and healthful spread on hot biscuits, bread, buttered toast, or cake.

Cranberry Betty

Slices of stale bread, butter, unstrained cranberry sauce, grated lemon rind (use rind of ½ lemon to each quart of sauce). Cut the bread thinly, butter it and lay two or three slices in a deep baking dish. Add a generous layer of cranberry sauce to which the lemon rind has been added, then more buttered bread, and proceed till the dish is filled, having bread for the last layer. Cover the dish and bake half an hour, then remove cover to brown the top of the pudding. Serve with a hard or liquid sauce.

(See recipes for Cranberry Sauce)

White corn syrup may be substituted successfully for sugar, in whole or in part, except for Jelly.

Always cook Cranberries in porcelain-lined, enameled or aluminum vessels. Of course you want the best. To be sure of a selection of the choicest cultivated varieties, ask for

THE LAST WORD IN PARIS FASHIONS

By Mary Brush Williams.

THE NATURAL WAIST LINE.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—I am just back from a little trip to Germany, where the women in the shops look out over one's head when serving you, as if they could not but resent you just a little for belonging to a great and prosperous and victorious nation, when their own men had made such a terribly bad job of elevating them to a position of prestige. The men themselves flock around one and demand to know how long one can possibly stay, and mention the war just as naturally as if they had won it.

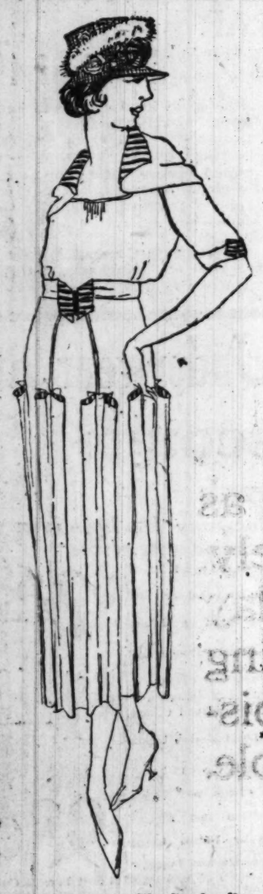
Gabardine tailored suit, fur trimmed.

There is such a lot one would like to say if only a fashion article had more elastic boundaries. As it is, I brought home one idea about the styles.

We were away for one week and when we got back the illustrator of most of these letters was at the hotel. "Tell me," he inquired, excitedly, "did you see any lovely clothes?"

That was just the question I was about to ask of him. Had I seen any smart clothes in Germany! The women have long been noted for being the world's worst dressers, and, believe me, they have not improved during the war. Still, the image they recalled brought up son ething pleasant. Their skirts were the right length and their waist line was where a waist line comes by nature. You don't know how much prettier it was than all the art and freakishness of Paris and America.

In Holland the people laughed at you if you walked along the street in a Paris or an American dress. The natives have not been accustomed to these for four years, and now they look on them as something weird and strange. Being interpreted, that laugh of theirs would mean that all the art could not improve on the natural location of a woman's waist line, and that skirts about six inches from the ground fit into the ensemble of a woman's costume the best. The good thing about the situation is that some of the most successful of the fall dresses in Paris have been just that length and with the waist lines at the correct latitude. If America would hold out for this they would prevail.



Street costume with shawl collar.

Dinner dance frock of rose colored crêpe.

In other particulars all fashion notes of the present and the future are based on Parisian and not on German styles. It is interesting to note in those serge dresses with which every French house and every French woman is equipped, how they "side-step" the issue of paniers, which would make most of the wearers look only a shade less extensive than a house.

The accompanying single piece street costume of one of the smart houses has avoided the question by making the skirt perfectly flat over the hips and letting plaits begin below them. These plaits are not sewed down even at the starting point, and thus the costume achieves the present demand of style for having something sticking out on you. Nothing, you know, makes the plump look thinner or large hips smaller than to get something larger than they below the hip line on the skirt.

The dress herein depicted is of brown, loosely woven material, the top of the plait, the belt, the cuffs of the short sleeves, and the collar are edged with silk striped in brown and yellow. The collar of this dress makes a shawl effect over the shoulders and runs in one piece to the waist line, where it blouses into the belt. The hat, with its narrow brim and high crown, is of brocaded silk in brown and yellow shadings, and it is trimmed in a band of sable fur.

Meantime, as the world is dancing, the French are making ample provision for dancing clothes. The dinner dance frock adorning the accompanying young girl is of rose colored crêpe. Observe that it is without side trimming, although she who wears it is amply slender to laugh at the fears of the stout. The effect of side trimming is obtained with the rows of skunk fur that run around it like automobile tires or perhaps like barrel hoops. They give a graceful effect indeed in their dip from the rear toward the lower boundaries of the skirt in front. Bands of the same fur over the shoulders hold the bodice in place. The frock is enriched with a band of gold lace, which runs its narrow course round the bottom of the skirt and in a straight line front and back along the top of the low bodice. That narrow width of lace coming below the wide barrel hoop effect of fur on the skirt is attractive. The costume is one of the prettiest of the simple frocks I have seen.

This is the time of year when everybody is thinking about a tailored suit. America taught the French woman the tailored suit habit and the French couturier something of the art of making the semi-masculine garment. In the past they showed themselves to be not overapt pupils, but in this last year they seem to have learned a thing or two about making our favorite kind of costume. French women have got onto the clever scheme of getting such a suit in the fall, wearing it as needed through the winter, and falling back on it heavily in the spring.

Of course, at this season, the attractive thing is to wear it with fur, and of course it is not sufficient merely to throw a fur piece around you. The fur ought to be part of the garment itself. To sew it on so that it can be an integral part of the costume and yet to take it off in the spring so that it will never be missed—that is the problem.

The accompanying suit has accomplished this successfully. The brown fur collar follows the line of the revers and crosses, surplice fashion, ending its career in the underarm seams at the waistline. The material of the suit is of garbardine, old gold in color. The coat has a gentle flare in its tail and an over drapery cleverly achieved by bias cutting that gives the effect of double jacket tails in the back.

I don't know whether you in America are interested in lingerie and negligee, but I know some of your American boys here who are. Did I tell you about the two in uniform who, guided by an American girl and an American bulldog on a chain, invaded Beer's to buy a nightgown for the loved ones at home? They stayed to watch the display of costumes and the bulldog, profoundly uninterested for the most part, awoke from his sound sleep to stare approvingly as a tea gown named Reverie, trailed across the carpets, its graceful steel gray silk draped with turquoise crepe de chine.

ARRANGEMENT OF SEVEN-ROOM HOUSE. SIZE, 26 FEET BY 41 FEET.

A TYPE OF SMALL HOME THAT IS POPULAR. COURTESY OF THE AMERICAN BUILDER.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

POPULAR TYPE OF HOME.

BACK in the folds of every normal person's brain there is concealed an idea of the sort of home he or she will build when the time comes. That must be the reason why there are so many different types of homes both from exterior appearance and interior arrangement. In searching out designs for the inspection of prospective home builders I found one place where there are filed away more than 1,000 different home building plans. And while many of them are similar, each has an individuality. All have been built and all of them are being lived in. And undoubtedly each person thought she or he had the ideal home when the house was finished.

There are, however, three general types of houses—the bungalow, or one story structure, the two or three story house, and the story and a half house. It is one of the latter that is shown in the accompanying illustration.

This house fairly shouts, "I am from the suburbs," for it is of the type that is so popluar among suburban home owners. The wide front porch is inviting and has an air of restfulness; the long sweep of the roof that continues over the porch and has a pergola effect in its rafters, and the gabled dormer window and dining room window projection combine to give this house a most artistic exterior appearance.

And withal its appearance of being a "sizeable" house, it is only 26 feet wide by 41 feet deep. The front porch, with its brick walls and stucco columns, is 25 feet long and 7 feet deep, amply large to permit swings and hammocks and easy chairs.

The house contains six rooms, four, on the first floor and two on the second, which also has a good sized sleeping porch. The living room extends across the front of the house, being 25x14½ feet, and has an open fireplace at one end. There is a "cased" opening between it and the dining room, in which are set cases for the dishes opening into the dining room and bookcases into the living room. The dining room is 13x13 feet, but the bay takes from it the square effect.

The kitchen and a bedroom complete the first floor layout. In the former there are several extraordinary features in arrangement and equipment. One of them is a breakfast nook, where the members of the family may have their morning meal in comfort without the fuss necessary to serving it in the large dining room.

The second floor has two good sized bedrooms, the bathroom and the sleeping porch, the latter being 13½x9 feet. The bath is placed so that it is convenient to all the rooms.

Home builders, especially those who expect to build in the suburbs and smaller cities and towns, will find many valuable suggestions in the design shown. It is an attractive home and one that will fit in with the ideas of many prospective builders. Whether or not this design is followed exactly, this is a type of home that is popular.

MRS. C. A. W.: It is entirely a matter of personal taste, but I think your plan to keep all three rooms in putty shade a good one. This gives a feeling of continuity and spaciousness to rooms. Use ivory woodwork throughout. The idea of using putty drapery might become monotonous with putty walls. Old blue drapery throughout might be a delightful contrast. Use panels for French doors or drapes to correspond with other windows. Mulberry shades would go splendidly for a living room. Cretonne in ivory or tan ground and design with blue and mulberry as predominating colors would do nicely. Fibre and grass rugs are good. Vary side wall treatment as you suggested in bedrooms.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. R. T.: If you wish gray for the living room, repeat this in the dining room and reserve the dove blue for one of the bedrooms. Let the other one be in amethyst and pearl gray, and relieve with small touches of turquoise blue.

M. N. B.: Your combination library and dining room is an excellent idea. Any of the Windsor chairs make good additions to the living room. A Canton hour glass chair also is good, or you might try brown wicker. The fireside chair would be nice in deep crimson. Yes, use the rugs you name and the wicker in the sunroom. The discrepancy is not really objectionable. See that your colors are matched or at least harmonious.

For a Boy Shut-In.

I have a large and almost new set of a steel construction toy operated by electricity, which I should be glad to give to some boy 12 to 15 years old, who for any reason is forced to stay indoors. If you would give any applicants my address, so that they may communicate with me direct, I should be grateful. R. F. F."

Thank you. I shall forward any applications received to you.

Needs Heating Stove.

"I wonder if some one has a little heating stove they have given up? I am an old lady and I get very cold in winter. I need a stove terribly. I will gladly pay express charges. I don't like to ask, but if some one doesn't really want their stove I should be very grateful for it. Mrs. C. W."

I hope some one has a heating stove for this old lady. Cold weather is upon us, and the aged feel it kenely.

Old and Sickly.

"I have been sick and unable to work. I need clothes for this winter. I am pretty old and sickly, but I like to sew and I can make things over. I take a bust size 48 and shoes 5½. I don't like to ask, but I don't know what I am going to do. Everything costs so much, and I am so old.

"Miss E. H."

I hope something may be found for you through this department. Age and sickness, and our common H. C. L. are a terrific combination to fight alone.

Old Magazines to Give.

"I have a great number of good magazines and papers that would delight some reader. They are too good to throw away and I want to offer them to some one who wants stories to read. I have pictures for children, too, and some calico pieces for patchwork. S. M. G.

Thank you very much for your kind offer. I know some one will take advantage of it soon.

Lack Simple Comforts.

"I am coming again to ask a favor for my blind, paralyzed husband. I want for him a wool sweater and baby wool socks. We can't seem to afford them. He is so thin and cold I know they would comfort him. I hope some one can spare them to us. We should be so thankful.

"Mrs. L. B."

It is hard to be without the simpler comforts when we are ill. I hope a sweater and socks may be found for this old man who is "so thin and cold."

Had to Help Others.

"I am a girl of 16, trying to work my way through commercial course. I worked during the summer, but as my father does not work steadily I had to give my money to help take care of my four brothers and sisters, and I could not save any for clothes. Do you think some one might have a coat or shoes? I wear 5½ shoes. I would appreciate any clothes. I am 5 feet 5 inches tall. I should be so grateful for any help at all. Miss E. S."

Turn about is fair play. You have helped your family and some of our bigger family of friends can help you.

* *

Carpet Rags to Donate.

"I have a great number of clean carpet rags, some cut and rolled and some uncut, which any one may have by calling for them. Mrs. G. A. J."

Here's a chance for some one who may wish to make a rug.

Gets Cold Easily.

"I have a rubber stocking my mother is not able to wear and I want to offer it to some one who can be benefited by it. I wonder if I may ask something of you? My baby boy is not well. He is thin and gets cold easily. Do you think some one might have some discarded woolen underwear, any size or condition, that they would give me so I could make from it warm things for my baby? I should be so grateful. I will do plain sewing or anything I can in exchange for the the underwear. Mrs. J. D."

Thank you for the stocking. I hope with all my heart some one will find some old woolens your baby may have. No return in the way of exchange is necessary for anything we can get for you.

For a Baby.

"Perhaps you know of some one who can use a baby buggy or go-cart and a bassinet with wheels. We are compelled to give up our white Persian Angora cat and thought maybe one of your readers would give it a good home. And we have a great many magazines for some shut-in. M. M. D."

Thank you sincerely for your generous offer. I know the baby buggy and bassinet will be wanted at once and I hope the best kind of a home may be found for your cat.

* *

For an Invalid Boy.

"I have some magazines and books of interesting western stories to give to some shut-in lad who likes to read. "H. B."

Thank you very much for your offer. This will mean many swiftly speeding hours to some boy.

Sheet Music and Player Rolls.

"I have several sheets of music for whoever would like them and four sixty-five note player piano rolls that have five or six pieces on each roll. And do you think there is some one who, going away or breaking up housekeeping, would give me a canary? I should love one. Mrs. A. L. C."

Thank you very much for your kind offer. I hope a canary may be found for you.

Books on Elocution.

"Do you think some one has books on elocution and some pieces to recite that they might send me? I love speaking, but I cannot afford to take lessons in elocution. I should be grateful. Miss A. S."

I hope you will get the books and pieces soon. Elocution is a gift and proper speaking a fine art. I think your love of it should be encouraged.

Offers a Piano.

"I have been reading your column of late and have seen what beautifully charitable and Christian deeds are done through it. My husband suggested that I offer my old upright piano to one of your needy readers. It is in good condition but needs tuning, as it has been put away the last fifteen years. If you will forward the address to me of some one who wishes the instrument, I will be glad to pay the express charges and send it to that person. Thank you for permitting me to help in this good work. Mrs. J."

I shall be happy to supply the address of this generous correspondent. Do not forget the stamped, addressed envelope.

THORO is ideal for general home use. It keeps the softest, tenderest skin in the pink of condition—healthy, soft and white.

Old-time beauties used plain cornmeal to cleanse and beautify the hands. In THORO a specially prepared Meal acts on the same principle with all the improvements of modern hygiene.

THE same qualities that make THORO so effective to cleanse and beautify the face and hands, make it a wonderful Shampoo!

The delightful, creamy lather, of a faint, delicate fragrance, removes dirt and excess oil. It brings the blood to the surface of the scalp, stimulating it to healthy, natural action. There is no harsh alkali as in ordinary soap, and THORO gives none of the "sticky troubles" which follow use of oily preparations.

THORO

In THORO you get a specially prepared, sterilized Meal—the kind our grandmothers found so beautifying—blended with other cleansing and soothing ingredients. The result is truly magic whether used on baby's tender skin or on grimy "workaday" hands. There's no safe or satisfying substitute for THORO. You'll be surprised to see how many of the so-called toilet "necessities" it makes unnecessary. We want every reader of this paper to try THORO.

"Take Care of Your Health!"

Much of the Sickness with which we Humans are Afflicted Could be Prevented—if Properly Cared For in Time

Recommended by Doctors and Dentists Everywhere

Boracetine

"the Guardian of Health"

Should be used daily in every well-ordered household!

National and City Boards of Health are Spending Millions of Dollars to Prevent a Recurrence of the Dreadful Influenza Epidemic. Do Your Part by Keeping Your Mouth, Throat and Nasal Passages Clean and Germ Free Through the Daily Use of Boracetine.

Health officials will tell you that the sputum-born diseases are now the greatest menace to public health, that unclean mouths are dangerous breeding grounds for all germ life and that the mouth, throat and nasal tract are the seats and the sources through which influenza, consumption, scarlet fever, diphtheria, pneumonia, hay fever, bronchitis, measles, and many other diseases are communicated to the body and spread to other persons.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" says an old adage.

"Keep the mouth, throat and nose clean and you prevent the great majority of the diseases with which we humans are afflicted today"—is the advice of modern health authorities.

Disease germs do not develop or multiply in clean mouths, throats or nasal passages. Warmth and moisture and absence of light are favorable for germ growth. This is why the mouth, throat and nasal passages, the gateways of the body, furnish fertile breeding grounds for these dangerous yet invisible enemies of health.

Boracetine keeps the mouth, throat and nasal passages clean and sweet and prevents the growth of germ life by antisepticizing the tissues and membranes of these parts.

Once you have used Boracetine you will wonder how you were ever able to be content without it, so satisfactory will be the feeling to you of having a clean, sweet mouth and throat. Users say that they would as soon let their hands and faces go unwashed, or their teeth uncleaned, as to go without their daily application of Boracetine.

Don't wait until you are sick! Keep a bottle of Boracetine on hand and make a habit of using it every day.

Lots of folks start the day off by using Boracetine as a gargle to sweeten and purify the throat and mouth and get rid of that "dark brown taste" that is often noticeable after arising from sleep.

Others make use of a throat atomizer to be sure that Boracetine reaches every part of the mouth and throat and then cleanse the nasal passages with a Boracetine douche.

Sufferers from catarrh, hay fever and other nose infections are enthusiastic in praise of the efficient manner with which Boracetine clears out the nasal passages and allows free breathing.

Many smokers find delight in the use of Boracetine to remove that "after taste" that comes from smoking pipe, cigar or cigarette.

You will be surprised how much better you will feel after you have cultivated the habit of keeping your mouth, throat and nose clean and sweet at all times.

Just as you feel "fresher" and more full of "pep" after a cleansing bath, so you will feel invigorated and more like "tackling the job" after you have used Boracetine for cleansing and "freshening" the mouth, throat and nasal passages.

Boracetine has no "medicine" taste—it is refreshingly void of all medication, cooling, delightful and pleasantly antiseptic to the taste.

It is a most efficient prophylactic and a powerful agent in the destruction of germ life.

BORACETINE IS SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS

October has been set aside as "Boracetine month" by the drug trade in your vicinity. During this month you will see many drug stores displaying Boracetine in their windows to remind you of its ever present need. Remember this the next time you pass your neighborhood drug store and go in and get your supply.

Boracetine has many other uses besides the ones just described. It is an all-around antiseptic, especially good for pyhorrea, sore gums, sore throat, etc., excellent for cuts, bruises, insect bites, skin eruptions and in fact any condition where an efficient healing agent and germ destroyer is needed.

Boracetine is sold in two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Your druggist has it. Buy it from him today.

Is Mooney Guilty?

SUMMARY OF INVESTIGATIONS MADE SINCE THE TRIAL SHOWS BASIS OF CHARGE THAT LABOR AGITATOR WAS CONVICTED ON PERJURED TESTIMONY

(By courtesy of the New York World.)

The first part of this article, reviewing the evidence submitted at the Mooney trial, was published last Sunday. This is the second and final installment.

By Louis Seibold.

[Staff Correspondent New York World.]

FOLLOWING Mooney's conviction, which, as said, was largely due to the testimony of Oxman and McDonald, the friends of Mooney and labor organizations throughout the country inaugurated agitation for a pardon, or a new trial. Incidentally new evidence was developed which the defense held showed Oxman, McDonald, and the Edeaus to be perjurers.

The grand jury of San Francisco county began an investigation on April 30, 1917, of the charge that Oxman had entered into a conspiracy with District Attorney Fickert and his assistant, Cunha, to "frame" Mooney. They produced as witnesses Capt. Mathewson of the San Francisco police force, who had charge of the detective bureau. He testified that Oxman brought to him a man named F. E. Rigall, whom he first introduced under the name of "Mr. Charles."

Capt. Mathewson said he told District Attorney Fickert that he thought Rigall was a "bunco man" and a "gambler," and advised the district attorney not to have anything to do with him in any shape or form. He said that Fickert told him he was not going to use Rigall as a witness in the Mooney case.

When Rigall was called before the grand jury he told a very remarkable story. He said that he lived at Greyville, Ill., where he ran a pool and billiard parlor. He said he had known Oxman from boyhood. He said that July 22, the day of the explosion in San Francisco, he was at Niagara Falls, N. Y., and had never been in California prior to January, 1917, six months after the explosion.

Q—Now you arrived here on Jan. 6, 1917?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—In response to a request from one F. C. Oxman, is that correct?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—By the way, who if any one furnished you the transportation to make the trip?

A—I received a telegram from Mr. Oxman saying "We are sending you transportation and expenses to San Francisco and return." I didn't know what he had reference to. He afterward told me that by the word "we" he meant with Mr. Fickert.

Rigall testified that when he came to San Francisco he registered under the name of "Charles." He walked through the hotel and saw Oxman, who had told him where to put up. Oxman at first declined knowing him, but afterward came to his room and told him about the bomb explosion, which he had never before heard of.

He said the next day that Oxman took him into the street and pointed out the scene of the explosion. Oxman said that it would not be necessary for Rigall to identify anybody, only just say that he had met Oxman near the scene of the explosion.

Coached for Witness Stand.

RIGALL testified that Oxman took him to District Attorney Fickert and said: "This is the man that seen me, that I met on Stewart and Market streets on July 22.

"Oxman explained to me," he continued, "that he had told him (Fickert) in looking the case over that he had met a boy from the town that he used to live in on the day of the explosion."

Q—When you were presented to the district attorney did you tell the district attorney that you were not here on the 22d of July?

A—No, sir; I did not. I let Mr. Oxman do most of the talking.

Rigall further testified that Assistant District Attorney Cunha took him into a private office and said: "Now, Ed, I want to go through this case with you. I am going to put you on tomorrow. I always like to have a witness to feel perfectly at ease when he is on the witness stand. Now I want you to tell me your story."

Rigall said he told Cunha that he had met Oxman at Stewart and Market streets on the day of the explosion as Oxman had urged him to do. He said he told Cunha the story that Oxman had prepared for him, giving in detail his movements from the time he left Greyville, Ill., his arrival at San Francisco on the morning of the explosion, and meeting Oxman at Stewart and Market streets.

Q—And did you think Oxman was on the square about his story?

A—No, I knew he was not.

Q—Then how did you happen to tell Mr. Cunha about it?

A—I was wanting to get away from San Francisco and wanted to get my expense money back.

Q—Did Oxman ever say to you he was not here on the 22d of July, 1916?

A—In crossing the street he said, "you were drunk as much as I was."

Rigall testified he next saw Oxman after the interview with Cunha when the former had completed his testimony in the Mooney trial. He said that Fickert took him into a private room and gave him two $50 bills and started to write a check, but Cunha stopped him and borrowed $50 from a man standing near there. Rigall testified he told Cunha that "Oxman promised me $250 if I would go through with it."

Rigall said he was not used as a witness and returned to Greyville without figuring publicity in the Mooney trial. He said he told a lawyer named Price of Greyville of his experience, and the latter told him, "It looks like a shame for a man to hang when he was innocent," and that his (Rigall's) testimony ought to get Mooney a new trial.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY C. M. FICKERT, assailed in the Densmore report as "in constant association with men and interests of such a nature as to render it incredible that he should be either impartial or honest in a case of this nature."

Concerning Oxman, Rigall testified that the Oregon cattle dealer had left Greyville seventeen years before and that his reputation was not good. He said he first heard from Oxman after the San Francisco explosion when he received a telegram asking him to come to San Francisco, and then a letter containing $110 for his expenses. He thought the letter was from Oxman's son.

Oxman's Letters Introduced.

OXMAN, on taking the stand, stuck to his story that he had met a man near the scene of the explosion who had claimed to be "Eddy Rigall," at the point where Rigall stated Oxman wanted him to testify he had seen him. Oxman told the grand jury that when he recalled the instance after the explosion he thought it was "F. E. Rigall" of Greyville, Ill., his old home. He said he had written and telegraphed the Illinois Rigall at the suggestion of District Attorney Fickert and Assistant District Attorney Cunha and urged him to come on to testify in the Mooney case to his having met Oxman.

The letters written by Oxman to Rigall and to Rigall's mother were introduced before the grand jury. They were written on the letterhead paper of the Hotel Terminal in San Francisco. One was dated Christmas day, 1916, and was addressed to "Mrs. Rigall" at Greyville, Ill. It was as follows:

Dear Mrs. Rigall: As I am sending Ed transportation tomorrow, 26th, it might be that I can use you also about the 10th. If so, I can obtain you a ticket that you can see California. If you would like the trip, address me care this hotel tell F. E. to see nuthing untill he see me Can poibly use a Extry witness Been a long time I don't see you Yours truly

F. C. OXMAN.

Another letter which was addressed to Mr. Ed Rigall, at Greyville, Ill., read as follows:

Dear Ed has been a Long ttime sence I hurd from you. I have a chance for you to Cum to San Frico as a Expurt Wittness in a very Important Case you will only hafto answr 3 & 4 questions and I will Post you on them. you will git mileage and all that a witness can drow Probly 100 in the cleare. so if you will come ans me quick in Care of this Hotel and I will mange the Balance it is all ok but I need a witness Let me no if you can Come Jan 3 is the dait set for trile Pleas keep this confidential

Answer hear

Tours truly

F. C. OXMAN

In explaining these letters, Oxman in testifying before the grand jury, while admitting their authorship, asserted he had added a postcript on the third page of the second letter saying substantially, "If you were not in San Francisco on July 22 cannot use you as a witness."

The third sheet, which as far as tangible evidence is concerned was not even remotely connected with the second sheet on which the signature Oxman was penned, was not produced by Rigall, who supplied the correspondence, and he denied there had been any third sheet.

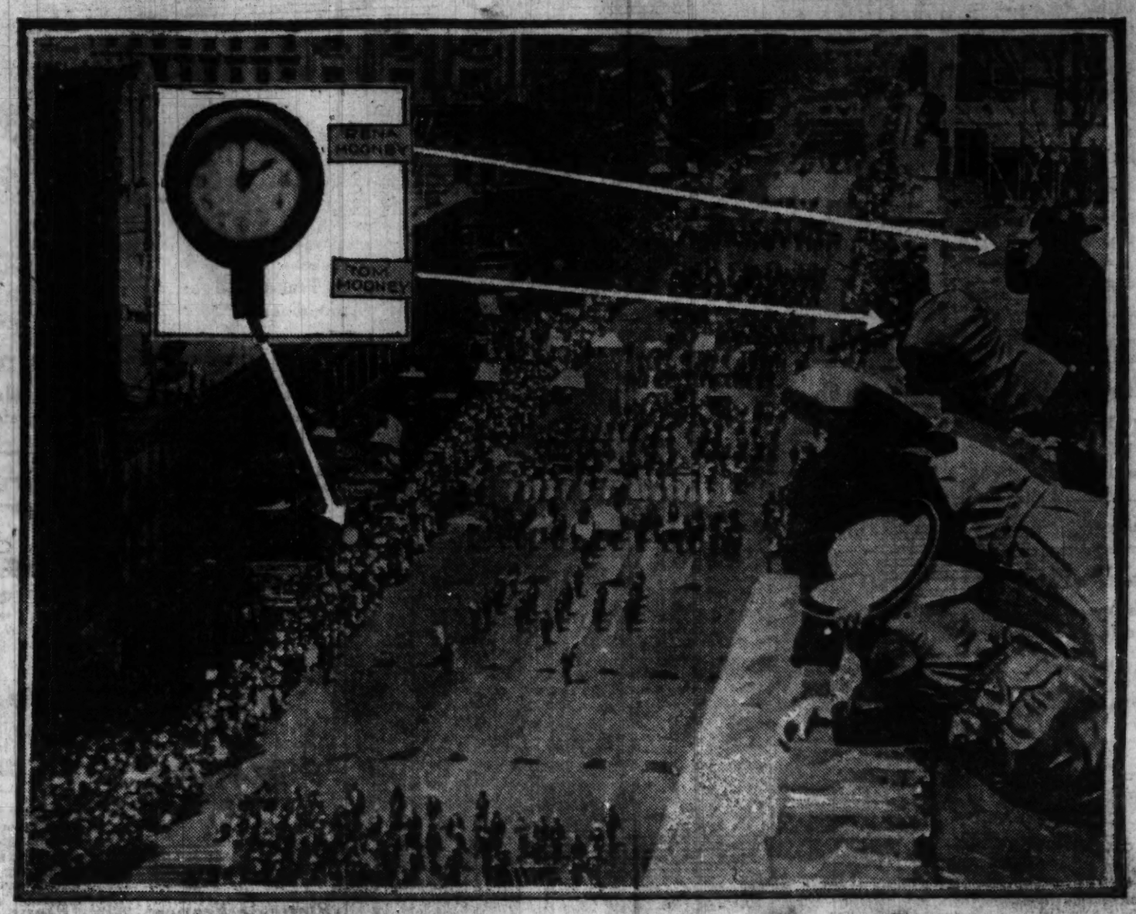
"Made Natural Mistake."

OXMAN told a plausible story that manifestly impressed the grand jury. He said his mistake in connecting the Illinois Rigall with the man that he met in the San Francisco street on the day of the explosion and gave the name of "Ed Rigall" was perfectly natural. Despite the testimony of Mrs. Rigall, mother of the man he had induced to come to San Francisco to testify against Mooney, that Oxman's reputation had been very bad in Illinois, the grand jury did not indict Oxman.



One of the famous "alibi" photographs, showing Tom Mooney and his wife on the roof of the Eiler building, in Market street, a mile and a half from the scene of the bomb explosion. The street clock in the picture, when enlarged by an expert, showed what may be faintly made out as hands pointing to one minute past 2 o'clock. The explosion occurred at 2:06 p. m. and the testimony of McDonald, the waiter, placed Mooney at the scene of the crime at 2 o'clock. Another of these views of the parade showed clock hands pointing to 1:50. The photographs were taken by Wade Hamilton, an employe of the Eiler Music Company, and the defense claims that the only copies it was able to obtain from the district attorney were so faded that the time on the street clock could not be seen.

Greater Economy in Dress Is a Need of the Times

By Mme. X.

OVERHEARD on a Northwestern suburban train between two wealthy commuters:

"These are mighty serious times. It behooves every one to be careful and practice as great a thrift as any in war time. You ought to explain it to your wife; tell her to wear her last year's clothes and hats."

"Have you told yours?"

"Yes."

"What did she say?"

"She was very much interested; agreed with me entirely and said that she'll begin to economize as soon as she's gotten her winter outfit."

I'm afraid there are a good many like her. The absorbing preoccupation of a large proportion of American women of even limited means is personal adornment. They must look smart and up to date, no matter at what sacrifice of self or family. This tendency is more than a settled policy; it is an emotion governing the expenditures of women of many strata of life, from the multi-millionaire's wife to the third assistant dishwasher in a Halsted street cafeteria.

Must Learn From the French.

Nor have we daughters of America the nimble, clever fingers nor the "flair" for dressing of the average French woman, who can make a frock out of the drippings of a rag bag; a hat out of a rose and a bit of ribbon and look in them chic, fresh, and altogether desirable.

But we've got to learn to do these things if we're going to keep up, on the one hand, our standard of personal appearance, and, on the other, held build up this great commonwealth of ours into a strong and beautiful edifice.

In this process of national construction thrifty, capable women are necessary as are able, hard-working men. The spendthrift is always a menace to his or her environment. Multiplied by millions, the spendthrift becomes a stifling, blighting curse, a national disease eating like a cancer into the vitals of the whole country.

We American women made, on the whole, a good record in war relief work. Our various, wide-spreading organizations reached into almost every home. It was a great manifestation of the powers of coördination and solidarity. Can't we use some of the same machinery, before it rusts and disintegrates, to establish a new set of ideals for American women, so that pride in ways and means shall be as great as pride in results?

Keep Same High Standards.

Unless we substitute a love of thrift for our present tendency to wanton extravagance Sisyphus will snigger in his sleeve at the fruitless toil of that patient creature, the American husband. This does not mean lowering or changing our present standards of living or dressing in the least. We can look just as well dressed and set just as good tables at a much lower cost as now if we put our minds to the task.

We are known now in other countries as the world's most liberal spenders. Already they are counting on our easy-going ways. From one just returned from the other side of the water come interesting, if not attractive, pictures of the fate of tourists in France today.

Now, abstractly speaking, we love France as a sister republic. In the light of the still smoldering embers of the great war we see her stand grievously wounded, with her crown of victory resting on bleeding brows. To preserve this emotion, and this picture, however, we would better stay on this side of the Atlantic for yet a little while to come. Too close an inspection might change our feelings and show us unattractive details in the picture.

Bring Tales of Extortion.

Those who have grappled with French hotels, restaurants, shops, chauffeurs, dressmakers, and milliners all come back shivering and shaking with innumerable tales of extortion and discomfort.

An English peer—Lord Ellington, I think it was—contracted with a garage to provide him with an automobile and chauffeur to take him on a two days' tour of the battlefields from Verdun to Ypres—only two days, mind you—for the trifling sum of 2,500 francs. When he got back to Paris a bill for 8,500 francs was presented to him. He protested and said that he'd pay what he had promised to or nothing. Grumbling and growling, they accepted his money. Another garage, having agreed to take a party out to Fontainebleau between the hours of 3 p. m. and 9 p. m. for 800 francs proceeded to charge them 500 francs. And so it goes over there.

The French, or some of them, justify their extortionate practice toward Americans by saying that our national prohibition law has done greater damage to one of their chief industries than any wrought by the Germans, and that therefore they are entitled to get what they can from such Americans as come their way.

So, 'ware, my countrymen and women! If you are bent on going abroad, fill your pockets full of money, and don't expect, no matter how much money you carry, to be either comfortably warm or abundantly nourished. Even now, coal is dealt out by the teaspoonful, a pound and a half to a household, and sugar, butter, milk, eggs continue to be more precious than jewels in both England and on the continent. In Switzerland, they still have to use cards for bread, sugar, and coal.

England in Serious Plight.

The plight of the moment in England is of course a most serious one, quite prohibitive of visitors. It is probable that Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick and their son, Capt. Gordon McCormick, who were to sail on the Baltic next Wednesday, will have to abandon for the present their trip to England. They were going especially to see Mrs. McCormick's mother, Mrs. Hammond, who, is quite old—over 80 in fact—and in delicate health, and who lives in Monmouthshire, one of the loveliest and quaintest of English counties.

Mrs. McCormick has for over two years now been one of the most devoted workers in various war relief organizations, her chief concern being the many branches of the women's committee of the late State Council for Defense. This is her first attempt at a vacation since 1917.

But, alas, the best laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-gley, and those misguided mortals who are trying to topple over that ancient civilization which has been a-building in England since before the time of Julius Cæsar reck little on what damage they do to individuals.

Benefit for Blind Relief Fund.

Of course, while we may practice and preach care in spending money, this does not shut the door to a lively interest in the newest styles. In fact, it stimulates it. And next Friday afternoon at the Blackstone the managers of the Permanent Blind Relief War fund are presenting a fashion show which, together with a program of songs and dances, calls us to come and combine enlightenment, entertainment, and philanthropy in one grand whole. Mrs. Sydney Burnett is going to sing and Mrs. Mark Walton to dance in the intervals of a stately procession of living models attired in the season's latest hats, frocks, and coats.

Mrs. Arrick Kirk and Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, president and vice president of the association, will receive those who come. Among others interested in promoting the affair are Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson and Mrs. C. C. Adsit.

There are to be two sessions or seances, the first at 3 in the afternoon, and the second at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Plans for "Board Walk."

Ten days ago Chicago society felt a sort of electric shock, a certain access of vitality that roused it from its summer somnolence. It was caused by the return of Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman from a three months' sojourn in southern California. She spent her holiday at Miramar, near Santa Barbara, where quite a group of Chicagoans can usually be found in June, July, and August, though not the same outfit as that which adjourns there in late winter and early spring to avoid our most trying season, meteorologically speaking.

Mrs. Coleman, who is a fine swimmer, plunged daily into that glorious surf that pounds the crescent beach stretching from Montecito to Santa Barbara. Then she soaked in sunshine on the gleaming white sands, which at that season are as gay and crowded as the sands at Dieppe or any other French seaside resort. All the time that she was enjoying herself—and life is cheerful out there—at the back of her mind was the thought that she must store up health and energy to carry through to success her "magnum opus," the "Board Walk," which will be the winter's big show and charitable event. It is to be at the Coliseum the first week in December.

Echoes of the last Victory Liberty loan campaign lurk in the announcement that Mrs. Coleman's vice chairman is to be Harold McCormick. These two made great fame for themselves and their ward, the Twenty-first, by their record in that campaign, when their territory topped every other residential ward in the country in its sales of Victory bonds. So successful were Mrs. Coleman and Mr. McCormick in arousing and organizing the ward's "esprit de corps" that a strong effort was made to induce them to head a permanent organization which should undertake to solve all sorts of local problems. They didn't quite see their way to such valuable public service, but here they are again, directing an affair whose profits will be devoted to public service and a fine philanthropy, the Passavant Memorial hospital, which is in great need of a new home.

Society Takes Active Part.

In the library of her charming home, 712 Rush street, Mrs. Coleman now contemplates, with great pride, a small model in papier mache of the proposed bazaar. The scheme, by the way, sprang full fledged from Mrs. John Carpenter's fertile brain. In the twinkling of an eye she saw the Coliseum converted into Atlantic City's sea front, with piers and dashing waves on one side and a row of shops on the other.

A band of dusky wheel chair pushers is being organized by Howard Gillette, and if, 'neath the ebony visages you detect the classic features of some of our best known leaders of cotillions, keep the knowledge to yourself. They are willing to push the paying public up and down the walk, but don't want to be recognized when so employed.

Robert Dunham is to be the treasurer of the affair, and signs point to big business for him and his aids.

It promises to be society's chief achievement in a winter that opens with some somber forecasts. Are we weaving garlands and dancing on the slopes of a volcano on the eve of eruption? Or are we reshaping and improving a nation founded by our ancestors? Many are asking these questions.

Miss Isabelle Robbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Robbins of 1100 Lake Shore drive, will have charge of a group of young girls who will usher at the fashion fete to be held on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock and that evening at 8:30 o'clock in the crystal ballroom of the Blackstone for the benefit of the permanent blind relief war fund for soldiers and sailors of the allies. Mrs. Arrick Kirk is chairman of the committee, Mrs. Robbins vice chairman, and Mrs. Frederick Tahl honorary chairman. Besides the display of living models, Mrs. Mark W. Walton will give a program of dances and Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. John Sidney Burnet, and Mrs. Orville Thompson will sing. Mrs. Edward R. Litsinger is chairman of the program committee, and assisting her are Mrs. Charles L. Strobel, Mrs. William R. Odell, Mrs. George H. Ingalls, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, and Mrs. Harold A. Howard.

The Truth About Front Lace Corsets

To Paris belongs the credit for the original front lace corset, but the front lacing style never passed the novelty stage in France, and did not become popular in this country until the front lace corset with the back and VENTILO front shield appeared upon the market.

"La Camille"

Ventilo

Without exception, LA CAMILLE is the front lace corset of greatest value; the one having the best materials for the price; the most perfect designs and with the exclusive VENTILO features which prevent pressure on the spine, insure ventilation and greater range of adjustment.

There are many imitations of the VENTILO features. Don't accept them; they are inferior. The newest feature in La Camille is the Loxit non-tilting clasp. Does not pinch, gap or come unfastened. Model illustrated is a topless sport corset intended for slight figures. Very low, lightly boned. Has elastic all around top. Made of fancy brocade in white and pink. $5

School to Train Teachers to Help the Handicapped

It is not reserved for the young alone to start to school this fall. There is a school for adults which offers them a vocation that is entirely new, and one of the most interesting and useful that can be imagined. The Henry B. Ravill School of Occupations is training teachers of occupational therapy, to give instruction in habit training, suitable occupations, and recreation, to handicapped people as a means of preventing and treating disorders of the mind and of the body.

Appreciation of this normalising medium, work, as a remedial measure, has steadily increased and a large field of usefulness has been opened for intelligent trained workers. The work takes them into state, civil, and military hospitals, and into schools and institutions.

Some of the occupations that are taught at the school are: Principles of design and their application; principles of color and their application; block printing, stenciling, dyeing and batik; textiles; weaving; rug making and pattern weaving; basketry, willow and reed; book binding, simple pamphlet binding and the advanced steps; elementary metal work; elementary wood work (bench work) and wood carving, and papier mache and clay modeling.

Technical instruction will extend over a period of ten weeks in the school, and a practice training period of three months is required before a certificate is given by the state department of public welfare. Candidates for admission to the school must have completed a college course or an acceptable equivalent and must be at least 21 years of age.

The fall term opens Oct. 13. Registration takes place at 9 a. m. on the opening day. School hours are from 9 until 4 o'clock. The school is at 2815 South Michigan avenue.

Why GRAY HAIR is no longer necessary

New, Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment. First Bottle Gives Satisfaction

After having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of thousands of users throughout the country are recommending "Canute Water" for Gray Hair to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Boot & Kaynor Drug Stores, Liggett's Drug Stores, MacLean's Drug Store, Owl Drug Stores, Rothschild & Co., and Walgreen's Drug Stores sell it in Chicago on a positive guarantee of absolute satisfaction or your money back. "Canute Water" restores color to your hair so naturally and evenly that no one can possibly tell you are using anything. All creations one naturally asks are here gladly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use "Canute Water" for Gray Hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal-tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. "Canute Water" for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A CRUDE DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. "Canute Water" is a simple method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that "Canute Water" is not a crude dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair. While as the reader knows the crude dyes are put up in packages marked with the different colors of hair or numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply require a retouching at the roots once in a while as the new hair grows out.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores, your own druggist or by mail direct upon receipt of price, $1.10 per bottle. Friedman Canute Co., 18 East 17th Street, New York City, New York.

NOTICE—Beware of sales-people who get commissions to sell worthless imitations. To be SAFE, accept no substitute for "CANUTE WATER".

MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT.

At the head of this page is THE TRIBUNE program for middle west development. The fact that it appears each day and in the same place is likely to cause many readers to accept the mere type as matter of fact and to fail to reflect deeply upon the projects so persistently dwelt upon. Now and again we like to call attention to this program and ask you to give some thought to it and to agitate in its behalf. There are four projects urged, all of which when carried out will react to the prosperity and happiness of this neighborhood. We ask you to keep them in mind as persistently as we are trying to remind you.

ALL TOGETHER NOW—LET'S APOLOGIZE FOR ROOSEVELT.

In Roosevelt's letters to his children there is probably a more intimate revealing of him than in his autobiography or in any of his other writings. That is part of their charm. He liked to be president. He liked the White House, the public and domestic life in it. He liked Washington, its seasons, its surroundings, Rock Creek park, the Virginia hills, the Potomac, and all the country.

An American reader finds a glow of satisfaction that a great American president found everything connected with the presidency a thing of great happiness. The reader knows when he has finished the letters that his own Americanism has had a tonic. He also knows that Roosevelt's greatest achievement for America, in his own opinion, was the Panama canal. Two letters to Kermit, written when he was on the battleship Louisiana, give evidence of this.

In one he wrote:

"Dear Kermit: It is a beautiful sight, these three great warships standing southward in close column, and almost as beautiful at night when we see not only the lights but the loom through the darkness of the ships astern. We are now in the tropics and I have thought a good deal of the time over eight years ago when I was sailing to Santiago in the fleet of warships and transports. It seems a strange thing to think of my now being president going to visit the work of the Panama canal which I have made possible."

In the other letter he wrote:

"Dear Kermit: Now we have taken hold of the job. We have difficulties with our own people, of course. I haven't a doubt that it will take a little longer and cost a little more than men now appreciate, but I believe that the work is being done with a very high degree both of efficiency and honesty; and I am immensely struck by the character of American employés who are engaged, not merely in superintending the work, but in doing all the jobs that need skill and intelligence. The steam shovels, the dirt trains, the machine shops, and the like are all filled with American engineers, conductors, machinists, boiler-makers, carpenters. From the top to the bottom, these men are so hardy, so efficient, so energetic, that it is a real pleasure to look at them. Stevens, the head engineer, is a big fellow, a man of daring and good sense and burly power. All of these men are quite as formidable, and would, if it were necessary, do quite as much in battle as the crews of Drake and Morgan; but as it is, they are doing a work of infinitely more lasting consequence. Nothing whatever remains to show what Drake and Morgan did. They produced no real effect down here, but Stevens and his men are changing the face of the continent, are doing the greatest engineering feat of the ages, and the effect of their work will be felt while our civilization lasts. I went over everything that I could possibly go over in the time at my disposal. I examined the quarters of married and single men, white men and Negroes. I went over the ground of the Gatun and La Boca dams; went through Panama and Colon, and spent a day in the Culebra cut, where the great work is being done. There the huge steam shovels are hard at it; scooping huge masses of rock and gravel and dirt previously loosened by the drillers and dynamite blasters, loading it on trains which take it away to some dump, either in the jungle or where the dams are to be built. They are eating steadily into the mountain, cutting it down and down. Little tracks are laid on the side hills, rocks blasted out, and the great ninety-five ton steam shovels work up like mountain howitzers until they come to where they can with advantage begin their work of eating into and destroying the mountainside. With intense energy men and machines do their task, the white men supervising matters and handling the machines, while the tens of thousands of black men do the rough manual labor where it is not worth while to have machines do it. It is an epic feat, and one of immense significance."

The moral challenge of this great work of an American president never has seemed to us to be explicable, not even as a perversion of sentimental rectitude or of petty partisanship. Roosevelt made his nation greater by diminishing the distance from coast to coast. He increased the resources of his country by giving greater efficiency to the distribution of products. He increased the security of the country by taking an obstacle out of the way of the mobility of its force.

It is a greater and safer and richer United States for the constructive work he made possible by the directness and stanchness of his decisions. When timid or petty moralists endeavor to give this achievement an immoral aspect by deploring it and the methods which made it possible as exhibits of force without sanction, there must be a feeling of impatience in the emotions of intelligent Americans.

Force? What had to be applied to obstacle but force? The morals which are stressed by Roosevelt's enemies arise out of the jungle which itself had to be conquered. They are as pestilential as the fever the jungle spread.

Roosevelt made a work which benefited all the world, and incalculably his own country, without offense to his own moral character, which was as sensitive in recognition of real wrongs as any man's character could be.

If the United States ever officially apologizes for the great achievement of a great president it will reach the nadir of self-abasement. And it will spend a long time thereafter apologizing for the apologists.

FARM AND FACTORY.

Folks on the farm must be reading the newspapers nowadays with a growing conviction that most of the people in the cities have gone crazy. Perhaps they are right. A more thorough knowledge than casual newspaper reading gives wouldn't weaken the impression much. What's the matter with us?

We are not going to try a diagnosis here. Probably our farming neighbors have their own shrewd notions of our case. In the end they may have to help. In fact, they are helping now, so much that we don't realize how important their help is because it is fundamental.

The farmers are saving us because they are working—working, not squabbling; working to produce, not luxuries but necessities.

But they must be getting a bit restless over the situation. The farm is more necessary to the city than the city to the farm, but both are essential to a high order of civilization; both are partners in human progress—the farmer the senior partner without whom the concern could not live, the city worker the junior without whom the concern would not go ahead. But in this partnership each must carry his share of the load, and if he shirks, the additional weight falls upon the other.

So just now the farmers must be and are—for we have recently heard some pointed remarks in that direction—beginning to wonder if the city partners are going to make serious trouble for the concern.

Certainly farmers are going to pay, are paying, a good part of the cost of persistent disorganization of industry, recurrent strikes, and shortening hours. All of this adds to the cost of everything the farmer gets from the cities. Reduce production of goods while the farmer increases production of food and food will come down and goods go up.

The farmer works long hours at a very highly skilled trade, one which calls for bodily strength and for brains and for long experience; and discounting all his effort of brawn and brain is the almost unavoidable hazard of nature which in a few weeks of untimely heat or an hour's untimely cold wipes out the labor of a season. The farmer makes other sacrifices, which happily are being decreased in modern times by good transportation, communication, and the development of machinery. But the fact remains that it would be impossible to get a very large proportion of the men and women of the cities to leave the social possibilities of city life on any terms.

So the farmer, seeing the interminable struggle of the city folk for more money and less work and realizing that many of the demands are going to be paid for in part out of his pocket, must begin to feel rebellious.

With that sound sentiment we think our headlong radicals are going to collide sooner or later, and the sooner the better. The farmer does not get carried off his feet by mob psychology. He has to think as an individual and looking over the world he can see its great need for peace and work, for filling in the great chasm war has made, for cooling down and sawing wood.

Organized labor is going to make a fatal mistake if under the influence of leadership bent on seizing power and remodeling society it proceeds at this time of unprecedented need to drop its share of the partnership load, cut down its hours of work and interrupt its share of production by repeated strikes for higher and higher pay. When it comes to strikes there is none that mechanical labor or any city class can "pull" which can be compared for a moment in sweeping, devastating, conclusive power to the strike the folks on the farm have in reserve.

We in the cities and factories, being packed together, can make a great noise, can destroy much. But the farmer stands at the gate of life itself and he can shut it on every one else and save himself and his own.

The city-made bolshevism of Russia ran head on to that tremendous truth and has been foundering since. Our American bolshevism might learn from this, if it ever considered facts. We haven't any idea that a farmers' strike will ever take place in this country, because it won't be necessary. But it is well for the headlong radicals in the labor movement who at this time are doing so much to discredit the sane democratic onward movement of real American organized labor to be reminded of where ultimate power—and we may add ultimate judgment—resides in our country. Conservative and constructive leadership, considering the rock bottom facts of American society, should be encouraged to stand out against the destructive forces which are trying to pervert the American labor movement and turn it into a course of action in which it will be the first to meet destruction.

The farmer is working these days. He is doing the essential thing and he is not going to be victimized in any struggle to set up a tyranny of labor minorities in place of the rule which he honors and sustains, the rule of a democratic majority. Some railroad employés want to control the railroads for themselves, miners the mines, and so on to a climax of disunion and destructive faction. That would mean the end of democracy, and just now the effort for it means dwindling production of necessities and the steady failing of our strength, while the farming folk work on.

The cities must return to sanity and work.

PINNING MEDALS ON CITIES OF FRANCE.

[Boston Herald.]

It is characteristically French that cities, like individual soldiers, are decorated for exceptional heroism in war. To the French a city is more than a collection of houses—it is something with an individuality, a personality, a soul. Thus Paris, which has just been given the Legion of Honor, is praised by Premier Clemenceau, in the citation read before the army, for its patriotic faith.

One of the few things in Verdun that escaped utter destruction is the monument, near the St. Paul gate, that commemorates the defense of the city in 1870. But for its defense in the great war Verdun has received honors never conferred on a city before—not only the croix de guerre and the Legion of Honor from France, but the most distinguished war decorations of Great Britain, Italy, Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro, and Japan. In the case of most of these allies it was the first bestowal of the coveted war decorations on a municipality.

Staunch place of God, beneath a desert sun,
With rugged walls and towers rising fair,
Clear outlined in the brilliant, silent air,
You stand reflecting peace, brave duty done.
By priestly pioneers of old begun,
Your buildings grew beneath a loving care;
Despite all savage hordes attacking there,
Man's victory for faith was nobly won.

To-day, within your mission gates ajar,
As twilight hour awakes an ancient bell,
Troop red man, nun, and pilgrim from afar.
We wonder, hearing hymns of worship swell,
If this torn world, when war shall cease to mar,
May grow alike serene by timely spell.

[From the Kenton, O., Democrat.]

There are no two trees exactly alike; no two faces absolutely similar and no two figures having identical lines. The creative artist in Dress masters the natural line of the figure on which he superimposes the right artistic line, so that the individuality of the wearer is first comprehended and enhanced. The final production is an ensemble of harmonies radiating from the natural basis and transformed by Art. In Dress, as in life, there is an eternal fitness of things. A woman of modest statue is graced by wearing straight lines, while a woman of heights above the normal needs draped lines. Similarly a figure of small waist cannot be gowned precisely as one of ample waist; one may feature a wide girdle, the other may not. To study your line is to master your figure and the House of Morgenroth's fulfills the humble mission of aiding every woman to understand her uniquely individual line.

HEALTH—"SAFETY FIRST"

WHEN Metchnikoff classed sickness from bacterial disease among accidents he started something. His statement was that men could be expected to wear out and that diseases due to wear and tear were a function of life itself, but not so with bacterial diseases. They were unnecessary, useless, and not a part of a proper scheme for things.

The time would come, he argued, when all of them would be prevented. That even now we knew enough to guard ourselves against them and that when one of them overtook us it was like being hit by an automobile—an accident which might have been prevented had proper precautions been taken.

This statement by Metchnikoff started some people to thinking. The great scientist said bacterial disease was an accident; that it could be prevented. Then they reasoned why not prevent all types of accidents as well as those classed as bacterial diseases, so, we might say, the safety first movement was conceived.

That might have been its conception, but its birth took place some time about 1912 with the organization of the safety council. But no baby is properly "borned" until it is properly named. The godfathers were happy in selecting an easily spoken, catchy name for this youngster. They called it "Safety First." The infant coming into a family where it was welcome, well born, and well named, grew amazingly.

In organized industry, the field of the safety first movement, the accident rates are lower than they were seven years ago. In the entire accident field there has been no decrease. This is because accidents have increased greatly in certain other directions. A study of deaths from accidents in Chicago by ten year periods shows that the number of fatal accidents is increasing faster than the population.

In 1867-'76 the fatal accident rate was 93.2 and in 1907-'16 it was 120.8. The highest rate was 121.6 in 1887-'96. The highest rate in any single year was 151.7, in 1893.

In 1918 there was the lowest rate of any year since 1900.

The increases were due to increase in accidents outside of industry. To illustrate, the first fatal automobile accident was in 1905. In 1918 of the 2,592 fatal accidents 302 were automobile accidents.

To show the reduction in the accident rates in what is termed industry, the following figures are given by Payne: In 1913 there were 25,000 deaths and 700,000 injuries serious enough to keep the injured away from work four weeks or more, all due to industrial accidents. In 1917 these numbers had been reduced to 22,000 fatal accidents and 500,000 serious, but not fatal ones, or a decrease of 12 per cent in fatal accidents and of 28 per cent in serious, but not fatal ones.

One large steel plant had an accident frequency rate of 300 in 1905, as compared with a like rate of 85 in 1917. The Commonwealth Steel had a per capita loss of days by employés on account of accidents in 1913 of 7.2, as compared with .6 in 1918.

The great improvement has come about of organized effort. The largest single underlying force was the workmen's compensation laws. These laws, passed in most of the states about 1912, made all clear headed, far seeing employers, especially in large industries, see the importance of prevention work. It is among their employés that the great reduction rates in accidents have come.

It is argued that health insurance will have the same effect on disease prevention that compensation laws have had on accidents and for the same reason. It will show employer and employé the expense of needless illness and the monetary advantage of preventing it.

The opponents of health insurance say the prevention of disease is a function of health departments and they offer as a substitute recommendation greatly increased powers and financial support of health departments.

The fact that the improvement in the accident rates in industries has been brought about by employers and employés with very little aid from either state or local departments has a bearing upon these substitute recommendations.

Accidents which occur outside of industries are called public accidents. Payne says that 400 of the 510 fatal accidents in St. Louis in 1917 were public accidents. Having recited several instances of great reduction in industrial accidents in recent years, he says:

"There is another story, however, for public accidents occurring in the home, on the street, and generally outside of industrial establishments. There has been a marked growth in the number of this type of accidents in the last few years.

"The reason for this rapid increase in public accidents, while the industrial accidents have as rapidly declined, is that industrial managers are thoroughly aroused to the necessity of accident prevention, but the public in general is still unconscious of the significance of safety."

The movement to lessen the accidents in industry has consisted in the installation of safety devices and in education. But there are difficulties in educating adults. Education in accident prevention consists in part in acquainting men with the facts about accidents—the number, the cost, the danger, and cautions necessary to prevent them.

In addition, there must be change in habits. The man always must carry in his subconscious mind the danger. Without thinking of it he must be on the alert always. The principles of safety must influence his actions and his mental processes.

That is a large program for the education of adults who as a class are set in their ways, their methods of thought, as well as in their muscle movements and coördinations. To do the job properly education must begin with the child.

The National Safety council, recognizing this, has had Dr. E. G. Payne prepare "Education in Accident Prevention," a treatise showing how accident prevention may be made a part of regular school instruction, without the addition of another subject to the curriculum. The little book is a recital of a method being tried out in the St. Louis public schools.

It is intended for teachers to whom it makes suggestions as to how to incorporate accident prevention in language work, drawing, arithmetic, geography, history, penmanship, and school organization. Two chapters are given to a detailed report of teaching as done in the Wyman school, showing how accident prevention material is brought into each of the branches indicated. For instance, here are certain problems in arithmetic:

If there are 700,000 people in St. Louis and 510 are killed by accident, how many would be left? What per cent are killed?

If the population of the United States was 91,972,266 and the fatal accidents were 77,000 annually, to what would the population be reduced by accident alone in ten years if there were no additions to the population?

Among the productions by the class in drawing were: An American flag with the slogan, "Make it stand for safety." Another with the slogan, "One man at work is worth two in a hospital." A poster showing a child on a chair drinking from a bottle taken from a medicine shelf bore the slogan, "Any fool can be careless."

A picture of a fireman carried the slogan, "If you smoke, outside with you."

The seventh grade pupils were required to prepare and deliver speeches. One girl in her speech gave a comparison between accident rates among civilians and wound rates among soldiers. In the fourth grade the following questions were asked in an examination:

1. Why does St. Louis spend money for traffic policemen, safety zones, and safety zone posts?
2. Why does the city send out health bulletins to the people?
3. Why is the water taken from the river twelve miles above the city?
4. Explain why St. Louis is laying out playgrounds all over the city.

A graduating class had to stand an examination on the following questions:

1. Describe the correct way to get on and off a street car.
2. What must you do on the discovery of a broken electric wire?
3. What is the danger of spitting in public places?
4. Name five public safety devices with which you are acquainted.
5. What may the automobilist reasonably expect of the pedestrian?
6. Give one important precaution in the handling of firearms.
7. Tell how to call the fire department.
8. What is the location of the box nearest your home?
9. What number do you call for the police?
10. Name five ways by which you can distinguish a careful person.

In order to teach good habits and also instruct in methods of organization and government they advocate organization of the school to promote the welfare of the school group.

A room organization has a president, vice president, secretary, assistant secretary, and the following committees:

1. On regularity and punctuality.
2. On books.
3. On new pupils.
4. On yards and basements.
5. On streets.
6. On stairs and corridors.
7. Room committee.
8. On school studies.
9. On safety.

The safety committee makes a weekly report to the room covering the accidents of which it has read or heard, the fires of the country with special reference to the fire loss in the home community, the health in the city with suggestions for the prevention of any disease which may be prevalent, and the dangerous practices which they have observed among school children. After they have reported, each pupil is given an opportunity to call attention to any hazard which he has noticed.

Among the common sources of accidents to school children are:

1. Carelessly thrown matches.
2. Broken windows.
3. Projecting nails.
4. Unclean cans or bottles.
5. Alighting from car in wrong manner.
6. Careless roller skating.
7. Reaching out of window.
8. Trying to reach objects in deep water.
9. Hitching on cars and wagons.
10. Playing tag on the street.
11. Jumping on or off moving cars.
12. Throwing.
13. Sneezing without use of handkerchiefs.
14. Tripping or removing chairs from under person.
15. Holding umbrella over face in crossing street.
16. Skating on thin ice.
17. Neglect of a wound or scratch.
18. Handling fallen wires.
19. Sucking a dirty finger.
20. Chewing the corner of a handkerchief.
21. Holding money in the teeth.
22. Eating candy or fruit exposed in insanitary places.
23. Leaving matches where rats or mice can get them.
24. Throwing banana peel on street or sidewalk.
25. Standing on a rocking chair.
26. Sitting in a draft.
27. Sleeping without ventilation.
28. Carrying pen or pencil with point exposed.
29. Running through building.
30. Crossing street in middle of block.
31. Standing in street waiting for car.
32. Holes in sidewalk.
33. Unsafe furnace pipes.
34. Accumulation of rubbish in basement.
35. Handling discarded cigaret stubs.

Dr. Payne reads a very broad meaning into accident. He outdoes Metchnikoff. I doubt if Metchnikoff would have agreed to No. 26. In a concluding chapter Mr. Whiting of the Safety First council says:

"Safety does not rob life of adventure, but only substitutes a worthy adventure for a stupid one. It is not a worthy adventure to lose an arm carelessly in the gears of a lathe or to lose a life under the wheels of a trolley car.

"It may be a very wonderful adventure to lose an arm or a life on a battlefield. It is not a worthy adventure to drown because some one rocks a boat, but it might be a very glorious adventure to drown in trying to fly across the ocean."

AMERICAN LEGION.
State Headquarters, 120 West Adams Street, Chicago, Ill.
Headquarters for Cook and Lake Counties, 210 Mallers Bldg.

The American Legion is the G. A. R. of the past war. Paris saw its inception early in April among a group of officers and privates. Its early objects and ideals were to protect, assist and promote the welfare of soldiers, sailors, and marines who had served in the war; to inculcate the obligations of citizenship, to preserve the history and records of the war, and to stand for every American principle. All these aims are now included in the definite purpose of the legion. It is a purely civilian organization, and all the distinctions of military rank are ignored.

Since its inception the league has grown incredibly. The aim of the committee was a membership of 4,000,000 men out of the 4,800,000 men eligible. So far the legion has enrolled nearly 1,000,000.

All men who served in the army or navy between the dates April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918, whether in this country or abroad, and whether as privates or officers, are eligible to membership. The blank printed above is an authentic copy of the application of membership issued by the legion. It may be clipped from the column, filled out and sent to either of the addresses printed above. If the applicant is a resident of Cook or Lake county, the application should be sent to the headquarters for those counties. It is advisable if the applicant desires the membership to be effective immediately to inclose with the application a check or money order for the year's dues of $2, made out to the secretary of the American Legion.

BILLS BEFORE CONGRESS.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 30.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Can you give me a summary through your column of the various bills before congress that are to affect men in service? PRIVATE E. T.

There are numerous bills of interest to service men before congress at present. The following are a few of them:

1. Act to amend the war risk and insurance act, enlarging the list of possible recipients of compensation by including any legally adopted child, step fathers and mothers, and any persons who have stood in loco parentis for a period of not less than a year, providing that if death should occur before discharge or resignation the United States shall pay for the burial and transportation of the body a sum not to exceed $100; providing an increase of approximately 10 per cent in compensation for disability; providing for optional settlements to be selected by the insured under the war risk insurance whereby the insurance may be paid in either a lump sum or in installments. This bill has passed the house and is awaiting the action of the senate.
2. A bill to provide funds ($200,000) for the care and maintenance of the graves of foreign soil of members of the military forces of this country.
3. A bill to credit officers of the United States naval forces with time served in the naval auxiliary service.

JAPAN'S GRIEVANCE
By K. K. Kawakami

The following excerpt is from "Japan and World Peace," K. K. Kawakami, an important book as revealing the Japanese attitude toward various international problems of the present time. Dr. Kawakami is the author of three other books relating to Japanese policy, and especially to American-Japanese relations. "The Tribune" is indebted to the Macmillan company, publishers of Dr. Kawakami's books, for permission to republish this extract from "Japan and World Peace."

WHEN on Feb. 15 the first draft of the covenant of the league of nations was adopted by the peace congress, Baron Nobuaki Makino, senior member of the Japanese delegation, delivered a congratulatory speech in the course of which he said:

"I beg to add another voice to echo the congratulatory speeches that have been made on the presentation of a document which is, perhaps, the most important document that has been compiled by man. The great leaders, with stanch purposes, have personified this great movement, a movement involving intricate problems of divers nations, and they deserve the gratitude of their fellow men for successfully piloting to this advanced stage a most effective instrument for the maintenance of the peace of the world. Their names will be written indelibly on the pages of history, and that will be the grateful acknowledgment of humanity for their labor."

At the same time the baron expressed a desire to reserve the "privilege of addressing, at a later stage of the discussion of this project, certain propositions which I hope will receive earnest and favorable consideration." If one remembers what the Japanese peace envoys had proposed two days before the adoption of the draft of the constitution of the league, one can surmise what Baron Makino had in mind in making this significant reservation.

It will be recalled that on Feb. 13 the Japanese envoys proposed that the covenant of the league of nations should include an article abolishing racial discrimination in future international dealings. The peace conference, without giving Japan even a semblance of a hearing, rejected the proposal.

Of all rebuffs Japan has met at the peace table, that was the most discouraging. By Japan I do not mean the Japanese government, much less the Japanese peace envoys. By Japan I mean the Japanese people, for this proposal to eliminate racial discrimination was primarily the proposal of 60,000,000 souls of the mikado's empire. One might almost say that it was forced upon the Japanese peace envoys by the masses of Japan. Not that the Japanese statesmen were not in sympathy with this popular demand, nor that they failed to recognize the logic and reason of the proposition. Convinced as they were of the justice of the argument advanced for the removal of racial barriers, the Japanese statesmen at the helm could not, nevertheless, see their way to put the proposition through the peace conference. However cogent and convincing the reasons might be in favor of the proposal, the Japanese leaders could not but recognize that the people of those great western countries, who had long discriminated against the Asiatic races, had not undergone a change of heart. To the contrary, they saw that even the baptism of blood and fire from which the world had just emerged failed to consecrate mankind to the ideals of humanity and universal brotherhood. What, then, would be the use of presenting to the peace congress such a pretentious proposal as the abolition of racial discrimination? The illustrious statesmen of the occident—Wilson, Clemenceau, Lloyd George, and their enlightened associates—might be broad enough to appreciate the reasonableness of such a proposition, but they, too, were naught but representatives of the multitudes of their respective countries, just as the Japanese envoys represented 60,000,000 of Nippon. And the multitudes whom those statesmen represented have, to no appreciable extent, altered their attitude towards the Asiatic peoples.

THE question of racial discrimination resolves itself, on the last analysis, to the hackneyed expression, "You cannot change human nature." And indeed the war has wrought little change upon human nature. Why, then, has the Japanese public been led to believe that the great statesmen at the peace congress may lend ear to a proposition to remove race discrimination? The explanation is simple.

For this miscalculation on the part of the Japanese the naïveté of the Japanese mind is partly responsible. But a greater responsibility rests with the foremost statesmen, publicists, and thinkers of Europe and America who seemed, during the period of the war, to vie with one another in expressing themselves in favor of justice and equity as the basic principles of international relations. In no previous war in the history of mankind has the world resounded with such humanitarian proclamations. To the Japanese there was no doubt that the great war stirred the conscience of mankind and of nations and created among them a sincere desire to readjust the future relationship among the civilized peoples of the world in accordance with the principles of humanity.

In the movement to awaken this world aspiration for establishing a lasting peace upon justice and humanity, America and President Wilson have figured most prominently. Mr. Wilson's public addresses and his numerous messages to congress since the beginning of the war contain many passages replete with lofty ideals and noble sentiments. All such addresses and messages have been translated and published in the Japanese press. Every utterance that fell from Mr. Wilson's lips, every sentence proceeding from his pen on the question of the war have been read and studied by millions of Japanese people. Of Mr. Wilson's many noble utterances, one which went most forcibly home to the Japanese mind is contained in the following passage of his historic war message of April 2, 1917:

"Only a peace between equals can last. Only a peace the very principle of which is equality and a common participation in a common benefit. The right state of mind, the right feeling between nations, is as necessary for a lasting peace as is the just settlement of vexed questions of territory or of racial and national allegiance. The equality of nations upon which peace must be founded, if it is to last, must be an equality of rights; the guarantees exchanged between big nations and small, between those that are powerful and those that are weak. Right must be based upon the common strength, not upon the individual strength, of the nations upon whose concert peace will depend. Equality of territory or of resources there, of course, cannot be; nor any other sort of equality not gained in the ordinary peaceful and legitimate development of the peoples themselves. But no one asks or expects anything more than an equality of rights. Mankind is looking now for freedom of life, not for equipoises of power."

From such humanitarian proclamations it seems but natural that the majority of the Japanese, unfamiliar with the complex currents of thought and sentiment in Europe and America, should be encouraged to conclude that, whatever be the attitude of the European statesmen, the illustrious American president, at least, would not turn a deaf ear to their appeals, the cardinal point of which is, in the president's own language, nothing more than an "equality of rights" and a "freedom of life." Would that the Japanese might know that President Wilson, sagacious and sympathetic as he is, could not assume responsibility for all the ills of mankind. His shoulders, already bent under the weight of the white man's problems, could not carry the added burden of the yellow man's problems.

If one realizes the unfeigned trust reposed in President Wilson by the Japanese, one can also appreciate the keen disappointment which was felt by them when Mr. Wilson opened no encouraging word for the proposal against racial discrimination, which they had caused their envoys to lay before the peace congress.

EVER since Japan opened her doors to foreign intercourse the Japanese have observed that the occidental nations had two standards of morals or justice—one for themselves and one for Asiatic peoples. If ever there was an opportunity for the abolition of this anomalous state of relations between the east and the west, the Japanese thought that the present peace congress offered such an opportunity. They are wondering whether the feint of hearing which their proposal received at the peace table is an indication that the great powers of the west mean to adhere to the double standards of justice which they have long maintained.

To understand the intense feeling with which the Japanese desired to write into the covenant of the league of nations an article providing for the removal of racial discrimination, one must know something of the population problem which has been harassing the Japanese.

During the last half century Japan's population has been increasing at an average rate of 400,000 per year. In recent years the rate of increase, instead of diminishing, has shown a tendency to become greater. The year 1917 witnessed a record breaking increase, totaling 800,000 in round numbers. Fifty years ago Japaan's population numbered some 33,000,000; today it has increased to 57,998,000. As the total area of Japan proper measures only 148,756 square miles, the density of population is about 389. While her population has been growing so rapidly she has in the last fifty years sent only 2,690,000 emigrants to various countries, including Hokkaido (North island of Japan), Formosa, Corea, Manchuria, Hawaii, and North America.

All European countries, at certain stages of their internal development, have alleviated the pressure of population at home by encouraging emigration. Moreover, most European countries have acquired vast overseas territories which have proved profitable to the mother countries either as colonies or as sources of supply of raw materials. These two factors—emigration and the acquisition of overseas territories—have, to no small extent, been responsible for the increase of wages and the promotion of general welfare among the working classes in occidental countries. Contrary to this advantage enjoyed by the European nations, Japan, one of the most congested countries in the world, has, by agreement among the occidental powers, been compelled to grapple with the difficult task of disposing of "surplus population" without seeking colonial territories, and without sending her sons to any of the countries which seem to offer the greatest opportunities to emigrants with modest means. Today food materials produced from Japan's own soil are not enough to feed her own population. With the standards of living growing higher the shortage of food supply becomes more serious.

In spite of the serious pressure of population at home, Japan cheerfully entered into agreement with the United States, Canada, and Australia, restricting the emigration of her people to those countries. These agreements have been observed by Japan in good faith and with the greatest strictness. And yet the governments of those western countries have not desisted from enacting measures curbing the rights and privileges of those Japanese who have been admitted into those countries in accordance with the provisions of the same agreements. Indeed, this last named discrimination has proven even more galling to the Japanese than the prohibition of emigration that has been imposed upon them. There is reason to believe that the Japanese complaint would be quieted if the great powers were to agree upon a principle of nondiscrimination to be applied to the treatment of orientals lawfully admitted into their domains, if not to the larger question of oriental emigration. As an indication of this conciliatory attitude on the part of the Japanese, I quote the following passages from a recent editorial in the Tokio Asahi, admittedly one of the most influential organs of public opinion in Japan:

"We do not propose to send our emigrants of the laboring class even where they are not welcome. But we do demand that our countrymen who have gone abroad in compliance with the provisions of our treaties and are engaged in legitimate business and enterprises in foreign countries should be accorded the same protection and the same privileges as are enjoyed by other nationals who are settled in those countries. We also demand that our merchants and travelers—people who do not belong to the laboring class—should not be made to suffer in foreign countries such inconveniences and restrictions as have never been imposed upon the 'white' persons of a corresponding class. These are the essential points which we hope will be serious considered by those statesmen of the west who are championing the cause of humanity.

"This, of course, does not mean that we recognize the justice of the exclusion policy assumed by certain western countries against our emigrants. To the contrary, we believe that such sparsely populated countries as Australia, most sections of which have been only one inhabitant to the square mile, should receive our emigrants. At the same time we realize that our insistence upon this point will disturb our amicable relationship with foreign nations. Wisdom dictates that we should not insist upon an absolute freedom of emigration for our people of the working class.

"But there is no reason why the exclusive or restrictive measures directed against our workingmen should also be applied to our merchants and travelers, who, small in number, seek to enter countries controlled by western nations. For this class of our countrymen we can reasonably demand an absolute freedom of travel and residence. We must also see to it that those of our countrymen who have been lawfully admitted into such countries are not made objects of discrimination and persecution, and subjected to inequitable laws, often depriving them of the means of livelihood as well as the security of property."

It is highly doubtful that this anomalous relationship between the orient and occident will be appreciably altered by the organization of the league of nations which refuses to accept the obviously just principle that no race in the league shall be discriminated against in any of the countries bound by its covenant. As far as Asia is concerned, the league is not likely to be a harbinger of glad tidings. Even the former German colonies will, under the euphonious title of mandatory, be controlled by a western nation or nations, which will exclude therefrom all orientals as they have excluded them from other territories in their possession. The far eastern peoples, then, must not, under the new world régime, expect much brighter days, but must be prepared to trudge along the same thorny path as heretofore, making the best use of their own resources and endeavoring not to trespass upon the domain monopolized by the great powers of the west, even if they have to trample upon one another within their own sphere in the sheer struggle for existence.

Since this chapter was written Japan has revised her proposition, making it clear that she does not seek free immigration and that her sole object is to safeguard the rights and privileges of her nationals who are already in or may hereafter be admitted into foreign countries in conformity with treaties (such as the "gentlemen's agreement") which she has entered or may enter into with other nations.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW
By Fanny Butcher

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"The Moon and Sixpence" [Doran], by W. Somerset Maugham.
"Young Visiters" [Doran], by Daisy Ashford.
"Sisters" [Doubleday Page], by Kathleen Norris.
"Mr. Standfast" [Doran], by John Buchan.
"The Branding Iron" [Houghton Mifflin], by Katherine Newlin Burt.
"Happy" [Knopf], by Joseph Hergesheimer.

NONFICTION.

"Roosevelt's Letters to His Children" [Scribners].
"The Amenities of Book Collecting" [Atlantic Monthly Press], by A. Edward Newton.
"Fields of Victory" [Scribners], by Mrs. Humphry Ward.

"BODY and Raiment" [Knopf] is one of the wonders of literature, a volume of modern poetry, which is untarnished by the hot hand of insincertly, unmarred by the careless finger of ugliness for effect. Eunice Tietjens is proclaimed through her "Body and Raiment" one of the few perfect poets of today. Her work has that quality of the joyous pain of beauty that all really great poetry has, and at once its unadorned fundamental sincerity. It is so simple as to be at one with all life.

"Profiles from China," the only other volume of verse which Mrs. Tietjens has published, interested me deeply, but it did not stir the depths of my soul. "Body and Raiment" does. It is sheer poetry. "Song for a Blind Man Who Could Not Go to War" is one of the most poignant and simple poems that the war has inspired. . . . I want to talk about them all, all until I come to a group of translations, charming, delicate, repeotizing of great French, Russian, old Spanish, and Japanese verse. Somehow, despite their beauty, their inclusion in the book jars a bit, as though one would say, "And see, not only can I fashion poetry, but I can refashion other poets' thoughts." Translations are a thing apart from "Body and Raiment."

Last year 8,487 volumes for the blind were circulated by the public library. That is a branch of public service which those of us who do not have to see with our finger tips never think of the library's performing.

"Chicago's Yesterdays" is the title of a "sheaf of reminiscences garnered by Caroline Kirkland," which Daughaday will publish this fall, a literary memory book of "those happy days now long past, my dear child, when Chicago used to be." Sixteen of Chicago's oldest residents of the social register contribute their literary snap shots and dance programs. It ought to be a pleasant book to dip into—it will be if Caroline Kirkland does any of the writing, for she has a rare literary charm, the charm of writing intriguingly of the few for the many.

When we were so mentally upwrought a few weeks ago about the ravaging moron stalking about the city, Theodore Dreiser's play "The Hand of the Potter" [Boni & Liveright] would have been timely propaganda. But as a reading play—ugh! It's a horrible thing. I can't imagine any one with any sense of art choosing as a subject for a drama a raper and murderer of little girls. Science may deal with perversions of sex, but surely we needn't be asked to watch or read plays about them. If I were a censor I would bar "The Hand of the Potter" from circulation and turn Mr. Dreiser over to the psychiatric ward.

"Our Casualty" [Doran] is a collection of George A. Birmingham's latest short stories about the war. Every time a new book comes with his name on the cover I have that same little chuckle of anticipatory delight which was caused by "The Island Mystery," "Spanish Gold," and "Lalage's Lovers," such wholly joyful tales that their memory is green through the years. And yet, Canon Hannay's later books are, to a volume, keen disappointments. That hilarious Irish fun which made the early books unforgettable has simmered down to a humor remarkable neither for its subtlety nor its glee. But such is hope in the human heart, even a Tabloid heart, that it springs eternal. And some day George Birmingham may write another "Island Mystery" and it would be an international calamity to miss it.

Do you remember "The House of the Wolf," and the other swashbuckling Stanley Weyman romances? I read them as a child, and I thought they were the work of a man long crowned by death. Not at all. Mr. Weyman is no more dead than Robert W. Chambers or H. G. Wells. He was only sleeping. "The Great House," a story of love and politics in England during Robert Peel's time, is announced for publication this month by Longmans, Green & Co.

A new edition of "What Pictures to See in Europe" [John Lane], by Lorinda Bryant, is a good volume to start your European tourist library with. Everybody will be going to Europe next year and a few will glance at the masterpieces of art during the hours when the battlefields are closed to visitors. This book will save wasted glances.

And speaking of art, the special number of The Studio devoted to "Early English Water Color Drawings" [John Lane] is a volume of rare loveliness. There are forty-four plates, among them twelve in colors, as exquisite reproductions of the spiritually evanescent Turner as I have ever seen. It is such a possession as Keats declared was a joy forever.

Three books on Theodore Roosevelt have made their bow almost simultaneously, Lawrence Abbott's "Impressions of Theodore Roosevelt" [Doubleday Page], "Bill Sewall's Story of T. R." [Harpers], and Daniel Henderson's "Great Heart" [Knopf]. I confess that after the complete autobiography which Mr. Roosevelt unconsciously wrote in his inspired "Letters to His Children" [Scribner's] any book about him just now seems an anticlimax. If you haven't read his letters, haste you to the nearest bookshop and buy them. They deserve a loving place in the heart of every American.

The Japanese government has recently purchased copies of "What of the City?" [McClurg], Walter D. Moody's book on cities, with a special Chicago angle. The theory is that Japan wants to have a few little Chicagos tucked away among its cheery blossoms, I suppose. I hate to disobey our great lord and master, the may-or of the ci-tee, but it would be easier to blow a horn if, for instance, I didn't have to ride down on the grimy road of anti-white every day, and plow through a pall of smoke to get to the heart of our great and glorious town. We have, potentially, the greatest city in America, by all odds, but we can't make it a reality by throwing away our effective hammers and bleating about ourselves.

If your mind is a rover in fairy fields, if your heart chuckles gayly at tales that bring a smile and a tear at the same time, you will like "Lo, and Behold Ye!" [Stokes] by Seumas MacManus, another group of those wholly delightful Irish folk tales that have made for him a permanently green place in the hearts of all of us who know his work.

Mr. Dooley used to be as popular as the omnipresent "Good-morning, have you used Pears' soap?" No day used to be complete without him. Since 1910, however, he has been enjyin' a sur-r-cease from the throubles of book publishin'. Now, he's in again—in book covers that is. "Mr. Dooley on Making a Will and Other Necessary Evils" [Scribner's] has been out long enough to be in your literary repertory.

Eder Phillpotts must find much comfort in the knowledge that as long as England remains industrially productive he will have novels to write. He has set himself the task of writing a novel with an industrial background around each of the great English industries. He has checked off six of them so far. The last one is the manufacture of paper, though "Storm in a Tea Cup" [Macmillan] sounds more as though it should have been backgrounded by the pottery industry. It is a novel deftly plotted and written in a lighter vein than the preceding quintet, the story of an elopement which proved too proper for the elopee, and which thrust her back into her husband's arms.

"A Candle in the Wind" [Moffat-Yard], by Mary Imlay Taylor, is a not-too-dull psychological novel of the "But he is my husband and I must stick by him" type. There is an unusual twist to the plot because the husband is a coward and the other man more than a real hero—he's too good to be true—and the girl married him only because she thought the other man was dead. It is a complicated bit of psychologizing, which leaves the reader feeling a little balmy about the obtuseness of the angles of the triangle or his own.

"C. K., the Iron Hunter" [Macmillan] is the autobiography of Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, a tale which upholds the assurance that truth is stranger than fiction. It is as full of blood and iron as any story ever was.

"Believe You Me" [Doran] is the favorite expression of the queen of the dance, Marie La Tour, nee Circus, and the six stories which make up the volume are in Nina Wilcox Putnam's gayest mood.

Mary Carolyn Davies proves that she is an all around poet by writing verses for children, "The Little Freckled Person" [Houghton-Mifflin]. She began her poetic career in her first year in high school by going from room to room and writing verses on the blackboard to boost the circulation of the high school magazine.

VIEWS OF A SOCIALIST
By Ernest Untermann

THE aftermath of the world war and the preliminaries to one of the most portentious presidential campaigns in this country find the American electorate more divided than it has ever been. The vast conventional majority following the two old parties is very restless. New occasions hammering at the hoary fortress of the older statesmen call upon new leaders to perform new duties. The lines of cleavage between the old and new generation of statesmen in the old parties are growing very sharp. Secession threats, more earnest than any made since the Bull Moose campaign, are heard on all sides. The young leaders demand up to date policies, for which the old guard has neither understanding nor good will. If secession takes place, it will find a vast following ready to join a new progressive organization.

The issue in the old parties is between those who wish to continue the policy of commercial expansion, with its militarism, and those who desire an adjustment of domestic affairs on a more liberal basis, which shall remove the main causes of social unrest. The younger statesmen understand that the old parties cannot remain in power if they cannot solve this issue between the leaders of high finance and the great middle class. They say that the old parties must either adopt more progressive policies or a new political power will crowd them out.

The organizations outside the two old parties show even greater ferment. The largest organized body of wage workers, the American Federation of Labor, has not only more than its usual share of jurisdiction troubles, but also a more fatal rift in the shape of an exodus from its ranks into a new Independent Labor party. This has already assumed serious proportions. It cripples the Gompers machine, rendering its value as a democratic asset doubtful.

THE Socialist party, thanks to the intrigues of Russian bolsheviki and native mouth-radicals, has been split into three factions. Each is trying to take members, funds, papers, and party machinery away from the others. We now have a Socialist party, a Communist party, and a Communist Labor party. Their slogan is: "Workers of the World, Unite!" Their example says the opposite. A hard world, this, which severs even the most inveterate preachers of labor unity.

The issue between them is also one of judgment concerning the most probable development of the future. The Communists insist that the United States is ready for a bolshevist revolution by other than legal means. They frankly make outlaws of themselves and do not think much of political methods now in vogue. The Socialist party, which still gathers unto itself the majority of the Socialists, claims that the capitalist method of doing business has outlived its time, but that legal methods of political procedure must be observed to gain their end.

The older statesmen in the old parties are too slow for the younger generation, the Socialist radicals are too fast, and the Socialist party leaders mingle too much dogmatism with their politics to secure a successful hearing for their views. The I. W. W., one of whose main functions has been to sow disruption in the American Federation of Labor and in the Socialist party, will now have two valiant aids in the Communist Labor and Communist parties. They will also help to infuse new disruptive life into the I. W. W. itself. Dame History loves her little jokes.

NEXT we have the Farmers' Nonpartisan movement. It will try to enter the presidential campaign as a national organization, although it is hardly big enough for such a step. But it will swell its size by an alliance with the new Labor party. Steps to this end are under way.

This looks like a coming power. The past history of this country proves that a farmers and wage workers' alliance always takes a million or more votes away from the old parties, at the very first crack. This new alliance will be more formidable than any before it. And it will very probably be joined by the organization now forming under the Committee of Forty-eight. This is a body at present composed mainly of small business men, professionals, liberal statesmen from the two old parties, and progressives from the Socialist movement, who have found the Socialist party too impractical for present day political work. This group will secure a fairly large following of little business men, professionals, clerks, and independent artisans. If they join the farmers and wage workers' alliance they will indeed make a bid for votes which may equal that of the Bull Moose party.

This new progressive party will have no lack of promising presidential timber. Progressives in both old parties, ready to secede, will be eligible and have enough of a national reputation to attract attention.

This new nonpartisan and progressive party will form a nucleus around which all the dissatisfied elements in all other parties will gather. These elements will come from all walks of life, drawn together by the common conviction that a "revolution" after the bolshevist model is not what they want, and that a more liberal adjustment of our social life is imperative. They are tired of the old party machines, have no confidence in the Socialist party, despise the Communist groups, and are determined to have social progress by legal methods.

This new party will be easily the most significant product of the great American ferment. There is a vast body of level headed, America loving, and fair play demanding American voters who will hail such an organization with eager delight. The Bull Moose movement proved how dangerous a progressive movement led by a popular candidate can become to the old parties. So far this element has not had an organization or representation of its own. Now it is determined to have a new deal.

The high cost of living, profiteering scandals, exposures of corruption in the highest places, a general feeling that the people have been bunkoed by the war makers, form the main spring that sets this body of voters in motion. The tentative platforms already adopted by the Nonpartisans, the Labor party, and Committee of Forty-eight prove their leaders to be fully aware of the real social problems that are back of these surface eruptions.

In this respect the new progressive movement differs from its historical predecessors. And it differs from the Socialist party in its practical handling of immediate problems. It is not handicapped by dogmatism, theoretical or practical. It goes after results and gets them. And it has the earmarks of permanency which former progressive movements lacked. It is not probable that this new movement will ever be lured from its straight path by any silver tongued orator, as others were. Nor will the customary methods of the older statesmen be able to cope with it. Mere platform promises of minor reforms will no longer do. Our industrial life has reached a climax. Even the great corporation chiefs understand this. It is no longer a question of dodging a new readjustment, but rather a question of readjusting things in the old corporation way or in the new progressive way.

No doubt the older statesmen in both old parties will be wise enough to bend under the storm and to yield gracefully. At least the majority of them will. The policies of both old parties will become far more liberal than any old guardsman considered possible ten years ago. But even this belated liberalism will not stop the exodus of younger statesmen into the new progressive movement.

THE Democratic party will feel the first blows of this new progressive guard far more heavily than the Republican. One might be tempted to expect the opposite, in view of the large vote polled by the Bull Moose party which split the Republican party fairly in two nearly equal halves. But the situation has changed. The storm center now moves against the Democratic administration. The feeling is spreading rapidly that all those who trusted in President Wilson as the champion of the new freedom and tribune of world democracy have been shamefully hoodwinked.

Time and again the chief executive has convicted himself out of his own mouth of all the insincerities and weaknesses of which his enemies used to accuse him. The longer he talks the more of his enthusiastic followers are disillusioned. His present speaking tour will complete his self-exposure, for it comes at the very time when the chickens hatched by his diplomacy are coming home to roost in increasing numbers.

The Republican party will derive the greatest benefits from the disillusionment of the people. This drift towards the Republican party is strengthened by the suspicion that the Mexican and Japanese problems, which are pressing towards a solution as insistently as our domestic social problems, would be handled in the same inefficient way as the European war problems, if left in the hands of the present chief executive or one of his caliber.

Under these circumstances it seems inevitable that the Republican party should win the next presidential campaign, even with the handicap of its old guard. And in order to balance the scales of social justice with those of our next international problems, the voters will probably give the new progressive movement a strong vote of confidence and send a goodly number of their representatives into congress. This will be a reminder for the victorious Republicans to liberalize their domestic policies. If they attempt to stifle the cry for social readjustment by a new war they will quickly be taught that they have made a mistake. A new war may be inevitable as things are developing, but it must hasten rather than defer the solution of our internal problems, or the leaders of this country will have something worse than a progressive movement to face.

The new progressive movement will adopt most of the present day demands of the old Socialist party. Between the Scylla of the "left wing" and the Charybdis of the new progressive movement, the Socialist party will be crowded into the background. Its principal constructive functions will be performed by the new progressives; its radical propaganda by the Communists. If its leaders retain any sense of reality they will adapt themselves to the evident fact that America, like Europe, is moving towards a liberal coalition government which will seek to meet the national and international problems by legal methods and avoid the costly cataclysm of a violent overthrow.

This development certainly appeals to the majority of the American voters. It would be desirable from a humanitarian point of view for all concerned, even if it were not decreed by destiny.

BAUDELAIRE'S LETTERS
By James Gibbons Huneker

WHEN a well known man dies in England they ask: What did he do? In France: How did he do it? In the United States: How much did he leave? But the Socialist in every land says: He didn't do it! The poetic production of Charles Baudelaire, if put to the same test questions, might easily be conceived as evoking even more variety of responses. Baudelaire has said that nations produce great men against their will. While his position in the poetic firmament of France is that of a star of the first magnitude, there are, nevertheless, dissidents, especially among foreign critics, who either cannot or will not admit what is become a truism in French criticism.

And the critical literature concerning the poet grows apace. His letters to his mother, recently published, make a volume admirably calculated to illuminate the character of the man. It contains a preface and notes by Jacques Crépet, who, it may be remembered, assisted his father, Eugène Crépet, in the biographical study of Baudelaire, a definitive study, one is tempted to add, for it dissipated a lot of legends (most of them fabricated by the poet himself) and put his house of life into some sort of order. Above all, it cleared up the rather murky atmosphere of his relations with Jeanne Duval, his "Black Venus," was in reality a young woman with hardly a moiety of African blood in her veins. But she served as a peg for the poet upon which to hang some of his most acrid and lovely verse, therefore she must pass muster to any estimate of his disquieting genius.

THE previous collection of letters are of more general interest, for they are addressed to his most distinguished contemporaries—painters, poets, musicians—his friend, Richard Wagner, among the rest—men of letters, and aristocratic ladies. But in the letters to his mother, Mme. Aupick, the atmosphere is more dramatic, more intense. A duel is fought from his school days to the year previous to his death; the duel of a man, half crazed with alcohol and drugs, and a mother who failed to understand the queer duckling of genius she had hatched out in her first marriage.

Demands for money fill the majority of these epistles. Pleas for his poetic work also loom largely, but poverty is the leading motive throughout. We catch more than a profile portrait of the mother; it is not always winning or "motherly." How could it be with such a son? A half Hamlet, he was jealous of his mother's second husband. It was one of the determining causes of his morbid growth. How has his case so long escaped the psychiatrists of the psychoanalytic school? Albert Mordell, in his "Erotic Element in Literature," could have found him a better subject than Stendhal for the Oedipus complex.

Notwithstanding his Flowers of Evil, his diabolic and dandical poses, Baudelaire was not a wicked hearted man. Weak he was rather than depraved. And too curious of certain matters. He did explore the subcellars of the soul, dive into cesspools, and expose putrid sores. A scavenger poet, nevertheless a great poet, the greatest since Hugo. Today his successor to the purple is Gabriele d'Annunzio.

A THIRD person has a share in the new Letters, M. Ancelle, the advocate and guardian of the errant Charles. Alternately cajoling and bullying, the letters addressed him by his charge reveal a curious mentality. The father of Baudelaire bequeathed his son about 75,000 francs, soon dissipated by the incipient dandy on pictures, furniture, jewelry, bibelots, clothes, and light o' loves; yet he seemed to think that his guardian was robbing him, that his mother hated him. In the mists and ecstasies of his wild life he saw nothing clearly—except his shining visions, and being of an obstinate nature, he pinned these visions to paper.

These letters to his mother are the most human of documents. Charles Baudelaire is the saddest and profoundest poet in modern literature.

ASTRONOMY

A TRIP TO THE MOON.

LET us take a trip to the moon. This need not provoke any smiles on your part, for the thing can be done, in part at least. We can approach near enough to the surface of our satellite to be able to see objects as large as good sized houses. Without ever leaving the earth we can attain a position which, in fact, would correspond to a vantage point about five miles directly above any spot we wished to view.

By sitting down in a comfortable chair and studying our satellite through a large telescope, a person can have a magnificent birdseye view of that land of ancient fire and desolation, all without any danger or discomfort at all. The word danger is well meant, for an actual traveler on the moon would be constantly subject to a pelting that would make the fiercest fire on a battlefield of modern war seem tame in comparison.

As the earth plunges along, dragging the moon with it, it encounters vast clouds of meteors from time to time. On earth we hardly notice them unless we happen to watch the sky for "shooting stars." The air above us catches them and burns them up before then can get near enough to the ground to be dangerous. But on the moon, where there is no air, they rain down like swarms of shrapnel bullets, only with terrific violence.

The slowest that a meteor can ever travel is three or four miles a second, and they frequently go ten times that. The surface of the moon is constantly pelted by this never ending rain, and it would be uncomfortable for any soft bodied human being to be out in it.

We might expect such a rain to profoundly affect the surface features of the moon, and rightly so. There are many small craters that look like meteor pocks, and probably when the millions of them have been counted, we shall find their numbers steadily increasing.

Let us put the general view eyepiece in the telescope, and look through it to the moon. Such a world it is we see! The shadows there are as black as ink, as black as the open, empty sky beyond. They look like splashes of india ink spattered here and there over a blindingly bright silver surface. When our eyes have grown accustomed to the glare, we note that the bright spot to the sunward side of every shadow is a little lump on the moon's surface. It must be, in fact it is, a mountain.

Now let us slip in a high magnifying eyepiece that will bring us to within almost shouting distance to the scene spread out below.

Beneath us is a landscape more terrible and more desolate than any the world could ever know. Great piles of ashes lie everywhere, interspersed with burned sheets of hardened lava. Fine powdery dust covers everything, but through it we can occasionally catch glimpses of the hard, gray green or slate colored rock that forms the true surface of the moon. We could not walk on the moon's surface, even if we were there. In many places crag is piled on crag in such jumbled confusion that there literally is not one spot of level ground. Criss-crossing this mighty waste are gigantic cracks, yawning abysses, with precipitous sides, and bottoms, if they have them, miles and miles below. These chasms split great mountains from crest to base, and the harsh, untempered sunlight, playing upon their naked sides, pictures the moon to us as a world of unthinkable chaos.

The SCHOOL COUNSELOR

"I will go with thee and be thy guide."—Everyman.

[For any information on schools or education write the School Counselor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.]

REPORT CARDS ARE DUE.

FIVE weeks of the first semester in the public high schools have passed and each pupil in high school has received or is about to receive a report card showing his or her progress in each subject and also his attendance. The parent signs this card after studying it, and in studying it there are several things to observe.

There is one which may seem of least importance to the parent, and that is attendance. Many times a parent comes to school, complaining that he or she cannot understand why a child is failing since he never misses a day. There may be more absence than the parent can account for on the report card. The pupil may have stayed out of school, written his own excuse, and handed it in as genuine. The parent's only way of discovering such absence is the report card.

Another item to observe is tardiness. Is it necessary? Does the pupil start on time and, if so, does he waste his time?

In these points the parent can aid in the discipline of the school and also the development of right habits in the boy or girl.

Then there are the marks in the different subjects to be observed. Marks are an excellent criterion as to the pupil's progress, and every parent should keep a careful account of the monthly grading.

Are they all E? E means above 90 and excellent. This mark is a cause of congratulation. G means between 80 and 90 and is an occasion for a comfortable contentment even if the G marks predominate and the E marks are few and far between. F, which stands for fair and is between 75 and 80, is a danger signal. It means that there is considerable room for improvement. D, which is below 75, means that something must be done at once.

If a pupil is D in any subject there is just one duty for the parent and that is to go to school, confer with the principal, and find the cause of the trouble. If all parents fulfilled this duty there would be large crowds in the school corridors and the appearance would doubtless be something like a bargain sale. But few parents ever do go. Relation between the parent and the school, particularly if the pupil is not progressing as he should, is too often strained. There is seldom any real understanding. Definite facts are difficult for the parent to obtain and the teacher knows the pupil only through the subject in which he is not succeeding, sees him perhaps only one hour a day and in the presence of forty or fifty other students.

Some parents never even see the cards with D on them. The pupil signs his own card and returns it. Other parents scold a little and the pupil promises to do better. The few parents who do come meet with their reward, for they learn the cause of the trouble. And when the cause of the trouble is discovered half of the battle is usually won.

There are several reasons which are among the most frequently contributing causes of trouble.

One reason may be that the pupil is taking too much work. That can be remedied easily. One subject may be dropped. It is much better to drop a subject than to fail in it. Better for the record of the pupil in school and better for the pupil from a health standpoint.

Or again he and his teacher may not be able to understand each other and a visit from a parent can set that matter right.

Perhaps the pupil has told his parents that he did not need to study outside of school hours. This statement is soon discovered to be untrue by the parent who visits school. Every pupil should have a quiet, well lighted room for study in the evening from one to two hours, and the room should be free from conversation and the pupil have a table to work on.

Another advantage of the parent's coming to school is in the added knowledge which the teacher gains of the situation at home. One girl is failing because of serious illness at home. A boy is failing because he carries papers every morning and is patently not equal physically to the strain. Another, a girl, is at the telephone switchboard from 4 until 10 p. m., while a boy is working late at some job or other. In all such cases the school work can be lightened and the teacher placed in a position to understand the pupil better.

Unquestionably, the best service which the parents can render their boys and girls is the careful scrutiny of these five weeks' report cards.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I am anxious to take up the study of interior decorating, but am uncertain which is the best school in Chicago to attend. Is there a good field in this line of work and what school would you advise? M. J."

There are a number of excellent schools in the city where you can study interior decorating. It is a good line of work to follow if you have talent in that direction. If you will send me your address I shall be glad to send you a list of schools giving instruction in this work.

"Is there any free evening school in the loop offering instruction in stenography and shorthand? M. V."

Commercial evening school instruction for high school graduates is given in the McClurg building, 218 South Wabash avenue.

Teeth Are Ruined

By a Film—Millions of Them

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Free A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent, to show you how to end film. See below.

On Your Teeth Now

There is now on your teeth a slimy film. You can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

The tooth brush alone doesn't end it. The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve it. So month after month it stays there and may do a ceaseless damage.

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Most tooth troubles are now traced directly to that film.

Dental scientists have for years sought a way to end film. They have known that brushing could not save teeth if it left that film upon them. Now that film combatant has been found. Convincing tests, under able authorities, have proved it beyond question. The method is now embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we supply it free for testing to anyone who asks.

The Way to End It

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to constantly combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has discovered a harmless activating method. Now activated pepsin can be applied, night and morning, to combat that film.

Leading dentists everywhere are now advising Pepsodent. Countless people have already adopted it. And trial tubes are offered everywhere to show others what it does.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Let your own mirror show you what Pepsodent means to your teeth. Then decide for yourself about it. Cut out the coupon now.

GREAT FUTURE FOR THE MILK GOAT

By Frank Ridgway.

MOST all good things are ridiculed before they are fully appreciated, and surely the goat has borne its full share of being ridiculed in America. This patient little animal is no longer a joke, and now deserves to be placed in a class with the other four footed aristocrats of the animal kingdom, the cow, horse, swine, and sheep.

While it was announced many years ago by thoughtful men that the quarrelsome "Billy" and the innocent mate "Nanny," so long held in light esteem, were worth while domestic animals, it has been difficult to convince the general public that the goat is anything but a worthless creature. How often the goat is regarded as an animal with a craving appetite for tin cans, harness buckles, and barb wire, but the milk goat has at last been brought into the plans of household economics.

Proof that the milk goat has gained recognition in this country lies in the fact that college presidents, doctors, dietics, judges, lawyers, journalists, educators, in fact, all lines, have indorsed it as being worthy. Since it is evident that the milk goat industry is becoming quite securely established throughout the country generally, many people, especially those living near the cities, have naturally begun to consider going into the business. Although the milk goat industry in the United States has not as yet developed to any great extent, there is reason to believe that great progress will be made within the next few years.

It is surprising the number of persons who have become interested in this new industry during the last year, and it is equally surprising how little is known about the milk goat. Herd owners, scattered throughout the country, receive inquiries concerning the goat from all classes of people and from all parts of the country. Interest in the past, however, has been largely among people who are somewhat familiar with conditions in other countries where the milk goat has proved a success, and they know the value of the milk. But now all classes are interested.

Up to this time the milk goat industry has been given little publicity, yet the goat has apparently filled all expectations. Those who were reared in foreign countries where goat's milk is largely or solely used, and those who were fond of the economy of keeping cows, the value of the milk for children and sick people and for the making of cheese, have been seeking information on the subject. They are in most cases unable to find proper advice for beginners.

Government officials have been induced to take up investigation because of the increasing inquiries on the milk goat. There is urgent need for such information, and breeders and others interested are hopeful that the officials of the National Toggenburg Breeders' association, who are to meet here tomorrow, will effect some means of answering these inquiries. A great deal has been done by earnest men in contributing to the growth of goat culture through breeding and caring for their own flocks, and there should be some effective means of disseminating this valuable information among the eager folk who want to begin raising goats.

It is going to take a long time to restock the world with dairy animals and to bring the supply of milk, butter, cheese, and other diary products up to normal. It is a timely undertaking for federal and state authorities and individuals to coöperate in promoting the progress of the milk goat in America.

In trying to get information from breeders and officials the fact was revealed that there are too few milk goats in the country. Those who know their value are unwilling to sell them except for a fair price. This is especially true of the pure bred goats, such as the Toggenburg, Saanen, and the Anglo-Nubian, the principal breeds of milk goats in America.

When the ignorant prejudice is once overcome that the meat is strong and the milk is tainted with a "goaty" odor, people will wonder how they ever did without the milk goat. This animal is a prominent feature of the live stock industry of Europe. In France the milk goat furnished amusement for the American troops as they marched from the boat to the battle front. In passing through the French villages it was common to see the old man from the goatery leading three or four goats along the street, stopping in front of his customer's door to draw the morning's supply of rich, warm milk. In this way the daily delivery of milk is made.

In many parts of Europe the goat is taking the place of the cow. During the four terrible years of war the land in eastern Europe was stripped of its cattle by the armies. There is a great shortage of fats all over that country, even in regions where dairy products were produced in enormous quantities before the war, and today goat's milk is in big demand.

There is a great future for the milk goat in the United States. "We Americans pride ourselves upon being the most aggressive people in the world in all that pertains to well being, mentally, physically, and financially," says W. T. TeWalt of Vincennes, Ind., who has been breeding milk goats for forty years, "but have sadly overlooked one of the most important elements so needful to the advancement of our race—nature's food, milk, especially goat's milk.

"I have demand for all the goat milk I can spare," he said. "I get 25 cents a quart, while in many places it commands a much higher price; but the best compensation I receive is the expression of gratitude from those who are benefited by its use."

It has been known for ages that goat milk is good for babies, especially sick ones. A great deal of study has been given this subject by physicians to find out the causes that led to such excellent results where the milk was fed to the sick. Under the heading of "Dietetics and Hygiene," the Journal of the American Medical association prints the following:

The goat is the healthiest domestic animal in the world. It is immune from tuberculosis. Goat's milk is superior in every way to that of the cow, being nearly twice as rich in butterfat, which does not readily separate from the milk unless heated. Goat's milk is the ideal food for babies, convalescents, and invalids, especially those with weakened digestive powers. Goat's milk is the purest, most healthful, and the most complete human food known.

Goats are easily kept, and in these days when food is scarce and prices are high the goat is the aristocratic little animal that seems to solve the problem of the "family cow" to the backyard farmer, especially in towns and cities. The goatery need not be elaborate; some use piano boxes, and a small dry yard and a warm shed makes a comfortable home for the goat.

If some one were to ask you if you liked a goat, you would probably say "No!" Some of the most enthusiastic and successful goat breeders today said "No!" and they said it loudly and emphatically when first asked the question. Now they admit it was due to prejudice and because they did not know anything about the milk goat. Thousands said yes to this question many years ago in other countries. France has 1,500,000 milk goats; Spain, 3,000,000; Argentina, 4,000,000; Brazil, 10,000,000; India, 30,000,000; and Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, and the Balkans breed them in large numbers. In the United States the number of registered or purebred milk goats is less than 4,000. The first importation of milk goats into the United States was in 1904.

"There is no question but what the milk goat industry far excels the sheep industry, animal for animal," says J. C. Darst of Dayton, O., secretary of the American Milk Goat Record association, and a breeder of milk goats. The goat selling for meat will nearly equal the sheep, and in milk will go far ahead of the wool in value. A good milk goat will give from 1,000 to 2,000 pounds of milk a year. The milk averages one-third richer than cow's milk and sells for 25 cents a quart. It is much preferred to cow's milk on account of its purity.

"The goat breeds the same as a sheep," he continues, "usually having two kids at a birth. Grade does usually sell for from $25 to $50, and for pure breeds from $75 to $200, depending on the purity and quality. The common short haired does may be bought for from $3 to $8 each. We feed the same as for cows, and average six to seven goats on the same amount of feed that is required to feed a cow."

Many persons who, owing to their circumstances or surroundings, cannot keep a cow could easily do so. It is not necessary to buy an expensive purebred herd. A good grade of milk goats has been developed by using the common short haired Mexican or American goat as a foundation, crossing them with a good buck of some of the different breeds. There are many persons whose health would be greatly benefited by the use of goat's milk, and there are also many others who could find both profit and pleasure in keeping a few goats for their home use or breeding them for sale to others.

Chicago's First Cardinal May Be Mundelein

By the Rev. F. L. Gratiot.

WILL Chicago be honored by having Archbishop Mundelein appointed a cardinal at the meeting of the vatican consistory next December, as has been mentioned as among the possible recipients of the red hat as a mark of special favor for work in the church?

The Most Rev. George W. Mundelein, D. D., is celebrating the tenth anniversary of his consecration as a bishop. He was advanced to the episcopate as titular bishop of Loryma and auxiliary bishop of Brooklyn in September, 1909, at St. James' pro-cathedral, Brooklyn.

"It needs but the records to set down what Archbishop Mundelein has done since his coming to Chicago," says the Rev. Thomas Shannon, editor of the New World. "These challenge admiration. Their narration is almost a romance. Only their accomplishment could carry conviction. But they are convincing evidence that the words that the archbishop spoke when he came four years ago to Chicago were not empty. Such energy as he has displayed has well merited the coöperation of the clergy, and such care and solicitude as he has manifested for the poor and the needy have won for him the love of his people, and such sterling qualities of mind and heart as he has displayed have endeared him to all the citizens of Chicago."

The outstanding work of Archbishop Mundelein is the establishment of Quigley Memorial seminary, which is now housed in the beautiful Gothic buildings at Rush and Pearson streets. The gift of the Cudahy family, the seminary buildings are exact replica of Sainte chapel, Paris, and are among the finest pieces of architecture in America.

The seminary is a preparatory school for boys studying for the priesthood. Its enrollment in 1915 was 190; this year there are 420 in attendance.

A great number of scholarships have been established, so that the boys who are called to the priesthood, but cannot afford the necessary education, are provided for.

The Holy Name society has grown and expanded under the guidance and inspiration of the archbishop. It has increased in membership from a few thousand to nearly 50,000. The championship, protection and redemption of wayward boys has been added to its program.

The Holy Cross mission for the unemployed was founded by Archbishop Mundelein, and nightly shelters hundreds of poor, unfortunate men.

One of his greatest accomplishments is the unification of the various charities conducted by the Roman Catholic church into the Associated Catholic Charities. Half a million dollars has been raised toward the fund of $150,000 needed for carrying on the work of orphanages, hospitals and other institutions.

In honor of the tenth anniversary of his consecration as a bishop, THE TRIBUNE is giving a picture of the possible future cardinal to its readers.

A reproduction of a photograph of Archbishop Mundelein accompanies this issue of The Sunday Tribune as a supplement.

Parishioners of St. Clement's Roman Catholic church, Deming place, near North Clark street, will hold a general meeting tomorrow night in preparation for a week's festival beginning on Nov. 23. O. Deis, choirmaster of the church, will be in charge of the entertainment program during the festival, and which will include the "Carol for St. Clement's Day," never before heard in Chicago. The festival is in connection with a bazaar for St. Clement's church.

The Rev. John Morris Evans, who comes to All Souls church, and Abraham Lincoln Center, to succeed the late Jenkin Lloyd Jones, preaches his first sermon there this morning.

Mr. Evans, like Mr. Jones, is a Welshman. He was born at Aberdale, Glamorganshire, Wales, in 1877. When he was three years old his family came to America and his early education was received in the night schools of Chicago, attending later the Scranton Business college. From there he went to Bucknell university, Lewisburg, Pa.

He then went to England and studied at Oxford university and also at Paris. His ministry began in Wales where he was ordained in 1903 in the Memorial Baptist church, Builth, Wells, Breconshire, Wales. He later served for five years in Abertillery. There he was closely associated with radical social reformers and was active in the work leading to the formation of the British Labor party. One of his associates in the work there is now a member of the British commission on industrial relations, another is in the council of the miners' federation. Mr. Evans's was known as a liberal and a radical in his theology from classes he held in economics, ethics, psychology, and world religion.

A breakdown in health brought Mr. Evans to America for recuperation. He decided to remain and became pastor of the Baptist church in Lowville, N. Y. His pastorate there, according to Dr. Farnshaw, pastor of the Presbyterian church, was characterized by an unflinching teaching of liberal theology, a bold interpretation of social problems, and a passionate intensity of spiritual convictions.

Mr. Evans comes to Chicago from the Unitarian church at Dayton, O., where he has been for the last three years. He is the author of a book called, "The Conflict in Christian Beliefs," published in 1908, the outcome of the "new theology" movement in England.

The Rev. L. J. Velte will be installed as pastor of the Tabernacle Baptist church this afternoon. He recently returned from service as a chaplain in the American army in France.

At the Olivet Institute church, 1440 Sedgwick street, this morning the subject will be "The Church and Business." Business men will occupy the platform and take part in the service. Laymen will also participate in the evening service, when the pastor, the Rev. Norman B. Barr, will speak on "The Church and the Family."

Religious meetings for men will be held at the noon hour on Mondays and Thursdays at the Young Men's Christian association, 19 South La Salle street. Tomorrow Dr. Cleland B. McAfee of the McCormick Theological seminary will speak on "Will Christianity Do the Business?" On Thursday the Rev. Henry Hepburn of the Buena Presbyterian church will speak on "The Greater Offensive."

Bishop Sumner of Oregon will preach to his old parishioners at the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul this morning at the 11 o'clock service.

The Rev. Austin Hunter of the Jackson Boulevard Christian church, 2421 Jackson boulevard, announces a sermon tonight on "Happy Homes"—a sermon to the 500 couples the pastor has married during his ministry in Chicago.

Is Mooney Guilty?

should be investigated again. After considering the evidence Judge Griffin said:

"The situation of Mooney is that he stands condemned to death upon evidence concerning the truth of which, to say the least, have arisen very grave doubts. Since his trial facts and circumstances have come to light which seriously reflect upon the credibility of three of the four witnesses who link him with the crime of which he was convicted, and which shake the very foundation of the case upon which people rely for his conviction. Right and justice demand a new trial for Thomas J. Mooney, in order that these facts so material and of such importance to the issue of his guilt or innocence, and unavailable to him at the time of his trial, may be presented to a jury for consideration and determination."

An appeal made to President Wilson in behalf of Mooney inspired the president to appoint a commission, headed by Secretary of Labor Wilson and including John F. Spangler, Verner Z. Reed, John H. Walker, E. P. Marsh, Felix Frankfurter, and Max Lowenthal, to investigate the case. This commission spent some time in going over the evidence and report prepared by J. R. Densmore, who had been designated by Secretary of Labor Wilson to probe into the matter.

The Densmore report revealed the results of an extensive examination, including dictograph records of conversations that occurred in the office of District Attorney Fickert. How a dictograph was introduced into the office of the district attorney of San Francisco has never been explained, but the fact that such a venture had succeeded created a tremendous sensation.

Fickert and His Record.

The conversations between the district attorney and persons with whom he discussed the Mooney case in what he considered the privacy of his own office justified Mr. Densmore in setting forth three sets of facts:

"First—That Fickert (district attorney) is in constant association with men and interests of such a nature as to render it incredible that he should be other impartial or honest in a case of this nature; that he is and has been for some time past coöperating with notorious jury and case fixers, that, for instance, he is equally guilty with Pete McDonnagh with conspiring to free a wealthy man charged with crimes of degeneracy, and that he has also been working with the same notorious corrupt McDounagh and Ben Selig to save from conviction Dave Blaine, an automobile car thief.

"Second—That Fickert and his associates have within the past month (October, 1918) framed and conspired to frame cases with which it is his sworn duty to deal impartially.

"Third—That Fickert and his associates within the past month had conspired to fabricate evidence with which to convict Mrs. Mooney, and to that end they have attempted, in the grossest manner, to intimidate and blackmail a prospective woman witness."

The conclusions of the commission voiced by Secretary of Labor Wilson and submitted in a report to the president argued in favor of a new trial for Mooney. The report asserted that Mooney had been tried in "an impregnating atmosphere of guilt created by the activities of the utilities against which Mooney had directed his agitation." It pointed out the fact that shortly before the Preparedness day tragedy it was sought to connect Mooney with the dynamiting of the towers of the Pacific Gas and Electric company. "In a word," said the report, "there can be no doubt that Mooney was regarded as a labor agitator of malevolence by the public utilities of San Francisco and that he was an especial object of their opposition."

The commission's report concluded as follows:

"However strange or however unexpected it may be, the just disposition of the Mooney case affects influences far beyond the confines of California, and California can be depended upon to see the wider implications of the case. With the mere local aspects, with the political and journalistic conflict, which the case has occasioned, neither the commission nor the public at large is concerned.

"But the feeling of disquietude aroused by the case must be heeded, for if unchecked it impairs the faith that our democracy protects the lowest and even the unworthy against false accusations. War is fought with moral as well as material resources. We are in this war to vindicate the moral claims of unstained processes of law, however slow at times such processes may be. These claims must be tempered by the fire of our own devotion to them at home."

Delay Urged by President.

Following the receipt of the report of the commission appointed by him, President Wilson sent this letter to Gov. Stephens:

White House, Washington,
Jan. 22, 1918.

My Dear Gov. Stephens:

Will you permit a suggestion from me in these troubled times?

The suggestion is this: Would it not be possible to postpone the execution of sentence on Mooney until he can be tried upon one of the other idictments against him in order to give full weight and consideration to the important changes which I understand have taken place in the evidence against him?

I urge this very respectfully, but very earnestly, because the case has assumed international importance, and I feel free to make the suggestion because I am sure that you are as anxious as any one can be to have no doubt or occasion of criticism of any sort attach itself to the case.

Cordially and sincerely,
WOODROW WILSON.

Gov. Stephens became the storm center around which intensely bitter agitation raged for weeks. Corporation influences were demanding that he keep his hands off the Mooney case and permit the law to take its course. The governor was openly charged by agitators clamoring for the release of Mooney with being susceptible to the influence of "Big Business" which wanted to discourage trade unionism. An examination of all the records in the case, supplemented with information of a more intimate character, do not in the least justify these attacks.

The governor moved cautiously—too cautiously, the defenders of Mooney asserted. He was bombarded with thousands of letters and telegrams, speeches of agitators and newspaper editorials reflecting various views as to his duties. Indiscreet agitators, posing as friends of Mooney, voiced all sorts of threats, and in some instances openly proposed reprisals of a revolutionary character more drastic than that for which Mooney had been sentenced to death.

Strike Plans Defeated.

With life sentences hanging over them, Mooney and Billings still continue to be the most disturbing factors in the domestic labor situation. Strikes are still being agitated by some of their defenders, and the number of advocates in favor of a new trial is constantly increasing and spreading beyond labor circles. Up to the present time the influence of organized labor has prevented radical groups both in and outside of their organization, from imposing disastrous strikes and other measures of retaliation on the country.

At the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City there were no less than five resolutions urging a nation-wide strike to force the governor of California to pardon Mooney and open the way for a new trial for him. All of these resolutions were defeated, but a substitute was adopted instructing the executive council "to give their earliest attention to devising such ways and means as will aid and secure a new trial for Thomas J. Mooney."

In a speech to the federation delegates Secretary of Labor Wilson advised them against encouraging strikes. He assured them that President Wilson and other officials of the government were keenly interested in the welfare of Mooney and that no steps would be neglected to secure a new trial for him.

Mr. Cockran, who defended Mooney at his trial, has devoted many months to a minute analysis of every phase of the case. In a recent speech Mr. Cockran attacked the decision of the California Supreme court in denying Mooney a new trial, based on the revelations concerning the credibility of Oxman and the Edeaus. Mr. Cockran said:

"Every court has inherent power to purge its own records at any time of a judgment that has been induced by perjury. And on this ground it is moved that the conviction of Mooney be set aside and annulled.

"This motion was denied, although the judge to whom it was addressed was the one who had previously denounced Mooney's conviction and had asked the attorney general to denounce it before the Supreme court as palpably the fruit of perjuries and that it should be reversed in the interest of public justice. In his decision denying the vote the judge declared unequivocally that under the law of California, no matter how clearly he might be convinced that Mooney was entirely innocent, he must order him executed.

"Now consider the full effect of this decision and then tell me if anything similar to it has ever occurred in civilized states. We have here, not the case of a man threatened to death by lawless persons, whom for some reason the courts are not able to control or restrain, nor a case where the courts, although clothed with ample powers, have failed through indifference or incapacity to exercise them for the protection of human lives. We are face to face with a case where the court itself fastens the rope around the neck it declares has been unjustly convicted and orders that he be strangled to death. That is to say, the courts organized to prevent murder have themselves become agents to perpetrate murder.

Likened to Dreyfus Case.

"It is only a generation ago that the country, which for the last four years has been holding the Thermopylæ of Christian civilization against the advancing hordes of barbarians, became the theater of a conspiracy strikingly similar to the one of which Mooney is now the object. Hatred of Jews was the cause of the memorable attempt to ruin Dreyfus in France, just as hatred of labor unions is now causing the pursuit of Mooney in San Francisco."

Perhaps the most interesting evidence submitted to the governor in support of the motion for a new trial for Mooney was in the form of a statement made by Fremont Older. Mr. Older is the editor of the San Francisco Call and has been most active in his championship of the rights of Mooney. In his statement he tells of an interview he had with Assistant District Attorney Cunha on April 14, 1917.

Convinced by the evidence obtained, Older says he urged Cunha to induce District Attorney Fickert to ask for a new trial for Mooney. He says that Cunha acquiesced in his suggestion and made an appointment at the Olympic club, to which he promised to bring Fickert. There were present at this meeting, besides Mr. Older, Edward McKensey, Thomas O'Connor, Henry I. Stafford, Edward Cunha, and Fickert.

"Fickert opened the conversation by saying that he was strongly in accord with our plan," says Mr. Older. "This was the granting of Mooney a new trial, with Oxman on the stand. He added: 'I will prosecute that man Oxman for murder.' Mr. O'Connor suggested, laughingly, that he couldn't take such an action until after Mooney was hanged. Fickert then modified his threat against Oxman by saying: 'Then I will prosecute him to the fullest extent of the law.'

The District Attorney's Promise.

"Fickert then turned to me and asked what I considered would be the most effective way of presenting the matter to the public. I told him that the best and simplest way was for him to prepare a perfectly frank, honest statement of the cast, alleging that Oxman had undoubtedly committed a grave offense, which discredited him as a witness in the Mooney case; that he [Fickert] is now in favor of a new trial for Mooney, and Fickert said he would do exactly that.

"I then said that before we came to a final agreement I wanted Fickert to understand that I would not abide by the agreement if he undertook to drag himself and Oxman before the grand jury and make an attempt there for a whitewash for both himself and Oxman; that I understood who controlled the grand jury and that it was in corrupt hands, and that he must keep away from that body. He promised that he would.

"Fickert then left the room, after shaking hands with all those present. Cunha remained. There was a friendly talk, and Cunha, before leaving, expressed the fullest confidence in me personally and thanked me for having shown him so much kindness in giving him an opportunity to square himself before the public. We left the room feeling that the following morning Fickert and Cunha would be ready with the statement in line with the understanding of the meeting.

"What really happened was that within two hours after Fickert left the meeting he appeared with his deputy, Attorney Cotton, in the rooms of the grand jury and asked for a hearing, and there started the movement in the grand jury to whitewash himself and Oxman. This the grand jury subsequently did."

The most recent move made to secure a reopening of the case was in the form of an offer by Mooney to stand trial again on the other indictment if a conditional pardon were granted to him and Billings. Gov. Stephens has neither accepted nor rejected the offer.

THE BLISSFUL STATE

By Guy P. Lee.

Perhaps it's great to have a look
At things the world goes crazy over;
To forge ahead by hook or crook
Is reckoned as the life of clover;
It's fine, no doubt, to step in front
And meet with victory the issue,
But I declare in accents blunt
It's wearing on the nervous tissue.

If you would win the earth's applause
You've got to keep your noodle ever,
The brain must wiggle without pause
To turn the crank that's labeled clever;
You can't let down, you're always keyed
Up to the topnotch every minute;
Success, old dear, is reached by speed,
And if you win there's nothing in it.

I've been informed some people get
Along with vacant upper stories,
Ambitions ne'er their systems fret—
They've found the grandest of all glories!
An idle pate is fate most kind,
I do not hesitate to shout it:
It's tough to concentrate the mind,
'Twould sure be sweet to do without it.

If I can grab enough mazum
To keep me fixed in food and clothing
And shelter, till the hour of doom
I'll banish fame with scorn and loathing;
I'll rest all night and play all day,
And eat and read, and do some drinking*
And dillydallying—but say
I'll never think a thought of thinking!

*Home brew.

What with this war being over and all the soldiers demobilized, you can't blame Mrs. Rue, who used to entertain soldiers at the canteen, for getting awfully restive. Everyday life is such an anti-climax after doing "That's What the Rose Said to Me" for a lot of men in uniform. The cook and waitress are entertaining gentlemen friends in the kitchen and Mrs. Rue, who felt she would scream if she had to pass another inactive evening, has hit upon the novel plan of entertaining the people in the kitchen. Mrs. Rue is singing about how she "Met a little elfin man, walking in the wood."

Leo Blatz and Lena Waw, of the direct action bunch, have planned three successive revolutions, beginning with the Fourth of July, and so far nothing has come of them. At first Leo was inclined to blame the capitalists, who never do quit fair, but it begins to look as if all this labor unrest has made people so restless—if you get what Leo means—that they can't focus on a revolution.

AMONG US MORTALS

Unrest

By W. E. HILL

(Copyright, 1919, New York Tribune Inc.)

No trade is unaffected by the general unrest. Take Mr. Carp, who helps in the "Elite Undertaking Parlors, complete layout, $60." A year ago he was interested in his work—but now, to use his own words, he don't care that whether he gives up his job tomorrow!

"All this unrest is directly due to German propaganda," says Miss Moist, who used to discover German spy plots every day or so during the war, and just can't get over the habit. Why, only the other night, at a church social, Miss Moist was shocked to hear a recitation about "A rag, a bomb, and a hank of hair"—and if that isn't conclusive!

Mrs. Slayback, who doesn't know where all this labor unrest is going to end, has thought it advisable to keep her pearls locked up for the present and is wearing a copy of the original, "a perfect replica, my dear, except that these are a little larger!

A lot of the present social unrest is due to prohibition undoubtedly, especially with those who neglected to stock up carefully. Mr. Weeks, whose liquorless existence is due to the express company, which failed to deliver on time, is doing his best to make a barrel of vinegar go back to cider. Some one said, "If you put a decayed turnip in a quart of vinegar," etc. The vinegar is still vinegar.

Believe it or not, with all this religious unrest going on, orthodox religion is getting an awful wallop these days, what with planchette and ouija boards, all handing out communiques from heaven and hell. No wonder the clergy are getting worried over the pew rentals. Here we have Mrs. Askit and Helga, the waitress, getting in touch with the other world. Mrs. Askit is getting up a magazine edited by Mark Twain, Louis XIV., and Thomas a Kempis.

Annette is all up in the air over the present social unrest. In fact, she can't make up her mind what to do—whether to come out this winter and end up at Palm Beach, or stay at home and learn to be a stenog.

The way to win out is to keep a little bit ahead of the game, argues Mr. Higgingrove of Higgingrove & Co., Ltd. Anticipating the inevitable outcome of industrial unrest, Mr. Higgingrove has devised a profit sharing scheme with the employes that ought to make a general strike impossible. Every three months each employe gets 1 per cent of his salary—for instance, if a man gets $18 a week, every three months he is entitled to an 18 cent bonus.

Of course, everybody expected that the discharged soldiers would be pretty restless for a while, but with all these welcome home celebrations and the like you'd expect them to be pretty well settled down by now. As yet some of them still want to get back to France, which is the ungrateful attitude of Joe Bowley, late of the A. E. F. Joe is down in the accompanying sketch being fixed up for the sack race by three members of the Ladies' Aid Society on Welcome Home day.

THE THEATERS

By Percy Hammond

"GLADYS PENWELL" writes that she adores "wealthy plays" like "Tea for Three" and "Three Wise Fools," because the valets and butlers are always so beautifully acted.

She quivers, says she, with expectation whenever a brocaded bell rope is pulled, for she knows that in a moment the drawing room doors will slide ajar, disclosing a sumptuous and silent menial who will then do the truest acting in the performance. Mr. Shaw, relying on the servant facilities of the actor, once made a play about a waiter, but it never got beyond the Little theaters on this side of the Atlantic.

One wonders sometimes what the butler in a drama thinks about. He hears the potential line, "You may clear away, Jarvis." Whereupon he proceeds, by veristic handling of the teacups, to hold the faithful mirror up.

"Here I am," his meditations run, perhaps, "providing perfect illusion by my thoughtful, accurate, and atmospheric removal of these soiled dishes, utterly subordinating my own habits and personality to the uses of the drama. Yet Jazbo, the leading man, and Oomplatz, his philosophic friend, who are popping about from chair to chair and from divan to settee, making strange Tarzanic noises the while, will win all the admiration of the audiences.

"Will I get a hand when I tuck the legs of the tea-table under, or wheel it out, with the movements in which God meant a butler to move? Will Burns Mantle mention favorably the unsycophantic deference with which I pause at the exit when I hear the inevitable 'And, Jarvis——'? He will not; and I shall remain, despite the brilliant integrity of my characterization, as unsung and incognito as a third witch in 'Macbeth.'"

But even those playgoers whose quizzical abnormalities addict them to the enjoyments offered by skillful butler-acting, must find that the principal players in "Three Wise Fools" and "Tea for Three" support their servants very well.

In "Three Wise Fools," for instance, the employers carry their affluence and bestow their commands judiciously and effectively. The comedy is a fruity idyll, full of clasped hands, pledged fidelities, and sweet slaps upon the back—those gestures which in the theater denote a noble friendship. Three elderly and sentimental male spinsters in the play are romantically senile concerning the female offspring of an old-time flame of them all, and a rich and athletic nephew of one of them, wins her out.

It is easy to play a valet whose emotions, however fervid, are compressed and inarticulate, but how hard a job is that of Mr. Claude Gillingwater, who in "Three Wise Fools," has to hand you a bilious old rotter, selfish, yellow, evil, and petty, and make you like him. That he manages to do so by sheer skill and personality is no argument that Acting is Life. Miss Helen Menken, who is rather oozy and reeking in her ingénue intervals, blazes out in a scene wherein she is suspected of misbehavior, and when she cries, "I didn't mean any harm; I didn't mean any harm," you can, if you are honest, pack up most of your traditions of emotional acting and send them to the storehouse, where they belong.

MR. ROI COOPER MEGRUE, chatting not long ago about unions and the drama, said that the most important labor organization in the theater would be that of the playwrights.

The conversation occurred during the din of a riot of striking actors in New York, but I understood him to profess a sympathetic indifference to any theatrical revolt that did not have as its vision the dramatists with absolute dominion over the producers, the players, and the artisans.

The contract of the authors' union, he said, would allow no producer, from Abe to Lee, to fool with a manuscript. Actors, selected by the author, would be required, under penalty of a walk-out, to speak and move at his dictate to the ultimate inflection and posture. The scenery, the lighting, the properties, the publicity, the routing, and all the other details of a production would be under the captaincy of him who wrote it. Time and a half would be paid for plays of more than three acts; and arbitration would be unnecessary, because the author always would be right.

Mr. Megrue's discourse was whimsical, and, one fancies, not inspired by his experiences with "Tea for Three." Even the most arrogantly organized author could not ask for a more intimate coöperation of producer and actor than that which makes "Tea for Three" so successful an evening at the La Salle. Perhaps Mr. Megrue is his own union and cracks the whip over the suppliant Selwyns and their players, and if he is, he proves at least his own right to be a boss.

It is not easy, in the case of "Tea for Three," to apportion the credit for its entertaining qualities between Mr. Megrue and the cast. The actors, to be sure, would be nowhere without Mr. Megrue; but where would Mr. Megrue be without the actors? Many a player could be found, of course, to grin through Mr. Megrue's beguiling horse-collar, but where would he find one to adapt his smiles, as Mr. Arthur Byron does, so deftly to the frame? Or Miss Margaret Lawrence (she knows the Vanderbilts), or Mr. Frederick Perry?

What pleases us is not more the author's ingenuity and smart, honest prattle than the charm and facility of those who illustrate them. They are all players who, unlike most of their calling, understand the difference between acting and affecting; and if their presence and behavior in "Tea for Three" is a consequence of Mr. Megrue's fantastic trades union theories, all of us should support a closed shop, for Mr. Megrue at least.

"Tea for Three" is as well played as it is well contrived and well written. Miss Lawrence, a pretty, clever woman, acts a pretty, clever woman, full-veined, human, virtuous of body and perhaps of mind, and a delightful girl to meet even in a comedy. Mr. Byron, among the first two of the intelligent comedians, acts her blameless lover, with buoyant pessimisms, gay melancholias, and bravura humors, added to the beguiling devices of the expert actor. He is perfect in the play and so, almost, is she. And Mr. Perry's dull and literal husband is so pathetic a yokel of romance that he wins you even as he says to his pretty wife, "We shan't dine tonight; I'm not hungry."

Both plays and both performances are above the average theater-goer's theater going intelligence. The managers tell me that the upstairs attendance in Chicago is more numerous than was the upstairs attendance in New York; but that the downstairs or high-priced audiences are a trifle smaller here than they were in the East. You may think it over.

The management of "Listen Lester," at the Illinois, errs in its advertised belief that THE TRIBUNE spoke of that entertainment as "musical comedy at its best." THE TRIBUNE said that a fragment of the show—a number lasting five or six minutes—was musical comedy at its best, but its reporter found much of it dull and vulgar and most of it musical comedy at its worst.

The smoldering hatreds between the union and nonunion forces of the drama flare up now and then in exhibitions of sabotage. Union actors, suspecting that the managers will avenge themselves ere long by refusing engagements to the more fervent of the agitators, find means of retaliation, so they say. For example, nonunion players complain that their organized associates ruin their performances with tricks familiar to the craft; and that luggage which does not wear the union emblem seldom reaches its destination. They're a merry lot.

The Theater Guild, a communistic theatrical experiment, operating in New York, announces that it has become prosperous through the production of "John Ferguson," and that it will proceed with other ventures into the Better Things. The $30,000 earned by "John Ferguson" will be invested at once in John Mazefield's "The Faithful," and in "Savva," Leonid Andrever's drama of revolutionary Russia. When the society produced "John Ferguson" last spring the average wage of the players was $25 weekly. A new cast will present the play in Chicago later in the season.

Approbation was given in Baltimore last week to "Apple Blossoms," the operetta in the music of which Fritz Kreisler is a collaborator with Victor Jacobi. A correspondent reports the score as being of "entrancing beauty." "Apple Blossoms" is sung and danced by John Charles Thomas, late of the Chicago cast of "Maytime"; Wilda Bennett, Florence Shirley, Percival Knight, Roy Atwell, Rena Parker, Harrison Brockbach, Juanita Fletcher, and Fred and Adele Astal, recently of the "Passing Show."

Miss Billie Burke in her retreat to the spoken drama will be helped by Tom Powers in a principal role. The play will be Somerset Maugham's "Caesar's Wife." It is acted in London by Fay Compton, Aubrey Smith, Eva Moore, and George Relph.

Otis Skinner has quit his lodge in the Rocky mountains and has gone to New York to practice for "The Rise of Peter Barbon," by Mrs. Skinner and Jules Eckert Goodman.

Renouncing vaudeville for a time Miss Blanche Ring will assist the Messrs. Shubert in their impending "Passing Show of 1919."

"Kentuck" is the title of the new play by Augustus Thomas, and Wilton Lackaye is to be its star. Arthur Hopkins will produce it in three weeks, some where near New York.

The personal property riches of some of those famous in the theater, the moving pictures and in music, are estimated by the tax commission as follows: James K. Hackett, $100,000; William Fox, $20,000; Theda Bara, $10,000; John Barrymore, $10,000; Lionel Barrymore, $25,000 David Warfield, $25,000; Geraldine Farrar, $50,000; Alma Gluck (Mrs. Efrem Zimbalist), $50,000; Efrem Zimbalist, $50,000; Galli-Curci, $17,000; Luigi Curci, $50,000; Clara Kimball Young, $30,000; Kitty Gordon, $25,000; King Baggot, $20,000; Catherine Calvert, $25,000; Joseph M. Schenck, $25,000; F. Ray Comstock, $25,000; David Belasco, $10,000; William A. Brady, $10,000.

Edward Macgregor, one of the most ambitious of the minor producers, has been summoned by Mr. Erlanger to help keep the K. & E. theaters occupied this season. Mr. Macgregor, in association with Mr. Erlanger, will present O. P. Heggie in "The Haunted Pajamas," a dramatization by George C. Hazleton of a novel by Francis Perry Elliott; "Self Defense," a melodrama by Myron B. Fagan of Chicago; "Her Birthright" by Edward Peple; John Galsworthy's "A Bit of Love"; "The Sweetheart Shop," a musical comedy by Anne Caldwell and Hugo Felix; "The Dream Girl," another by Rida Johnson Young and Victor Herbert, and a musical version of "A Pair of Sixes" by Otto Harbach and Louis Hirsch.

The Orpheum circuit, which is the primrose path of vaudeville, has engaged to tread its patrician orbit Mr. Jack Osterman, who boasts, as well he may, that he is the son of Kathryn Osterman Rosenthal and J. J. Rosenthal, manager of the Woods theater. Mr. Osterman sings the lively songs of the day, and he tells stories so much better than stories are usually told in the varieties that he will have a place of honor at the Palace and the Majestic when the season is older. Mr. Osterman represents the youth which is blithely edging out the Jack Norworths and the Harry Foxes of vaudeville.

E. M. Newman will begin his annual travelalks season at Orchestra hall next Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday afternoon with "Alsace-Lorraine." In motion pictures and color views he will show Metz, Colmar, Mulhouse, and Thann.

Capt. William Harrigan in "The Acquittal" at Geo. M. Cohan's Grand Opera House (Shubert-Morosco).

Capt. Harrigan gives a quiet, humorous, and forceful picture of a good police reporter in "The Acquittal" at George M. Cohan's Grand. He was with the "lost battalion" in the Argonne and was wounded.

Burns Mantle's Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—At the end of a week of bad plays (excepting one musical comedy) came Cosmo Hamilton, the well known "Scandal" expert, and his newest comedy, "An Exchange of Wives." It did not shine, as Father Doran said of Congreve's wit, "like a brilliant on a dirty finger," but it did have an idea—as obvious idea, to be sure, but better than none—at the end of a week of bad plays.

The exchange in this instance is effected for the usual purpose of reforming the phlegmatic Mr. H., who loves his wife, but neglects to tell her so. She, being as God made her, which is to say full of life, but indolent, had no desire to qualify as a good housekeeper. She wanted to be loved and made a pet and when her husband became one of those golf fiends, who was seemingly more interested in perfecting his skill with the mashie than in entertaining his wife, Mrs. H. rebelled and kissed his best friend, Mr. A., who was also married and temporarily out of harmony with his mate.

Observing the salute, which was nicely timed for the purposes of his observation, Mr. H. was torn between a desire to throttle his best friend and an equally strong desire to throttle his wife. At which point Mrs. A. brought a bit of her mature and sensible philosophy to bear on the situation.

—o—

Two, she allowed, could play at any game, and what is sauce for the goose can be made peaches and cream for any intelligent gander. Let them also flirt; let them pretend to love each other passionately. Let them even suggest divorces for four, and a remarrying of the newly discovered affinities and observe the result.

They did and they soon had the philandering pair worried. But just then it occurred to the wise Mrs. H. that she and Mr. A. were being spoofed, and that the only way they could be even was to favor Mrs. A.'s scheme. So she approved the divorce idea. "But, you'll find Mr. H. very cold and distant," she warned Mrs. A. "He'll not be that way with me," retorted Mrs. A.

To bring the issue to a test, Mrs. A. thereupon insisted that it was quite foolish for the ponderous machinery of the law to declare the quartet free. So long as it was a friendly agreement, why not put it into effect at once and let the divorces follow? Whereupon she took Mr. H. by the hand and led him away to the sleeping porch.

Then there was a row. Appearances and everything were against the schemers. And this situation brought about the necessary explanations. Mrs. H. explained all and Mr. H. was satisfied. Mrs. A. welcomed Mr. A. again to her enfolding arms and Mr. A. was happy.

The little comedy is well played by Chrystal Herne and Lee Baker, as one couple, and Margaret Dale and Forrest Winant as the other. They were rather a mature quartet, barring young Winant, for such an adventure, but they are all good actors and, save where their direction was poor they made the incident reasonably convincing.

PROCRASTINATING CHARLES.

By Mae Tinée.

A LETTER came to me last week which should give Charlie Chaplin something to think about. For some time I had been rather debating with myself as to whether somebody shouldn't sit down and write a letter telling the funniest man a thing or two. For instance:

That waits between his pictures are becoming too long.

That producers of comedies are putting punch as well as pies in their more recent productions, thereby converting many who heretofore had refused to sit through a so-called "comedy."

That one man and maybe two are gaining the reputation of being almost as funny as Charlie Chaplin, and that one of these men is considered by some experts as being even funnier.

Mr. Chaplin has been exceedingly busy lately, I understand, erecting a $3,000,000 home on the Pacific coast. He has undoubtedly also many other things to occupy his time. But if he doesn't make more pictures he's apt to find that when his pictures do appear they will be classed with the rank and file of comedies instead of standing serenely out by themselves as the funniest pictures in existence.

The American public is a fickle one, and it loves best the one that makes it laugh last.

Here's the letter:

"Dear Miss Tinée: As an orthodox, tired business men I have been wondering if a measure of my fatigue has been induced by the intolerable wait for Charlie Chaplin pictures. There was a time when the weariness of trade had its recompense; when Charlie smote his fellow histrions athwart the jowl with copious and innumerable pies; when I could skip tra la and utter glad gurgles that a new Chaplin was showing.

"But now the long months elapse between the Charlies. Deep lines are appearing in my classic sconce and my feet shamble dolefully in the marts of industry; and my wife, who was wont to pluck up amazingly whenever I regaled the evening meal with quirks and quiddities I had gleaned from the comedies of Charles—well, she tolerates me with pitying looks, such as she might bestow upon the iceman because he doesn't know any better than to fetch in mud upon the fresh scrubbed linoleum.

"The other day I saw another comedian; one whom, in the good old days, I should not have dignified with my audience; and the thought occurred to me that he was a roguish jugging after all. Perhaps, now that Charlie has kept me waiting so long, I don't care if he never comes back. The more I dwell upon this other comedian the more droll he seems and the less I miss Charlie.

"But what I wanted to ask you is this: Why doesn't Charlie make more pictures? Doesn't he know that the public is fickle and is likely to jilt him for another, or is he crazy?"

Or lazy—do you suppose?

James Morrison, that popular young chap, is back again with Vitagraph. He will be first seen in the support of Gladys Leslie.

The picture people are a doughty crowd, but when something like 800 carpenters, the property men, and electricians in the Los Angeles motion picture studios struck for the recognition of their union, producers and stars bowed to the inevitable, thus, it is said, preventing a movie famine.

Ruth Clifford, so long a Universal favorite, has become affiliated with the Frohman Amusement company and is now making a serial picture in the east.

The dark and fascinating Monroe Salisbury will soon go "on his own." His pictures will be released by First National.

They tell me—I don't believe 'em—that Pearl White has her tooth paste flavored with orange juice.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

W. D. P. AND C. A. H.: The naughty gentleman who played the villain in "The Squaw Man" was Tully Marshall.

A FAN: Your friend is right. Conrad Nagel did play on the stage in "The Man Who Came Back."

IVY BELLE L.: Well, I've been called a lot of things, but this is the first time I've been addressed as the "last hope." Heving help me if it's come to that! The best I can do for you is to send you a list of the various companies. But I'll have to have a stamped and self-addressed envelope to do that, you know.

P. F. M.: I thought you had deserted me! You're the rolling stone all right. Here's hoping, however, that when the song is published you'll gather some moss. You keep right on writing your ideas to me. Better copyright them first, though. I might schtealem.

F. W. K.: Forwarded your letter to Miss Carew. Awfully glad to do it.

J. D. G.: Your letter got me quite excited and I made the rounds of the copy readers, asking wherein my sentence was wrong. They all agreed that I was right and you were wrong—said she triumphantly!

MRS. Z. M.: O, how you long to join the movies! O, how like the rest of the world you are in that! If you care to send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope I'll give you a little trenchant advice on the subject, and with a great deal more enthusiasm will mail you a list of studios to which I advise you to send your scenarios. Why not make up your mind to be a great scenario writer instead? [Said she, never having written a scenario in her life.]

BILLIE: I can't find the man you mention. If he played in the picture you say—which I didn't see—you might address him in care of Universal, Universal City, Cal.

JAMES H. L.: O, didn't you see the picture of Percy Marmont? I'm sorry. It did appear. Maybe we can print another some time. I'm so glad to have heard from you, and hope that you will write again some time.

PHYLLIS: Address Sessue Hayakawa in care of Haworth company, Brunton studios, Los Angeles, Cal.

LONG HAIR: Well, dearie, the flu didn't get you, did it? We'll see what we can do for you.

"He should bathe more regularly."

"I mean he is extremely muscular. Why, my brother is so strong that the other day, with one hand, he tore up a pack of cards."

"That's nothing. My brother is so strong that this morning he rushed out the front door and tore up the street."

"Say, little one; you haven't told me your name yet."

"Mary Green."

"Any relation to the Dr. Green who charges $10 a visit?"

"My brother."

"He called at our house ten times last month."

"Then you owe him $100.'"

"No, $10. He made the other nine calls trying to collect it."

"You must be very nice to me. Today is my birthday."

"May I call at your house tonight and congratulate you?"

"Your presence will be very welcome."

(Aside.) "I wonder what she means."

"Really, you're funny."

"If you thing so let's go into vaudeville together. I can get Jones, Linick & Schaefer to send us out."

"You're a trifler."

"No, I'm not, and to convince you I'm going to ask you to marry me."

"I'll never marry a man whose fortune has not at least five ciphers."

"Mine is all ciphers."

"What will your father say if you should bring him a wife?"

"Father and I don't speak.'

"How did that come about?'

"It's a long story, but if you have nothing to do for a couple of years I'll tell it to you."

"Shoot!"

"One day, in a spirit of boyish mischief, I went and painted our front door black, and what do you think father said?"

"Well, what did father say?"

"He said, 'Never darken my door again.'"

Two Exhibitions Open This Week at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

ANOTHER week has come and gone without bringing to us more definite art material than the renewed promise of an exhibition of interest to open on Tuesday in the galleries of the Art institute. The exhibition is the eighteenth annual exhibit of applied arts and the twenty-seventh annual exhibit of the Chicago Ceramic Art association.

An innovation in the Applied Arts exhibition will be demonstrations by well known craft workers during the period the work is on view. The making of pottery, woodwork, metal work, leather work, lace, and weaving and dyeing will be shown on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons in October.

The news concerning other exhibits to follow this is printed here from the Art institute bulletin for October, which has just come.

From Nov. 6 to Dec. 10, inclusive, the thirty-second annual exhibition of American oil paintings and sculpture will be held and during the same period the Atlan Ceramic Art club's twenty-seventh annual exhibition.

The jury for the annual American exhibition is composed of the following artists: Robert Allerton, George W. Bellows, Edward B. Butler (representing the art committee of the Art institute), Charles C. Curran, Philip L. Hale, Rudolph F. Ingerle, Arvid Nyholm, and Edward W. Redfield, painters; Frederic C. Hibbard, Leonard Crunelle and Emil R. Zettler, sculptors.

On Nov. 10, for a period of about three weeks, wood engravings by Timothy Cole will be exhibited. Other November exhibitions are of books published in Chicago to be lent by the Caxton club and exhibited in Gunsaulus hall, and paintings by George W. Bellows. Later a special exhibition of paintings and color reproductions will be held by the Public School Art society.

In December the central states division of the Art alliance and the Art institute will hold an exhibition of American made toys in Gunsaulus hall. On Dec. 16 four exhibitions will open—paintings, sketches and drawings by Lieut. Jean Julien Lemordant; paintings by Bryson Burroughs, Oliver Dennett Grover and Abel Pann.

In the east wing of the Art institute the paintings by Henry Golden Dearth have given much pleasure during the last several weeks. A second group of canvases by him, as yet unshown in these galleries, will be hung on Tuesday, and the entire collection of ninety paintings will remain on exhibition until Oct. 26.

The first formal showing of prints by the Chicago Camera club is promised for Wednesday. During the evening two reels of official French war pictures will be run, followed by discussion of the prints of the September exhibition. From Wednesday until Oct. 22 pictures by C. N. Bowen and B. B. Conheim are to be hung. And during that period prints by A. L. Estep and B. J. Morris will be arranged on the walls and permitted to overlap the exhibition time of the first group.

To those of us who remember the beauties of the Uffizi in Florence the following account of its post-war state will be of interest. I clipped the cutting from the Boston Transcript:

After being closed for a long interval, during the war, that its treasures might be stored in safer places, the Uffizi gallery in Florence is once more opened to the public. A correspondent of the New York Tribune states that the opportunity has been taken to redistribute and rearrange the pictures, and although this work is not yet wholly completed, the many halls which have been reopened show an immense improvement upon the former installation.

No longer, for instance, are any works by Fra Angelico to be seen at the Uffizi. They have been carried across to his own convent of San Marco, where so many of them were painted; fitted back, in some cases, into the very niches for which they were designed. Thus, that beautiful old building, with its white cloisters and wide halls and little, quiet cells, the scene of so many years of the happy activities of the "angelic painter's" life, now contains not only the priceless frescoes, great and little, which he left upon its walls, but also the alterpieces and other paintings which, for all their loveliness, had never seemed quite at home in the Uffizi rooms, but here are at home indeed, and enable the student to study and enjoy them, undistracted by the works of others, in the very surroundings where they came into being under the painter's hand.

The Tribuna has been cleared of the miscellaneous collection of masterpieces which formerly filled it. Cranach's "Adam" and "Eve" have been moved to the rooms of the German school. The Raphaels and Titians, too, are gone to join their own della Opera is now with a few others of the Umbrian school in the lovely little adjoining groups. Perugino's portrait of Francesco room hung with silvery green watered silk. Nothing remains in the Tribuna but the five statues (the central place being given to the Venus de' Medici) and a single line of pictures, chiefly portraits by Bronzino, including the two Panciatichi protraits which hung here formerly, and some of the portraits of the Medici children.

Exhibitions at the galleries:

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

By W. L. Hubbard

CHICAGO'S appreciation of her musical institutions and her pride in them show no marked diminution because of the tone of the New York press in commenting upon the forthcoming season of the Chicago Opera company at the Lexington theater in that city next January. Without exception the writers note the unquestioned superiority in musical interest of the repertory of our organization as compared with that of the Metropolitan company.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza has announced as novelties Henry Hadley's "A Night of Cleopatra" founded on the Gautier tale, Albert Wolff's setting of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird," Tschaikowsky's "Eugene Onegin," and Leoncavallo's "Zaza." These are the only new works promised, although a revival of Halevy's "The Jewess," and of "Parsifal" sung in English are listed as worthy of special attention.

The Gotham critics compare this list with the following from the Chicago company's prospectus: "Rip Van Winkle" by De Koven and Mackaye, Prokieff's "The Love for the Three Oranges," both of which have been especially written under commission from Mr. Campanini; Montemezzi's "The Ship," founded on the D'Annunzio play; Ravel's "The Spanish Hour," which last summer made so pronounced a success in London; Erlanger's "Aphrodite," Marinuzzi's "Jacquerie," Messager's "Mme. Chrysanthemum," the three one-act operas by Puccini which the New Yorkers heard last season, and the two ballets "The Birthday of the Infanta" by John Alden Carpenter, and "Boudour" by Felix Borowski.

To this list of absolute novelties are added several revivals, among which is "The Jewess," and a number of works of larger interest than the Metropolitan company announces.

Chicago has come to be proud of what its operatic organization offers and accomplishes, and not without good reason. It is essentially alive and awake. It has in its management and its achievements much of that spirit which made the seasons directed by the late Oscar Hammerstein so vital in the history of opera in this country, and a source of such annoyance to the Metropolitan Opera company. Mr. Campanini learned well the lesson of the years he spent with Hammerstein, and Chicago primarily, and now an ever widening section of the United States is reaping the benefits.

It is not without a sense of genuine satisfaction that there is noted the inclusion in this list of novelties of a number of operas essentially humorous in subject and style. While the majority of them conform with the accepted belief that opera in order to be real for sure grand opera must necessarily be tragic in matter and manner, yet at least four of the twelve are comedy operas, and such a proportion is reassuring. Now if only the works could be done so that the public could understand and catch the humor, all would be well. We would then not have repetition of the tragic fate which Verdi's priceless masterpiece met here at the Auditorium, and has met everywhere it has been presented outside of Italy and France—solemnity, seriousness and perplexity on the part of the audience when farce of the most delightful nature was being presented on the stage, but presented in a foreign language and therefore all merriment and worth lost to the hearers.

The De Koven "Rip Van Winkle," which, while it may be largely romantic and legendary, doubtless will partake of the bright rather than of the tragedy character. It is to be done in English, although just why, if the rule generally prevailing in this country were applied, it should not be translated into Italian, French, or Chinese is not wholly clear. It is reasonable to suppose, however, that it will remain in its original, and there therefore is a chance that the public will be enabled to gather something as to what it all is about. We can hope then for real enjoyment of this one novelty, which is based on the fine American legend of Rip, but to which Mr. Mackaye is said to have added some new and effective incidents.

The Prokofieff opera is to be frankly fantastic and amusing in character. Unfortunately it is to be sung to us in French instead of English, so that much of its meaning will be lost. The title "The Love for Three Oranges" has roused curiosity and some have wondered if it might not be an attempt at parody on the Montemezzi "The Love of Three Kings." But it is nothing of this sort. The composer in speaking of the opera and his creating of it said:

"It is nothing less than the fairy story of the prince who could not laugh. He is a hypochondriac, and the king and the rest of the kingdom are overwrought because of his condition. Everything known to human ingenuity is done to try to make him smile, but without avail. A witch always turns up at the crucial moment and ends it all. But one day a small child trips up the witch and the prince can't help himself. He actually grins, and before he knows it he is indulging in a hearty laugh. Because of this he is condemned to hunt for three beautiful oranges or he will never be permanently cured. This he sets forth to do."

And the opera busies itself principally with his hunt for the three magical oranges and his ultimate triumph. Mr. Prokofieff has fashioned the libretto from material obtained from the satiric comedy written by Carlo Gozzi in 1761. While seemingly little more than the plan of the original has been used, the composer, like Gozzi, has sought to satirize in a way modern conditions and folk. The opera consists of a prologue and ten scenes and the action is described as "of almost moving picture swiftness."

"The prologue opens with an assembly of all sorts and varieties of playwrights, both serious and comic, artists of all kinds, actors and actresses. In humorous fashion they each set forth the good they can accomplish, mocking the aspirations and accomplishments of the other factions and acclaiming the virtues of their own particular profession. After squabbling and bickering they withdraw, saying that a play will follow."

The opera is the play which they have promised. During its presentation two men seated in towers on either side of the stage spend their time making comments on the action passing before them. We see the king consulting with his physicians relative to the curing of his son, and after the prince has had his first laugh we have the scenes showing his hunt for the oranges which are to make his cure permanent. He travels with the court clown through lonely desert regions, they encounter the giant cook who is guardian of the three oranges, they secure the oranges and escape with them, they nearly die of thirst as they return through the desert, the mystery of the oranges is revealed, one of them producing the Princess Ninetta, whom the witch then tries to turn into a rat, but she does not succeed, and all ends happily for every one.

A fantastic opera, swiftly and picturesquely told, and the music for it Mr. Prokofieff himself declares is "the simplest of which I am capable," but he also admits that the score contains "many innovations," and that, while it may not be neo-Scythian, it is reasonably sure to be ultra modern.

"The Spanish Hour" of Ravel is a merry little farce requiring only about forty-five minutes for presentation. It was written in 1907, and had its first presentation at the Opera Comique in Paris in 1911. It was heard at Covent Garden, London, on July 25 last, and won warm commendation both for the merriment of its plot and for the sparkle of its music.

The fourth of the comedy operas which are promised presentation during the season is the third in the Puccini three one-acters. It is entitled "Gianni Schicchi," and is described as "a riot of noise and comedy, a real Italian 'opera buffa,' with a suggestion of the buffoonery, broad humor and rapidity of a French farce. It is an undeniably funny and animated episode in the life of the notorious Florentine, Gianni Schicchi, immortalized in Dante's 'Inferno.'"

This afternoon at 3:30 the much heralded quartet from the Sistine chapel in Rome will give its only concert in Chicago, Orchestra hall being the place and this the inauguration of the series of Sunday concerts there. The four men singers come with full credentials from the pontifical authorities, and are said to be representative of the best that that famous choir produces. Their names are Allesandro Gabrielli, soprano; Luigi Gentili, contralto; Ezio Cecchini, tenor, and Augusto Dos Santos, bass. As accompanist comes Albert Cammetti, pianist and organist. The program is largely liturgical in material, although several madrigals and secular numbers are included.

The first of the "joint recitals" to be given by prominent singers and instrumentalists in Medinah temple, corner Cass and Ohio streets, will take place next Thursday evening, the program enlisting the services of Rosa Ponselle, soprano, and Riccardo Stracciari, baritone, with Romano Romani as accompanist. Miss Poselle will sing "Peace Peace" from Verdi's "The Force of Destiny," the opera in which she accomplished her successful debut at the Metropolitan, "One Fair Day" from "Mme. Butterfly," "My Lovely Celia" by Munro, Grieg's "Eros," Baladilhe's "Psyche," Parelli's "Scent of April," La Forge's "To a Messenger" and with Mr. Stracciari the duet from the third act of "Aida" and a duet from "Trovatore." Mr. Stracciari's solo selections will be the "Eri tu" from "The Masked Ball," Rantani's "Se bel Rio," Hahn's "From a Prison," Delibes' "Good Day Suzon," Grieg's "The Swan," Crist's "Into a Ship, Dreaming," and Bridge's "Thy Hand in Mine."

Geraldine Farrar in her only concert in Chicago this season, given next Sunday afternoon in the Auditorium, will have the assistance of Arthur Hackett, the Boston tenor; Rosita Renard, the Chilean pianist, and Claude Gotthelf, accompanist.

Take Any Car and Transfer at 35TH St. to Our Door

1914 By FIELD MARSHAL VISCOUNT FRENCH, OF YPRES

INSTALLMENT XXI.

ON Dec. 17 I received a letter from Kitchener from which I gleaned that the cabinet were much perturbed by rumors of a contemplated invasion by the enemy, which apparently emanated from the admiralty. The authorities at home were far from happy about the whole situation on the western front, and it was greatly feared that our line might still be broken through by a determined German offensive.

I received orders to go home and consult with the cabinet, and arrived at Folkestone about 11 a. m. on Sunday, the 20th. Lord Kitchener met me there with his motor and we drove together to Walmer Castle, where the prime minister (Mr. Asquith) was then staying.

I had not seen Kitchener since our memorable meeting at Paris, early in September, but he met me in the most friendly manner and said many kind things about our work in France, of which he clearly appreciated the difficulties. We discussed the situation fully en route, and I remember his putting many questions to me about all the principal members of the headquarters staff. While assuring him of my entire satisfaction with each and all of them, I reminded him that, if any fault was to be found, I and no one else was responsible.

On arriving at Walmer castle I was very kindly and cordially welcomed by the prime minister. Entering the historic old stronghold, where the great Iron Duke breathed his last, I remember being at first seized with a pang of regret, for I thought his spirit would have rested in greater peace, if, under that famous roof, I could have told the first minister of the king that we had once again planted the British flag in the face of the enemy on the field of Waterloo. It was a dream I had indulged in from the first, but alas! like many others, it was destined never to be realized.

I had a long discussion with the prime minister. Mr. Asquith possesses the rare quality of being able to discuss the most difficult and threatening situation with the utmost calmness and deliberation. He is a very attentive listener, and as he quickly appreciates and understands all that is told him, it did not take him long to become fully acquainted with the entire situation.

As I have said before, all the cabinet were at this moment very anxious as to the general outlook, but neither by word nor gesture did the prime minister display the least want of hope and confidence.

Doubts and Fears.

DURING my sojourn in France I had received several most kind and encouraging letters from Mr. Asquith, in which he expressed his warm appreciation of all that we had done, and said how truly he realized the very trying circumstances which surrounded us. He personally reiterated these kindly sentiments, but it was evident that the government had just begun to entertain doubts and fears which had induced them to call me into council.

It was the faith inspired by this constant kindly sympathy, and his power as prime minister, which helped me to believe that the shortage in guns and ammunition which threatened ultimate destruction would be overcome. The glorious troops under my command had gone valiantly to their death when a few more guns and a few more shells would have many times saved their sacrifice. And still no sufficient supplies came.

The question of munitions and the fear of invasion formed the basis of our long conversation at Walmer. After lunch I left with Kitchener and traveled by motor to London. With deep sorrow I recall the fact that this was the last of all the many days of happy personal intercourse which I spent with my old South African chief. As a soldier and a commander in the field I had always loved and venerated him; in his capacity as a politician and minister my sentiments and feelings toward him were never the same.

I am willing to admit that our differences—which were great and far-reaching—may have been to some extent my own fault, but, be that as it may, our subsequent relations, down to the time of his tragic death, were always clouded by a certain mistrust of each other.

All the next day, and far into the following, my whole time was employed in discussing the situation with the war cabinet.

The principal ground for all their fears proved subsequently, in the course of the year 1916, to be only too well founded as regards the eastern front. But the reports of large movements of German troops to the west, which really induced Mr. Asquith to send for me, were not true.

Constant reports, however, continued to reach the government from secret and reliable sources that the Russians were even then running very short of ammunition, and that their condition as regards the supply of war material generally would certainly oblige them to evacuate the enemy territory they had already won, and even necessitate a retirement behind the Vistula, if not the Bug, with the loss of Warsaw and other important fortresses.

Confused by Reports.

THE home authorities were undoubtedly influenced in forming this opinion by reports which did not emanate from any part of the western theater of war, and I believe their judgment was generally hampered and warped by paying too much regard to unauthorized statements. The divergence of views which existed on various dates during the month of December is curiously illustrated by the following quotations from letters and telegrams.

On the 2d Kitchener wired to me:

"It is reported new corps are arriving in Russia and that some of the old corps lately between La Bassée and the sea have disappeared from that front. Can you ascertain what truth there is in this? It is thought possible the Germans may be replacing active corps by immature formations along northern portion of allied lines so as to use their best troops in the eastern theater, where they are apparently developing great strength."

On the 18th he writes:

"The Russian news is very serious. I fear we cannot rely on them for much more for some time."

All kinds of reports continued to arrive, insisting that masses of German troops were passing through Luxemburg and Belgium en route to the western front, but these turned out subsequently to be either greatly exaggerated or to have no foundation whatever in fact.

The upshot of it all was that I received directions from the prime minister to seek out Joffre as soon after my return as possible, put these views and fears of the war cabinet before him, and to report to them what he was prepared to do in order to meet the supposed threat.

Joffre's Confidence Unshaken.

IN accordance with the prime minister's decision, I arranged a meeting with Joffre at Chantilly for the 27th.

I explained the mission I had from the British government, and told him of their fears of impending severe Russian defeats and of the possibility which they thought might be open to the enemy of withdrawing large numbers of troops and massing a force on the western front strong enough to break our line and attain, after all, their original objectives, namely, Paris and the channel ports.

The French commander in chief was much astonished to hear that such a view of the situation could be really and seriously entertained. But he added that, of course, the French general staff had plans ready to meet any eventuality. He expressed the opinion that the time was not now opportune for the discussion of such contingent possibilities as these.

I then arrived at an understanding with Joffre as to future plans. I again urged strongly upon him my conviction that an advance on the extreme north, in cooperation with our navy, was the proper role for British troops to fulfill, and went over all the old arguments. In effect he rejected my plans again, although holding out hopes that, at a later stage, the French army might cooperate in such an advance.

In the absence of support from my own government it was hopeless to say anything more. Joffre's plan was as follows:—He meant to break through the enemy's line from the south at Reims and from the west at Arras. He desired to mass as many French corps as possible behind these two points; therefore, at all other points of the line the roles must be twofold: (1) to economize troops as much as possible in the trenches, so as to spare more men for action at decisive points, and (2) to organize good local reserves to keep the enemy front employed and prevent his sending troops to threatened points in the line.

The attitude of our War Office in failing to speed up the manufacture of munitions of war and the practical collapse of the Russian armies were to some extent responsible for the lack of success of our endeavors. But the detainment of troops and war material to the Dardanelles was undoubtedly the chief cause.

There was no other course for me to take, under the circumstances, than to fall in with Joffre's view; and in accordance with his plan I agreed to take over, in conjuction with the Belgians, the whole line from La Bassée to the sea, but only by degrees as troops became available.

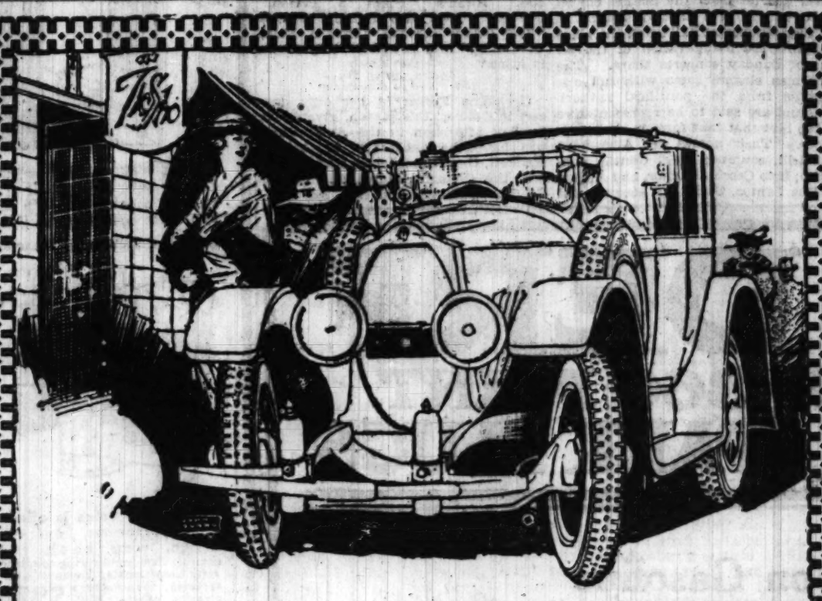
AJAX CORD



The Cleated Tread—It Holds

WHEN you talk tires to your dealer, or to fellow car owners, note the enthusiastic praise mention of the Ajax Cord arouses.

Men who sell tires—and men who use them—are rapidly coming to be of one mind on the cord tire question. Their verdict goes to the Ajax Cord—with the Ajax Cleated Tread. This tire has earned its fine reputation, through the severest test of service.

Like Cleats on An Athlete's Shoes

Study the tread. See those thick cleats of beveled rubber, with the indented grip-spot in the center of each cleat. Like the cleats on the soles of an athlete's shoes, the Ajax Cleated Tread gives an instantaneous grip for the start or stop in traffic. It holds the road with safety while in motion. The indented grip-spot adds to its anti-skid effectiveness.

Ajax Cord Tires are dignified, durable, dependable tire equipment. They add to your car's good looks. They lessen your tire cost per mile. They are quality tires, sold by quality dealers.

The Corset's Importance

Third Floor—Center

Is only appreciated by the woman who has been properly fitted by a thoroughly experienced Corsetiere. She has found that such a corset means more, too, than the fashionable figure; it means comfort and good health as well.

Nemo Corsets are among the highest in favor and so we feature them in particular, having every style and every size in every style —and by every style we mean the New Nemo topless styles as well. Fitted by corsetieres who have studied fitting as a science and spare no pains in fitting you correctly—the fittings are free here.

Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, style 327, as illustrated, topless in front—slightly higher in back for healthful support—the long, well-boned skirt has the famous self-reducing straps that will support and reduce a large abdomen. Firm hook below the front clasp, elastic section in back of bottom of skirt—sizes 22 to 36, at 5.00.

Nemo Corset, style 514—same corset as the famous 511 and 512, only this model is topless in front—with elastic section in front that is called the diaphragm reducer, because it so perfectly controls a full diaphragm, always perfectly comfortable and will not "dig in" at the pit of the stomach, as most topless corsets do—the skirt takes wonderful care of large bulging thighs. A corset that should make any figure smaller and straighter, sizes 22 to 36, at 6.50

Nemo Corset, style 382, topless in front, with elastic section; front steels will not "dig in" at top of corset, firm hook below; plump figures that have never found a topless corset firm enough in the skirt will be delighted with this model, flesh color, sizes 21 to 28, at..... 4.00

Steel Strike May Stop Manufacture of Spare Parts

Dealers and Owners Urged to Supply Their Needs Now.

MOTOR car dealers, service men, and repair men will be among the major sufferers from the great steel strike, if the conflict between labor and capital proves as serious as expected.

Car manufacturers even before the strike was called were living from hand to mouth in obtaining steel for their product, and with the output curtailed their predicament is certain to be even more lamentable than at present. And their plight undoubtedly will be reflected upon dealers and repairmen, said Motor Age.

Parts manufacturers in the motor car manufacturing centers have been unable to secure any more steel than is required for their day to day demands. Stocks of steel jobbers in Detroit and the other centers of the industry have been depleted by the demand made by manufacturers rapidly increasing their production, and there is no supply ready to carry them over in case they are unable to get steel from the great producers.

Car manufacturers have never been able to catch up on the steel shortage they suffered during the war. Supplies of steel allotted manufacturers of course were limited to material needed for actual war work during the period of hostilities and no stocks could be laid in. When the armistice was signed and industry permitted to go back to a pre-war basis in ordering supplies motor car manufacturers found that all other industries were in the market for steel and, as a result, the supply was not equal to the demand.

Poor transportation facilities aggravated the situation, and for the last half year getting steel supplies to run the factories has been a struggle. While production has been increased by most of the big factories, this increase has been limited by the difficulty in getting steel and laying up stocks of this material has been an impossibility.

Steel jobbers in the larger cities are almost cleaned out. An example is Detroit, where the jobbers' stocks were almost entirely swept out a fortnight or more ago when a large motor company placed big orders with the jobbers in anticipation of just such a situation as now confronts the industry. Other manufacturers, of course, have sought to meet the situation by similar orders, but have not been nearly as successful.

To the dealer and repairman, the situation is fraught with significance. The fall and winter are the seasons when ordinarily the distributer and dealer try to stock up with as many cars as possible, in anticipation of the spring demand. With factory production cut down this, of course, will be impossible.

For the repairman, the chief danger is that it will soon become difficult to obtain spare parts. Factories naturally will devote the major part of their supplies to the manufacture of complete cars and, temporarily at least, will allow the manufacture of spare parts to drop to a minimum. This will make it extremely difficult for repairmen and dealers to get the parts and is likely to interfere seriously with winter overhauling and general repair work.

Two months is given as the period most of the manufacturers will be able to weather the storm before materially cutting down their production or even closing their factories entirely. The two month period, however, will not see the plants going at their ordinary rate but, in all probability, will see most of them devoting their greatest attention to car rather than parts production.

MY FUNNIEST MOTORING EXPERIENCE

FOOLED THE "COP."

My sister drove her car downtown at night and stopped in front of a drug store. A "cop" approached and said:

"Do you own this car?"

My sister said she did.

"You have not got your back light burning," said the "cop."

"I lighted it before I left home; it must have gone out," said sister.

"Tell that to the judge; it probably will cost you a fine," said the policeman.

My sister went into the drug store to telephone. While in there the policeman felt the lamp, and it was warm, so he did not insist on her going with him after that.

When sister got home she told us that she had not lighted the lamp—that it was warm from standing in the sun all day. H. C.

RELIGIOUS MULES?

While passing through Mississippi last fall we got stuck, and finally decided to get some mules to pull us out, but upon inquiring for same at a near-by farmhouse we got this answer: "The men folks all done gone to preachin' and carried the mules along." B. B.

GOOD INFORMATION.

While driving through the iron ranges in northern Minnesota we were obliged to stop and inquire as to road directions. It was a small town, and we asked a passerby:

"How do you get to Crosby?"

"O, we have a car and just drive over," said the man. G. T.

The New Indian

Here it is—the new INDIAN Scout Model G-20! The practical motorcycle for the thousands! The motorcycle of the future! New in conception—new in design—new in construction—new in a hundred important details.

Vision and courage built it—made it powerful, strong and sturdy like its famous predecessors in the INDIAN line—made it one hundred pounds lighter than its big brother—the INDIAN Powerplus.

Beautiful, well balanced and mechanically perfect, the new INDIAN Scout sets the high water mark as an ideal middleweight motorcycle. It's evolutionary in that some principles of design of the past have been discarded and new theories of construction, assured by gruelling, practical experience, have been incorporated.

And INDIAN dealers the world over have taken to the INDIAN Scout like wild fire. Personal visits to the factory and peremptory orders for deliveries, rush orders by telegram and letter and cable from far points from dealers, even before seeing the demonstrating model, have assured a wonderful production for 1920.

But the new marvelous middleweight model is only one feature of the new season's INDIAN line. A wonderfully improved bigger valved INDIAN Powerplus with exclusive Cradle Spring Frame for the maximum in power and speed and riding comfort, and the electrically equipped INDIAN Powerplus with two unit ignition and lighting system are outstanding features of the INDIAN 1920 motorcycle offerings.

INDIAN Leadership—supreme for many years—is now assured for all the years to come.

Wheels of Autos Do Lot of Work but Are Ignored

A Little Inspection Will Keep Running Gear in Good Shape.

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE modern automobile wheel is among the hardest working parts of the car, and yet so well has it been perfected that it rarely gives trouble, and the average car owner is almost oblivious to anything except its bare existence. And yet, strange as it may seem, it looks as if we were on the verge of some change in the wheel field, though it is not likely to be the complete revolution that some authorities seem to imagine.

Wheels at the present time in use may be divided into four major classes: Wood, wire, disk and steel spoke wheels. The latter type is practically confined to motor truck construction, but cannot be entirely neglected in any comprehensive view of the wheel situation.

The predominating type of wheel at the present time is the wood wheel, made of second growth American hickory. There is no real cause of complaint against the service rendered by this type of wheel, although many academic flaws are picked in it by experts who favor other types. Until recently it was assumed that failure of the supply of second growth hickory would eventually compel our wheelmakers to switch to another type. Recent government forestry figures, however, seem to show that we have a supply of this wheel material sufficient to last for some time. This being so, it is scarcely likely that any other type of wheel will oust the wooden wheel from its position of prominence in the American motor car industry.

While the wooden wheel is generally efficient in service, occasionally this type has been known to go to pieces under excessive strains. Wire wheel advocates claim that this can never happen with their favorite type. The commonest failure of wooden wheels is the development of annoying squeaks. This trouble may be remedied by driving wooden wedges into the spokes where the spokes have become loosened. Car owners frequently neglect to give due attention to the hub bolts of their wooden wheels. These bolts pass through the wheel and hold the hub plate in position. In the case of the rear wheels the hub bolts also hold the brake drums. If these bolts are permitted to become loose the wheel will be thrown out of alignment. This will make driving difficult and inevitably tire wear will be enormously increased.

Next to popularity to wooden wheels comes the wire type. Strangely enough the wire wheel was the original automobile wheel, but it was simply lifted bodily from the bicycle and was quite inadequate to stand the strains of its new service. Later considerable changes in design were effected and the wire wheel was made entirely practicable for the motor vehicle. In Europe, where no second growth hickory was available and no other wood efficient for wheel construction at hand, wire wheels became standard and still are. Here in this country, with our supply of hickory, we early abandoned the crude wire wheels of the early days and switched to wood.

As a matter of fact, the modern wire wheel has certain undoubted points of superiority over its wood rival. The wire wheel is somewhat stronger in resisting shocks than even the best wood wheel. The latter, too, it is claimed, with continual service becomes somewhat distorted, a condition that increases tire wear. The wire wheel, supported at the rim by a greater number of spokes, is not liable to this distortion trouble.

A further point of advantage claimed for the wire wheel is that the metal more easily dissipates the heat engendered by running. Wood is undoubtedly a poor heat conductor and steel is an excellent one. The wire wheel never gives annoyance by developing squeaks. But the wire wheel demands a considerable amount of care to keep it in good condition. The enamel must be watched, and whenever it cracks off, as it does occasionally, the spot must be painted over, or else moisture will cause rusting.

Car owners using wire wheels should give these parts of the equipment a thorough inspection once every three weeks or oftener to see that no spokes are loose or bent, and that no rust has formed around the nipples. In one type of wire wheel a serrated drive is used and these serrations must be kept perfectly clean. If nicks should develop in the serrations there will be difficulty in mounting the wheel. Should rust form on the driving surface it should be removed immediately with kerosene.

There are certain details of care which must be given alike to all types of wheels. Every wheel runs on a bearing, and this must be kept packed with grease. Once a month each wheel on the car should be jacked up and turned to see that it moves freely. At the same time the spokes at top and bottom should be grasped and the wheel pushed and pulled to see whether excessive play has developed. Wear in the bearings or hub may cause this trouble. In the case of wooden wheels, distortion of the wheel sometimes makes it difficult to mount the rim, or the rim may get out of shape and the same trouble will result. When this occurs, it is an easy matter to force the rim into place by placing the jack against the hub and the troublesome place in the rim. Occasionally the rim creeps a little, so that the valve stems are bent or even broken off. This may be caused by loose lugs or by a distorted rim or by a rim with worn shoulders. It is well to keep an eye on the valve stems, for by their angle one is warned that the rim is creeping.

CAMERA SHOWS NEGLECT OF ARMY CARS

The above picture offers striking confirmation of at least one of the charges of waste and inefficiency made against the federal government by critics of the administration. Hundreds of automobiles have been allowed to stand in the open without cover. Another picture received by The Tribune shows that cars standing nearest the road in the group parked at Camp Holabird, Md., were covered with canvas.

Members of congress have urged that the government owned cars be sold before further deterioration reduces them to junk, or that they be given better care.

The government has refused to sell its surplus cars on the open market on the ground that it would be unfair to the manufacturers thus to depress prices.

"If Mine Only Had a Hot Spot Like a Chalmers"

THOSE who drive a Hot Spot Chalmers hear a comment now and then like this; but the unconcealed respect, the unconcealed envy from the men they rub fenders with is a compliment more often observed.

The public is quick to recognize high efficiency in a motor car. It knows, for instance:

1. How Hot Spot and Ram's-horn "pulverize" gas.
2. How they get out all the power that nature put in.
3. How they well-nigh eliminate vibration.
4. How they furnish a new kind of power.
5. How they keep the car out of the repair shop.
6. How they often go 10,000 miles without a penny's outlay on the car.
7. How they entice a mechanical mind, and charm a woman's sense of comfort.
8. How they make Chalmers one of the few great cars of the world.

Uniform Laws on State Regulation of Trucks Asked

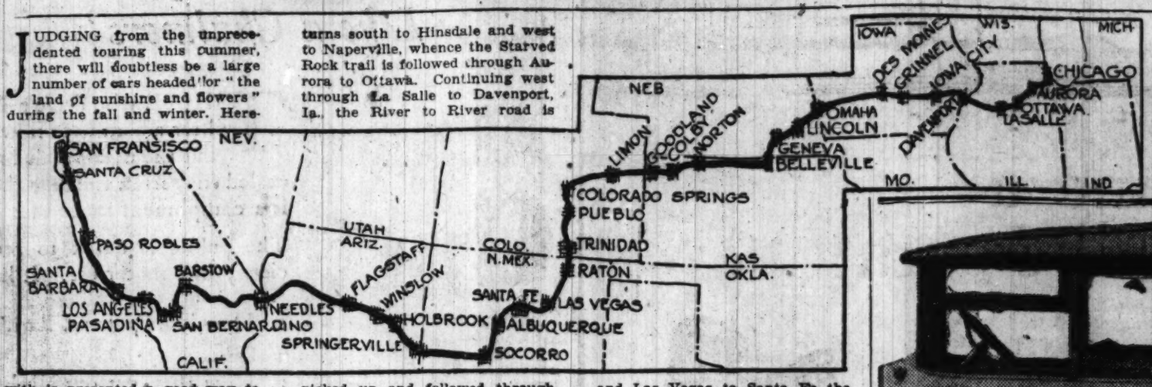
FEAR that ill considered motor truck legislation by the different states will interfere with the development of economical highway transportation and of motor truck express service in interstate commerce has led the New York state commissioner of highways, Frederick S. Greene, to write to Col. Sherrill of the United States war department calling attention to the necessity of having the states of the union enact uniform traffic legislation.

The commissioner points out that New York state is preparing for the motor express era and is building concrete roads as part of its program in promoting motor truck lines. The state division of foods and markets is much interested in the development of such truck operation as an important factor in promoting agricultural production and reducing prices of farm products in the cities. "It will be the duty of the next legisuature," said Mr. Greene, "to enact laws that will promote transportation development."

In his letter to the war department the commissioner said:

"I have noticed that a great many states are now beginning to enact motor truck legislation, and as usual the laws are not uniform. This, of course, is going to hamper not only the manufacture of motor trucks, but will tend toward confusion generally in motor truck traffic. I believe the law should limit motor trucks in three directions —width, height, and maximum load per inch of bearing surface of tire. In my opinion no truck should be allowed on our highways which is more than eight feet in width and thirteen feet in height."

HERE'S YOUR CALIFORNIA ROUTE



JUDGING from the unprecedented touring this summer, there will doubtless be a large number of cars headed for "the land of sunshine and flowers" during the fall and winter. Here-with is presented a good way to go. Owing to repair work the Lincoln highway across Illinois is closed in a number of places at present, and the old established routes to Kansas City are in not any too good condition.

Leaving Chicago, the Lincoln way signs may be followed from Michigan and Jackson boulevards to the end of the pavement at mileage 16.8, where, leaving the Lincoln way signs, the tourist turns south to Hinsdale and west to Naperville, whence the Starved Rock trail is followed through Aurora to Ottawa. Continuing west through La Salle to Davenport, Ia., the River to River road is picked up and followed through Iowa City and Grinnell to Des Moines, and the Great White Way from Des Moines to Omaha, Neb.

The O-L-D highway is followed from Lincoln, Neb., to Fairmont, Neb., the Meridian road from Fairmont to Belleville, Kas., and the Pike's Peak Ocean to Ocean highway from Belleville through Norton, Kas., Colby and Limon, Col., to Colorado Springs. From Trinidad, Col., through Eaton, N. M., and Las Vegas to Santa Fe the Santa Fe trail is followed.

There are a number of mountain passes where caution should be exercised, and some sharp turns where cars with a long wheel base will be forced to back to negotiate the turn. Great care should be used in seeing that needed extra supplies are carried between far distant points; for example, between Magdalena, N. M., and Springerville, Ariz.

Ad Signs Go.

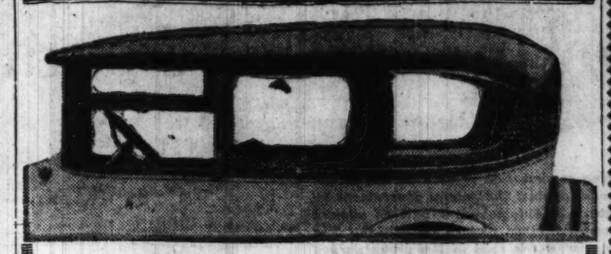
Highway Commissioner Sadler has issued orders to county road superintendents throughout Pennsylvania to remove advertising signs from the 10,335 miles of state highway. He holds such displays within the legal limits of a state road route against the law. The superintendents must immediately remove these signs, some of which overhang the road and others of which are placed on poles and fences owned by the state. A statement issued by the department says complaints have been received from tourists that some of the signs, imitative of the regular detour signs, have misled them in the night. Candidates' poster pictures and hotel signs have especially been a nuisance.

Autoists Cause Fires.

Forest fires ranging throughout the southern counties during the past week and the damage done by them has led officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California to issue another general warning to all motorists to be careful of discarding lighted cigar or cigarette butts from machines to the roadside.

Thefts Reduced.

The use of safety devices is given as one of two causes by the St. Louis police for a decrease of 45 per cent in motor car thefts for the first seven months of 1919, as compared with the same period last year. Up to Aug. 1 835 motor cars were stolen, of which nearly all have been recovered. In the same period last year 2,241 cars were stolen, of which 1,373 were recovered. The other reason for the decrease is the activity of the police.



The Latest in Auto Tops

THE GILLIG PATENT TOP with sliding curtains is a permanent TOP which may be attached to the body of any make of automobile, and can be converted from an open touring car to a closed car by the simple operation of letting down the folding channel to its proper position and pulling the curtains down. This arrangement, in two minutes' time, gives you two cars in one, either an open car without an obstruction or a closed car. Either side may be opened or closed, as you prefer.

A GILLIG TOP not only adds greatly to the appearance of your car but gives all the comforts of a SEDAN and does not add over a hundred pounds to the weight of the car. These tops are covered with the highest grade of material obtainable and can be had in various colors.

For detailed information, apply to any automobile top or body builder. Descriptive circular may be had from

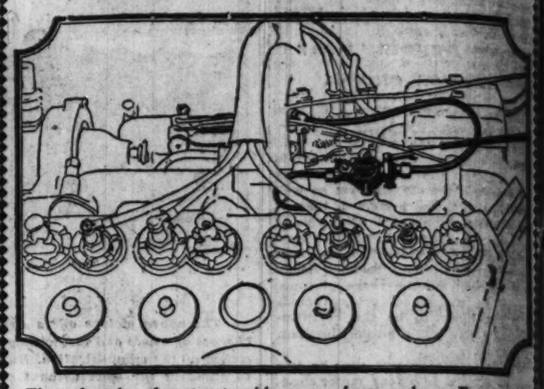
Carbon

THE TROUBLE MAKER HOW TO PREVENT IT



Three-fourths of motor trouble comes from carbon. Every time combustion takes place a small particle of carbon forms. And it stays to damage the motor, waste gasoline and run up repair bills. Some of this carbon comes from the gasoline, but by far the worst of it comes from the oil which "pumps" past the piston rings. Carbon from lubricating oil is extremely hard, heats to a very high temperature, and does constant damage.

There is but one known solvent for it—only one thing that will absolutely prevent it from forming. That one thing is steam. This fact has been recognized by all practical automobile men for years. But the problem has been to get the steam into the gasoline mixture in exactly the proper quantity and keep it under automatic control.

The Automatic Steam Carburetor

takes a tiny bit of water from the supply pipe, turns this water into steam by utilizing heat from the exhaust manifold, and injects this steam into the intake manifold. The quantity of water used is not more than a teacupful in 250 miles of driving. The gasoline carburetor is not disturbed.

The results are almost instantaneous. Steam not only eliminates carbon, but the hydrogen, one of its component parts, is the lightest of all gases and very greatly aids combustion. Vaporization is increased, and all the fuel is exploded. Thus a great saving is effected—in fact, the Automatic Steam Carburetor is sold on the absolute guarantee that it will save from 25% to 40% of gasoline as well as eliminate carbon, reduce motor repair bills 75%, and make every car, truck, tractor, aeroplane or motor boat give better service in every way.

The price of the Automatic is only $15.00, plus a small installation charge. There is no upkeep cost, and it will outlast any motor. Try it. Have one on your motor now. Give it a thirty day test. See for yourself what it will do. Then if it doesn't fulfill the guarantee in every way return it and your money will be refunded. Dealers are authorized to give you this guarantee.

Packard Transportation Conserves Profits

Why should a business man guess at the service available from motor trucks when figures on Packard transportation are established?

THE difference between buying motor trucks and buying motor transportation is the difference between guessing and knowing.

Some lines of trade have so great a margin of profit that they can afford to lose a little money on a guess. But these trades are becoming fewer and fewer.

• • •

Why is it that such a great fleet of Packard Trucks is employed in the coal business—wholesale and retail in this country?

Simply because today limited profits in the coal business make it necessary to operate on known costs.

Men in the coal trade early learned the lesson that the first year's service of the ordinary motor truck is its most dangerous year.

The owner may base his profits on first year performance only to have his figures go into the red when "the paint has worn off."

• • •

The coal trade is a good example of the need for efficient transportation because every factor counts in making the difference between a profitable and an unprofitable season.

Especially must the motor truck equipment hold up its end.

The busy season which is now upon the coal dealer calls for continuous deliveries.

Deliveries must be scheduled to the minute. Every second of time of loading crew, driver and wheel-in crew must be used.

• • •

Coal dealers who use Packard Trucks are able to avail themselves of every time-saving device known to the trade.

Time-saving devices are efficient only when everything may be run according to schedule—That requires dependability—Packard Trucks.

• • •

To the public—it costs no more to patronize the dealer equipped with Packard Trucks.

But unquestionably you receive something more.

You receive better service from the dealer—scheduled service—through all kinds of weather.

You receive much better service from the men who work for that dealer—

Scheduled service means a great deal to the man who shovels coal all day.

It means consideration—his work finished on time—his rest sure when due.

For that he gives the public consideration. In stowing the coal. In keeping it clean. In tidying the premises afterward.

• • •

Coal dealers and others will find valuable help in solving truck transportation problems by calling upon the Freight Transportation Department of the Packard organization in this city. Its services are without charge.

"T. R." stands for "Threaded Rubber" of course—the insulation found only in Willard Batteries with the red trade-mark. The insulation that lasts as long as the plates, so that 90% of those who buy The Red Trade-Marked Willard have no re-insulation bills to pay.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

At the annual meeting of the Highway commissioners' Good Roads association resolutions were adopted approving the plan for having the county board submit a $5,000,000 bond proposition for good roads at the Nov. 4 election.

The Jaxon Steel Products company reported many large sales for its full floating wheel. A claim is made for the wheel that it gives the same service as giant pneumatic tires at less than the cost of the tires and saves on gasoline. It is used on trucks.

Harry Branstetter, Chicago Kissel distributor, says the National Dairy show is going to boom the truck business.

The Lloyd-Shanesy company gave a banquet to its entire organization at the Chicago Automobile club.

Gibbs Service has moved from the Monadnock building to larger quarters in the Auditorium building.

James Levy, Buick man, declared that out of 100 cars counted on Britton's hill at the Elgin road race fifty-three were Buicks.

Louis Chevrolet has been made consulting engineer for the William Small company, manufacturers of the Monroe car. He is to design and build a fleet of racing machines for the company, too.

The National Motor Car and Vehicle corporation reported that about 20 per cent of its output is now closed cars. It was 1 per cent in 1904.

P. C. Thompson resigned as secretary and general manager of the Stone-Thompson company.

The Four Wheel Drive Auto company at Clintonville, Wis., is erecting two additional buildings.

The Jordan Motor Car company purchased the plant of the Metal Parts Manufacturing company, which adjoins its plant in Cleveland.

Charles G. Embleton has been made general manager of the Packard Motor Car company of Chicago. He formerly was general distribution manager.

The Oneida Motor Truck company of Green Bay, Wis., is trying to establish a new record for long distance driving with one of its trucks. It has a loaded truck making a run between the plant and New York City.

A. J. Banta, manager of the Chicago Maxwell-Chalmers branch, announced the appointment of L. C. Freeman as executive engineer over all Maxwell plants.

B. W. Twyman has been made manager of the Milwaukee plant of the Nash Motors company.

J. A. Haskell, formerly of Chicago, has been made assistant general sales manager of the Grant Motor Car corporation.

W. O. Rutherford, second vice president in charge of sales of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, announced the appointment of E. D. Gibbs to the position of advertising director. This appointment is made in harmony with the plans of the first vice president, H. E. Raymond, to be relieved of the task of advertising supervision and concentrate full direction [illegible] advertising under Mr. Rutherford's personal supervision.

Mr. Gibbs' appointment does not disturb the present advertising department, which will be continued under the direction of E. C. Tibbitts as advertising manager.

Horace De Lisser, president of the Fisk Rubber company, inc., announced the purchase by the company of 110 acres of land in Jackson, Mich. On this newly acquired property new factories to cost approximately $2,500,000 will be erected. Work will be started at once, as the present production facilities of the company are being taxed to the limit in an effort to keep pace with the demand for its products.

Motor trucks made by the Diamond T Motor Car company in Chicago will soon be traveling along the steep roads of the mountains of Norway. A shipment of four trucks was made last week to Bergen, Norway. Other shipments of trucks ranging from one to three and one-half tons will follow.

American Rolls-Royce.

New York, Oct. 4.—Plans were announced here today for the formation of a corporation capitalized at $7,000,000 to manufacture Rolls-Royce cars in this country. The announcement was made by Aldred & Co., bankers at 24 Exchange place, that it had agreed to finance the proposed corporation as a branch factory of the English firm of Rolls-Royce, Ltd. It will be financed entirely by American capital, as under present war acts British capital cannot be transferred to other countries for industrial purposes. The American company, however, will manufacture a chassis practically identical with that made in England. The Rolls-Royce aero engine, parts of which were built in America during the war, also will be constructed at the new factory, the location for which has not been announced.

Daily Road Bulletins.

The automobile club of Rochester, N. Y., has adopted a method of notifying the police department daily as to the condition of the roads leading out of the city. A copy of this report is furnished to traffic officers, also a road chart showing the best routes within a 100 mile radius of the city.

"—and 11 more like it"

12 Sturdy SERVICE Motor Trucks are hauling with unfailing dependability the products of the Hydrox Co., the largest manufacturers of Ice Cream and Soda Water in the West.

SERVICE Motor Trucks were chosen to keep pace with the remarkable growth of the Hydrox organization—chosen because in the every day test, under all manner of conditions, they proved themselves more than dependable, more than efficient, more than economical—a real creative business force—"Builders of Business."

There was another reason, equally as important, a reason that every truck owner will appreciate—the service back of the truck.

A SERVICE Motor Truck sale is never completed. A truck must not only be sold—it must stay on the road.

SERVICE Trucks are seldom in the shop—but, should the unusual occur, should repairs, replacements or adjustments be needed, 24 hour service insures against unnecessary delay..

To Visitors at the National Dairy Show

That the dairy industry of the nation can not fail to adopt the motor truck as the final answer to their haulage question, is shown by the following analysis issued by the U. S. Department of Agriculture:

The average round trip made by dairymen to selling points is seven miles. With horses and wagons, it takes 2½ hours every day to make the trip. With a motor truck the round trip is made, on the average, in a half hour.

SERVICE Motor Trucks will place your dairy business on a time-saving basis—a profitable basis. You owe it to the profit side of your ledger to investigate them thoroughly.

7 models—1 to 5 tons. One of them will profitably fit your requirements. Let us prove this to you. A catalog sent upon request.

WANTED—MALE HELP.
Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A BIG JOB AND BIG MONEY FOR BIG SALESMEN.
It takes two things to make big money—the right man and the right proposition.
Men 40 years old who joined our organization within the last few weeks, are making five times as much as they have ever made in their lives before, but no matter what ability you possess, or how much money you are capable of making, you will never get anything worth while in this life without action, so after you have read this act, act, investigate. You can't make a real success unless you are headed the right way; that is, unless you are on the right proposition.
Last year the men on our sales force averaged about $16,000. With our present lineup they will do twice as well. Men who have recently started with us have already earned, for their first month, better than a thousand dollars a week. Some of them will even double that amount this month. They have the business insight to do it. They know by what they did last month, under the same conditions, that they can and will do it.
Have you ever experienced the thrill that comes with making $50,000 a year, or even $25,000 a year? And do you realize in these days of high cost of living that $25,000 a year is easily five times as much net as $10,000 a year?
Now listen! Our work for salesmen is in an exclusive virgin territory, from 100 to 300 miles from Chicago. In each territory there are from several hundred to a thousand logical prospects. Our sales plan puts you in touch with prospects in the first day or two you are in the field.
We are not selling stocks or bonds or anything on this order, but a Specialty. This specialty requires about the same effort to sell as any other $200 specialty or as a $200 or $300 stock sale. All you do is to interview and qualify prospects.
We pay you an immediate bonus of $50 for each prospect you qualify. Your prospect does not necessarily have to put up a cent in cash to qualify. They must agree to investigate your proposition.
We do the closing for you and pay you a commission averaging at the present time $1,000 on each prospect closed. This commission is paid in full just as soon as the transaction is completed—long before the purchaser pays for the sale.
Some of our men have already qualified five prospects in a week. This advertisement is being written on Wednesday, and three different men, who have already qualified numerous prospects, state that they will qualify ten this week.
You are required to qualify two prospects a week in order to hold your territory. Conservatively, this will make you better than $25,000 a year. We realize that the kind of money we are talking sounds unreasonable to men who have never made it, but we can convince any intelligent man who is a real salesman.
We want only responses to this advertisement from men who know a good proposition when they see it, from men who are not lazy, who are not afraid of hard work, from men who realize that the best thing in the world won't sell itself, from men who want to experience the thrills and the other things in life that come with making from $25,000 a year up. If you are not that kind of a man, please save your time and ours. If you are that kind of a man, you owe it to yourself to get in communication with us as soon as you have read this advertisement and go to the bottom of this proposition.
We have six Sales Managers, and if you will call at our office we will promise not to keep any man waiting more than ten minutes, or, if you prefer, write for an appointment, giving an outline of your experience and earnings. We don't expect your Bertillon measurements, but merely enough about yourself to justify us in answering your letter.
Call from 10 to 12 a. m. or 1:30 to 3 p. m. or 5 to 5:30 p. m., Room 301, 109 N. Dearborn-st.

Some people seeking a position or contemplating a change in their positions are of the opinion that sufficient opportunity is not offered by a large concern.

ALFRED DECKER & COHN, Makers of Society Brand Clothes, now have openings for girls and young women who are desirous of making a permanent connection with a liberal starting salary where every chance for advancement, commensurate with their ability, is offered them. Best of working conditions.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

$3,000,000 TWO-LEVEL THEATER FOR BOULEVARD

Plan 18 Story Studio and Office Building in New Link.

Real estate transfers and building permits during the last week make a startling showing when compared with the same week a year ago. The total cost of building permits last week was $3,425,500. A year ago last week they totaled only $616,000. Real estate transfers last week totaled $6,718,557. For the same period last year they were only $1,210,160. Trust deeds and mortgages show the same enormous gain. Last week they amounted to $5,022,746, compared with $1,587,717 a year ago.

BY AL CHASE.

Unusual activity in high class residence property, especially in the suburbs, comment on which is made in another column, was the distinct feature in the real estate market for the week. It almost overshadowed the $1,000,000 theater, studio, and office building project in the new boulevard link at Grand avenue.

The announcement of plans for the first skyscraper and the first playhouse for Chicago's newest thoroughfare, North Michigan avenue, north of the river, aroused much interest, especially among those who have maintained that this section ultimately will rival any in the city as a center of high class shops, theaters, studios and office buildings.

May Be Called "The Michigan."

A syndicate, headed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, architect of the project, has purchased 100 feet on the boulevard and 151½ feet on Grand avenue, at the southeast corner, for an indicated consideration of $300,000, from Harriet M. Fox and Isabelle E. Fox, and will erect next spring an eighteen story building to house studios and offices and a 1,700 seat two level theater.

A tentative name of "The Michigan" has been suggested for the playhouse. A long term lease will be taken by a New York firm, which operates several loop theaters. High class legitimate attractions will be booked. This will not be one of the chain of three model playhouse to be erected by Abraham Erlanger and his associates.

Two Levels for Playgoers.

A feature of the new theater will be the separation of motor traffic from pedestrian. Automobiles will drive up to the level of the substreet below the elevated boulevard. There will be space for parking. Special elevators and stairways will lead to the theater floor. Motorists, therefore, will be able to enter and leave comfortably, especially in stormy weather. Pedestrians will use the boulevard level entrances.

The backers of the project figure that motor traffic by patrons through the congested loop will be done away with. They believe west side playgoers will drive in to Michigan avenue by way of Roosevelt road and Diversey parkway and that south and north siders will use the boulevard entirely. Grand avenue street cars will pass the door.

Hedberg & Bistor, who will manage the building, represented the purchasers. The Bowes Realty company represented the sellers.

$175,000 Bank Planned.

A few blocks west of the northern end of the new boulevard link a $175,000 building for the Cosmopolitan State bank is to be erected. The property at the northeast corner of North Clark street and West Chicago avenue, 150 feet on Chicago avenue and 50 feet on Clark, has been purchased by the Cosmopolitan Safe Deposit company from W. J. Rinn for an indicated price of $110,000. They will lease it to the bank for ninety-nine years with an option to purchase. Richard E. Schmidt, Garden & Martin, have prepared plans for a building to cover the entire lot. Work will begin as soon as present leases expire, May 1, 1920.

This is the largest and most expensive improvement in this neighborhood since the Bush temple was built, directly across Clark street.

Downtown Activity.

Building activity at last has swept into the downtown district. Work is to begin at once on the $450,000 seven story Channon building at the southeast corner of West Randolph and North Market streets, to be used entirely by the H. Channon company, grocery supplies.

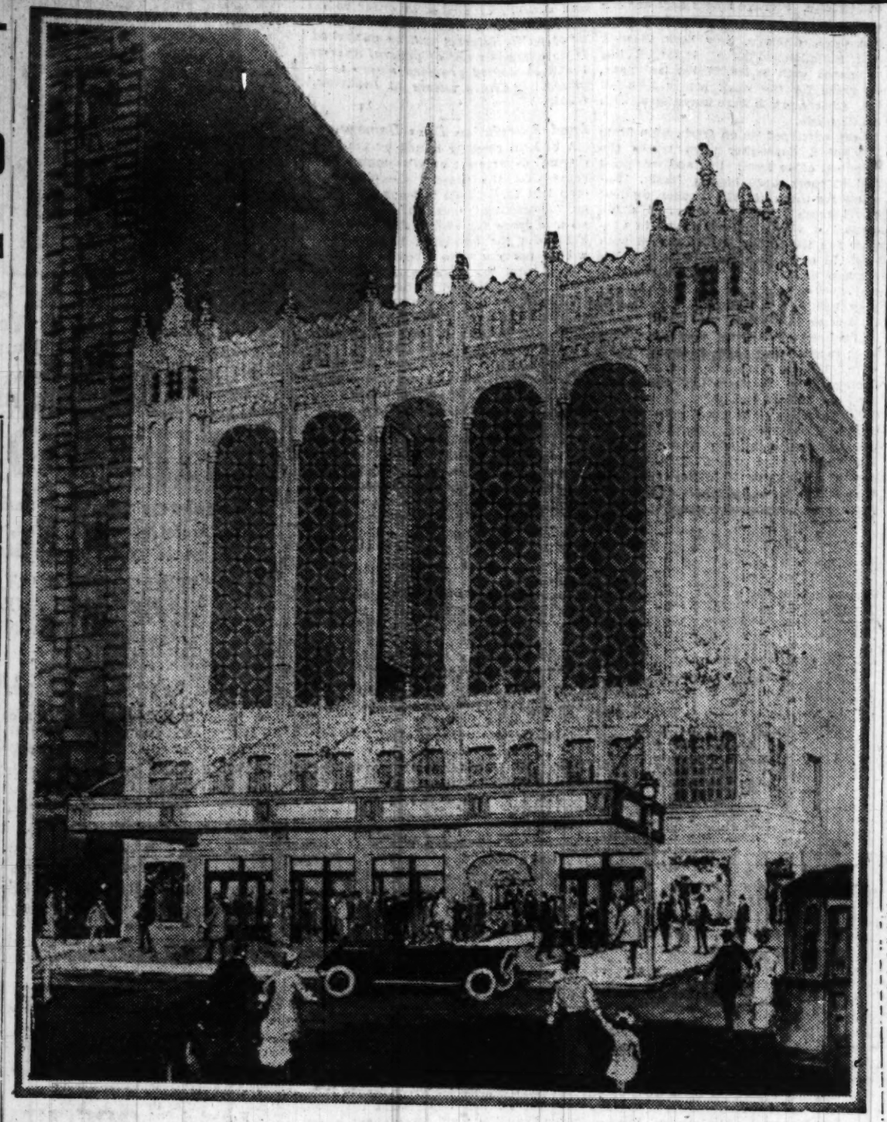
The Channon company has closed the purchase of the property, 121 feet on Randolph and 180 feet on Market, from the Lefens Trust agreement, the transfer indicating a consideration of $500,000. In part payment the Channon company conveyed its warehouse property at 215-21 West Ontario street, $150,000, at a consideration of $150,000. The Channon company has taken back a lease on this property at $7,500 per month until such time as the new building is completed. Plans drawn by Alfred S. Alschuler, architect, call for a red brick building with terra cotta trim.

The sale was negotiated by Dibblee & Manierre. The legal details were attended to by Willis Melville in behalf of the Channon company and Frederick C. Hack of Winston, Strawn & Shaw in behalf of the Lefens Trust agreement.

Two City Residence Sales.

Two leading residence sales of city property were for $125,000 and $115,000. Philip K. Wrigley, vice president of the William Wrigley Jr. company, gum manufacturers, bought the thirty-six room residence at 2466 Lake Shore avenue, northwest corner of Arlington place, from his father for an estimated price of $125,000. The property is eighty-three feet in Lake View avenue, 121 feet in Arlington place, and is 152 feet deep with a width at the rear of seventy-seven feet.

Edward L. Ryerson Jr., vice president of Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, steel, purchased the residence at 1431 Astor street, 25x130, from Mrs. Louise A. Meeker, widow of George W. Meeker, for an indicated consideration of $50,000. Mr. Ryerson, who lives in Lake Forest, will make it his town house.



Chicago's newest loop movie, to be erected directly opposite Marshall Field & Co., at 110 to 122 North State street, will be the most ornate playhouse so far erected in the downtown district. Henry L. Newhouse is the architect. It will seat about 2,000. It will be named "The Ascher,"—the first time the operators of the house, the Ascher brothers, have named a theater after themselves. They operate eighteen movies in outlying neighborhoods and several in other cities.

Ascher brothers purchased the fee from the Marshall Field estate for a reported consideration of $1,133,000. B. W. Eisendrath and David S. Simon represented the purchasers and Dibblee & Manierre the Field estate.

MUTUAL PRODUCE TO REMODEL COLD STORAGE PLANT

Industrial activity failed to keep pace with residential sales. One of the largest deals was the sale by Wolf, Sayer & Heller to the Mutual Produce company of the property at the northwest corner of North Peoria and Fulton streets. The consideration named is $75,000. The present six and four story buildings will be remodeled for cold storage purposes. The seller was represented by Stein, Mayer & David. Levinson & Hoffman represented the purchaser.

A one story building to cost $35,000 is to be erected on the site of the old William R. Linn residence at 2707-11 South Michigan avenue, 84x165. The Sterling Motor Truck company will lease it for fifteen years at a term rental of $125,000. Oliver & Co. were the brokers.

The old Cooke Brewing company property at 2637-43 Cottage Grove avenue has been sold to the West Disinfectant company of New York, by the Chicago Title and Trust company, receivers for the brewing company, for a reported consideration of $45,000. The property is 95½x171. The buyers were represented in a legal way by Leo Wormser of Rosenthal, Hammill & Wormser.

The Gloria Light company is to build a four story $75,000 factory building on property, 84x125, in Sangamon street, 100 feet north of Madison street, west front, purchased from William Browar for a reported price of $21,000. Marks & Co. represented all parties. A. L. Levy is the architect.

Find New Way Out of Rent Difficulty—Buy Their Flats

Here's a new angle to the flat shortage situation: People unable to rent an apartment are buying 'em.

According to Harrison & Riedy of 4728 Sheridan road, all of the two and three apartment buildings sold by them are being bought for homes. "Many people, on finding they can't lease an apartment in the neighborhood," they comment, "decide to purchase a building. There are more buyers on hand than property."

Here are a few sales reported by this firm: The high grade apartment building at 930 Windsor avenue, 50x94, to Christ Rolandsen, for a reported consideration of $25,000. For William Lees, the three apartment building at 4832 Kenmore avenue to Elam Gray for $20,000; the three apartment building, 1445 Winnemac avenue, for Hattie White James to Emma Shordiche, consideration $13,000.

Brick Bungalow Project to Involve $400,000

Details of a $400,000 bungalow project were made public in the giving of forty-one trust deeds by Kurt R. Beak to W. H. Mullin for $180,000, eighteen at $4,250 and twenty-three at $4,500, five years at 6 per cent, on property on Winnemac, Winona, and Foster avenues, one-half block west of Winnemac park. Work is under way on forty-two brick five and six room bungalows, to sell for from $7,500 to $8,000. Each will be on a lot 30x150. It is expected they will be completed Nov. 15.

HOUSES ACTIVE IN NORTH SHORE AND OAK PARK

Residences in Suburbs Make an Unusually Good Showing.

Suburban residence sales leaped into the limelight on Monday, and held its conspicuous position throughout the week. The north shore and Oak Park ran a close race. Most of the sales were for the highest type of homes.

The largest suburban residence sale of the week was in Glencoe, which was one of several in that suburb. Two Glencoe deals were related. Laura S. Sargent, widow of S. Sargent, founder of Sargent & Lundy, electrical engineers, sold her residence at Sheridan road and Harbor street to William Sutherland of Arthur Young & Co., for an indicated price of $68,000. The house was built about fifteen years ago on a three and one-half acre lot.

Mrs. Sargent found it too large for her needs, and has purchased through Frederick B. Thomas the nine room residence of F. W. Penfield, at 834 Sheridan road, Glencoe, for a reported price of $42,000. It is said to be one of the finest homes in Glencoe, and was built six years ago by Mr. Penfield on a lot 107x225.

Another Glencoe Sale.

Another Glencoe sale was by Louisa H. Cormack, who disposed of her three story brick residence at 495 Greenleaf avenue to Evelyn O. Cochran, wife of George S. Cochran, president of Osborn & Cochran, Inc., stocks and bonds, for a reported price of $30,000, cash. The property fronts 132 feet on Greenleaf with a depth of 267 feet. McGuire & Orr were the brokers.

In Evanston Harold R. White, secretary of John Sexton & Co., sold his ten room residence at 741 Sheridan road to Robert W. Chapin, president of Chapin & Co., feed manufacturers, for a reported price of $40,000. The property has a frontage of seventy feet, running back 300 feet to the lake. Robert S. Crane of Quinlan & Tyson was the broker for both parties.

Block Sold in Winnetka.

Winnetka's largest sale was the entire block, three acres, at the northeast corner of Hill road and Linden avenue, near the Indian Hill Golf club. Frederick B. Thomas sold it for W. E. Weinsheimer to Edward P. Bailey, vice president of the Chicago Trust company. The property is improved with a frame residence, which Mr. Bailey will remodel. The indicated purchase price was $25,000.

Another Winnetka sale was the purchase by Arthur M. Cox of Judah, Willard, Wolf & Reichmann, attorneys, of the E. W. Ballard residence at 1135 Spruce street for an indicated price of $19,000.

Wilmette contributed to the north shore activity in the sale by H. M. Gardiner of his ten room house at 720 Lake avenue to Herbert C. Arms, president of the Central Scientific Laboratory company. The indicated consideration was $16,500, with a $4,000 incumbrance. The property is 100x200.

In Hubbard Woods Jacob M. Dickinson purchased the eight room residence, 150x150, of T. A. Schmidt for an indicated price of $13,000, subject to $6,000.

Activity in Oak Park.

The Oak Park sales were led by the purchase of the ten room residence of Alonzo Burt, treasurer of the Chicago Telephone company, by E. C. Cronwall, investment bonds, for a reported consideration of $30,000, clear of all incumbrances. The property is at 538 North Euclid avenue on a lot 100x175 and is brick and stucco, old English type of architecture. The sale was negotiated by O. C. Braese of Dunlop & Co. of Oak Park.

The same brokers also sold the residence at 232 North Scoville avenue, lot 50x185, for F. D. Snyder to D. L. Goodwillie at a reported consideration of $19,000. Mr. Snyder took in exchange 200 feet of vacant in River Forest for $10,000.

A third sale by the same Oak Park house was the eleven room stucco bungalow at 716 North East avenue, 126x188, for William Dreiske to Oliver M. Gale, the author. The consideration was reported as $17,500.

River Forest Purchase.

Henry P. Magill, president of Henry P. Magill & Co., insurance agents, sold his residence at the southeast corner of Keystone and Oak avenues, River Forest, to the Rev. William W. Newell for a reported consideration of $19,500.

Mr. Magill then bought the nine room residence of J. M. Dall, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, at 426 Forest avenue, Oak Park, 50x227, for an indicated consideration of $16,000, with an incumbrance of $6,000.

$50,000 LOAN.

The McKinley Music company has given a trust deed to the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank for a $50,000 loan, five years at 5½ per cent, on its property, 100x150, at the southeast corner of Harper avenue and East Fifty-fifth street.

ACTIVITY SHOWN IN MOTOR ROW

The Thermoid Rubber company has leased from E. D. Weary the land at 1907 South Michigan avenue, 25x158 feet, together with a two story building to be erected thereon. The lease runs for ten years and provides for a term rental of about $62,000. Oliver & Co. represented both parties in the negotiations.

This being the third tire company to locate in this block within the last few weeks, the brokers say indications point to this location as a promising center for tire and rubber companies.

Oliver & Co. also have leased for the Yellow Cab company to the Bethleham Motor Truck company for six years the one story building, 112x180 feet, at 2430-2438 South Park avenue, at a term rental of $50,000. The building will be used as a service station for trucks.

John P. Wilson has leased to Frank Koons the two story building at 1332-34 Michigan avenue, 50x160 feet. The building will be used for the sale of used automobiles. The lease is for a term of five years from Jan. 1, 1920, at a term rental of nearly $30,000. This lease also was negotiated by Oliver & Co.

$75,000 Cash Paid for Sixty-third Street Corner

Mrs. Minna Katzmann, owner of the Woodlawn Furniture company, has purchased for a reported cash payment of $75,000 the 125x125 at the southwest corner of East Sixty-third street and Ingleside avenue from the Mandel trust through Edgar M. Snow & Co. It is improved with one story buildings. When present leases expire in 1921 a four story building is contemplated.

'Millionaire's Row' Suggested as Relief to Home Famine

Here's what seems to be a brand new suggestion, which, if carried out with certain modifications, might help a little in relieving the present shortage of living space. It's by Paul H. McCalla, president of the Calumet Advertising company, 37 West Van Buren street, and in part is as follows:

"In an article in the real estate column of THE TRIBUNE for Sept. 30 mention was made of the shortage of flats and of the large number of people who were unable to find space and who were moving their furniture into storage.

"You and your readers should be interested in knowing of the large number of fine old residences in this district that can be bought or rented and which would slightly relieve the shortage of living quarters. The district referred to is on Prairie avenue, from Sixteenth to Twenty-ninth streets, and on Calumet avenue, from Eighteenth to Twenty-fourth streets. This was formerly known as "Millionaires' row." The following well known families still live here: Mrs. P. D. Armour, Mrs. Byron L. Smith, Mrs. Pullman, Mrs. Glessner, Mrs. W. W. Kimball, Mrs. Blackstone, Mrs. John Crerar, Mrs. John Hamline, Robert M. Fair (Marshall Field's partner), and many others.

Sell Later at a Profit.

"Many of the families have moved out, owing to the encroachments of business, and their residences, many of them in perfect order, can be had by anyone who wishes to buy or rent. Those who wish to buy can live here for a short while, and as values are rising rapidly, can later sell out at a good profit to the business concerns seeking to locate in the district.

"In this locality there has been over $10,00,000 worth of publishing investment alone in recent years, not to mention the automobile investment. Some of the New York publishers, seeking to escape the trouble with the New York printers' unions, and particularly to locate their plants in a central location, where the zone postage rates will not be such a heavy burden upon them, are quietly looking into this district with a view to building their plants here. R. R. Donnelley & Co. have one of the largest printing plants in the west on Calumet avenue, opposite the John B. Drake home. The Butterick Publishing company has already built a large building in South Park avenue.

New Motorway to Loop.

"Supt. Foster of the south park board assures me that they are nearly ready to start work on the new Grand boulevard extension up South Park avenue to Twenty-third street. They are to widen South Park avenue sixty-six feet, put a bridge over the Illinois Central railroad at Twenty-third street, and carry the boulevard downtown past the Field museum in Grant park. The filling in of the lake has been pretty well finished behind the museum and down to Sixteenth street, and this means that only a narrow fill from Sixteenth to Twenty-third street needs to be completed. Mr. Foster says that all the south park commissioners are a unit in wishing to push this as fast as possible in order to relieve the congestion on Michigan avenue.

"When that improvement is completed it means that Michigan avenue will lose about 50 per cent of its present traffic, for most auto owners living south live near the lake and will prefer to travel through Grand boulevard and so down into Grant park rather than go through the slow and congested traffic of Michigan avenue, particularly as most of them park their cars in Grant park anyway. Because of this impending change in traffic many automobile concerns are looking into the district with a view to locating their plants nearer the new thoroughfare.

"This is a Cinderella district, just about ready to be discovered."

REAL ESTATE VALUATIONS

Geo. C. Olcott & Co. have just issued a new edition of "Olcott's Real Estate Valuations of Chicago," revised and corrected up to date. They have reorganized their business into a valuation service, especially for mortgage loan houses. Hereafter their book will be issued semi-annually instead of annually, as heretofore, as a part of the service.

Mr. Olcott has sold his property located at 1015 Washington boulevard, where his office has been situated for many years, to the Wm. Ganschow Co., whose manufacturing plant adjoins, for extension purposes. The lot is 31x175 and is improved with two old flat buildings, which will be torn down. The price obtained was $17,000, or about $550 per front foot, a record price for the neighborhood, considering the improvements as of no value.

This property has been in the possession of Mr. Olcott's family for sixty-five years and was a landmark in the vicinity. The firm has engaged new quarters at 143 North Dearborn street.

REALTY BOARD NOTES

For the third times the proposed merger of the two local realty boards was turned down by the Chicago real estate board at their adjourned annual and regular monthly meeting on Wednesday. President Ackley announced that he had been asked by several members to suggest the amalgamation of the two bodies. It at once met with opposition from R. C. Durland, Ralph C. Badeaux, Harry Goldstein and others who served on a committee when the same subject had been considered before.

The Chicago real estate board has published a booklet on new scale of commissions and charges.

At the first luncheon of the season of the Cook county real estate board, at the Morrison hotel on Wednesday, Robert H. Whitten, city planning engineer of Cleveland, spoke on zoning.

MILWAUKEE AVENUE DEAL.

William Kaplan paid a reported price of $50,000 cash to Edward Mendel for the two story store and apartment building at the southwest corner of Milwaukee and Montrose avenues. Mary Levy & Bro. represented all parties.

LEASES

The board of education has leased from R. J. Gunning the Artcraft building at 700-706 South Clark street, for ten years from Oct. 1 at an annual rental of $40,000. The building, which is six stories with a frontage of sixty-two feet and a depth of 108 feet, is now being fitted for use of the extension of the continuing school.

Willis & Frankenstein have leased through Winston & Co., the entire third and fourth floors of the building at the northeast corner of Michigan avenue and Lake street to the Booth Fisheries company for a term of years, commencing Oct. 15, for $50,000. Upon completion of the north section of the proposed building adjoining the corner the fisheries company will occupy the entire fourth floor, which will give them in excess of 11,000 square feet for office use.

Evidence of office space demand in the new district north of the river is shown in the following leases made by Chandler, Hildreth & Co., for E. H. Sargent & Co., at 155 East Superior street; the entire sixth floor of the Merchants Manufacturing and Distributing company for five years at a total rental of $30,000, the entire fifth floor for five years at a term rental of $30,000 to the National Hellastone company and for the same company has subleased 3,600 feet of floor space to Marshall & Fox, architects, for drafting rooms at an annual rental of $3,500.

The seven story building at 227-229 West Van Buren street has been leased for a term of five years from January 1, 1920, for a total rental of $100,000, for Julia W. Voltz and others to the Kingston Woolen company, Siegel brothers, Ozark Garment company, Wolfson company, Hork Brothers, and the G. & S. Heyman company, Miltenberg & Guettel were the brokers.

KUPPENHEIMER RESIDENCE SOLD.

Holton, Seelye & Co. have sold the three story white stone Kuppenheimer house at 3240 South Michigan avenue, title of which was in Moses Raber, lot 50x170, for $35,000, to Joseph E. Nelson & Sons, general contractors. They intend to leave the house as it stands, using the upper floors for their drafting rooms and the main floor for their general offices.

DEMAND FOR APARTMENT LOTS.

Charles Ringer announces that there is a big demand for lots for apartments in his new South Shore subdivision on the grounds of the former Windsor Park Golf club. He has opened an office at 2480 East Seventy-fifth street and has issued an illustrated booklet on his subdivision.

GAINS ON CORN FOLLOW LOWER PRICES AT START

Report Tariff Will Be Placed on Argentine Grain Helps.

BY CHARLES S. MICHAELS.

Those who expected that lower prices at the opening would prevail during the day were disappointed, as the markets for corn and oats were oversold and the selling pressure light after the first run of selling subsided. The only news of importance was a report that congress will take up the bill imposing an import duty on Argentine grain. This started general covering and prices advanced, but the close was ⅛@⅜c under the top on corn and oats with gains of ⅝@1¼ on corn and ⅛@⅜c on oats for the day. Rye and barley futures closed unchanged.

Southwestern corn prices were ¼@½c higher and oats ¼@⅜c up at Kansas City and unchanged to 1½c at St. Louis. Oats at Minneapolis gained ⅜@½c and Winnipeg ¼@⅝c.

Provisions were irregular, with the close on pork 50c higher for October and 20c lower for January. Lard gained 12½c for October, while November lost 7½c and January 42½c. In short ribs October finished 5c higher for October and lost 10c for January.

A feature of the week was the small net changes compared with a week ago, corn being 1⅜@2c lower, oats off ⅜c on May and unchanged for December. Rye 1@1½c lower, barley ½@7½c higher, pork 25c lower for October and $2.50 for January. Lard, 10@42½c higher, October leading, and short ribs $7½@$1.02½ lower.

Corn in Strong Close.

Local traders were very bearish early, and with a lack of support prices were forced off 1c, but under $1.22⅛ for December and $1.20¼ for May the best sellers of the previous day absorbed the offerings on resting orders. This took the surplus off the pit, and rumors that an import duty was to be imposed on Argentine corn, combined with more favorable reports regarding President Wilson's health, started shorts to covering. A jump of 2@2½c followed, with the finish on a fair reaction due to week-end evening up. October sold between $1.40 and $1.43, and closed at $1.41½, while December was $1.24¼ and May $1.22⅝.

The trade forgot that the bills to place a duty on Argentine corn had been introduced into congress several months ago, and that nothing had been heard from them since although it was expected that producers would now try to get action on them in view of the prospects of further imports.

With oats strong there was less disposition shown to press the short side on breaks. The weekly forecast was for fair weather, with frost, and favorable to the bears, but it had little effect, although weather conditions from now on will have considerable influence on the movement of the new grain.

Country offerings were small, but the eastern call slow, with shipping sales of 40,000 bu. Sample values were easier, especially for mixed and white. Receipts 68 cars. For the week Chicago had 1,027,000 bu and shipped 577,000 bu. Last year receipts were 2,340,000 bu and shipments 839,000 bu.

Cash Houses Buy Oats.

Houses with seaboard connections and cash houses were active buyers of oat futures early. The big cash sales of late have caused shorts to take fright, and while many of the pit element were bearish they were afraid to sell freely, and prices advanced readily, at the top showing 1⅝c above the inside figures early. Profit taking was on toward the last and the finish was with December at 71c.

Well above 1,000,000 bu cash oats have ben bought by the seaboard in the last two days. Bids of 8c over December, track New York, were renewed, and 550,000 bu were reported taken. Export sales at the seaboard were reported at 1,000,000 bu. Country offerings were limited, and receipts of 123 cars were readily absorbed with prices ½@1c higher.

Barley Prices Lower.

Demand for barley was not as keen as of late and prices in the sample market were 1@2c lower, with spot sales at $1.20@1.63. Receipts, 19 cars.

While there was a fair trade in rye, futures showed little change in prices. Spot lots were in light supply and brought ¾c over October, with sales at $1.42¾@1.43½. Receipts, 6 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 7@16c higher; October, $3.88; December, $3.86; Winnipeg, 12c higher; October, $3.80; December, $3.59.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, $8.50@11.25, per 100 lbs. Toledo, 5c lower; December, $5.70 per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed firm. Country lots, $30@45 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 10c higher; December, $30.10 per bu of 60 lbs.

Lard for Export.

Buying of January lard and short ribs by local traders and shorts was a feature of the provision trade part of the day. Selling pressure was light early but values eased off later, with commission house offerings of moderate volume. There has been a good business in lard with Germany of late but the extent is not given out. Domestic trade is not large. Shipments of cured meats for the week were smaller and lard larger than the previous week and both exceeded last year's. Aggregate of lard and meats was 36,183,000 lbs against 28,873,000 last year. Hogs higher and receipts light. Reduction of stocks at western points last month had little influence, although many traders think the break of late necessitates caution on the selling side on breaks. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

For the present there is no particular trend to the grain values. A majority of the local traders are bearish, but they do not look for any pronounced declines for a few weeks. Those who are friendly to the market say they see nothing at present to make and hold pronounced advances for any length of time. The movement of 5c up or down from the present level is about all that can be expected, they say, as the pit element wind up for a few days in advancing prices and then lower them during the unwinding period. The country is disposed to sell a little new corn, and Iowa is offering more oats, but a large movement is not to be expected owing to the scarcity of cars.

The movement of grain on the railroads in the northwestern regional zone for the week ended Sept. 30 was 14,659 cars, compared with 19,458 cars last year. Scarcity of cars is largely responsible for the decreased movement.

Those in a position to know say that the sales of cash oats in the west the last week exceed the estimates of the trade, and that probably 3,000,000 bu were secured in all positions. While many of the local traders have been inclined to doubt that there has been a good demand from abroad, a number of them were forced to admit after the close that the persistent buying of futures against the cash sales had taken the slack out of the market. Messages from the seaboard indicated that the demand would probably continue for a while yet. Traveling men for grain firms who have recently been over the leading producing states say that the country is not disposed to sell, and may not do so until after the big rush of new corn is out of the way.

The estate of the late W. H. Bartlett, which owned the S. C. Bartlett company, Inc., one of the largest grain houses in Peoria, Ill., has sold its interest to E. V. Maltby, J. A. Waring, Samuel Thomas, and C. S. Cochran, who owned the T. A. Grier & Co. business there and have sold out. The Bartlett company has elevators at Akron, Buda, Radnor, Langley, Hahnaman, Nelson, Fairbury, and Lodemia, Ill. It was the company in which the late W. H. Bartlett started in business with his brother, S. C. Bartlett, the brothers later forming Bartlett, Frazier & Co., now the Bartlett-Frazier company. E. V. Maltby is president, J. A. Waring vice president and general manager, and C. S. Cochran secretary of the S. C. Bartlett company. T. A. Grier will continue in business as for many years.

An Iowa point sold five cars of new corn yesterday for October shipment to Minneapolis on the basis of $1.39 delivered.

Hans Siemon of J. S. Bache & Co., who has been in Europe the last two months, was in Chicago yesterday. He says Europe is on the verge of starvation. In Paris all the sugar he was able to get was four drops of saccarine for his coffee, and in London one small piece of butter once a day is the limit. He believes that Germany will buy grains and provisions if given credit.

HEAVY SELLING LOWERS COTTON

New York, Oct. 4.—Southern and Wall street selling was a feature in depressing cotton values, and they reacted from the inside, closing at losses of 15@28 points. Part of the selling was in the way of hedging. Buying early was regarded as good, but insufficient to offset the effect of the increased selling. At the last shorts covered on unfavorable weather reports from the south. Traders expect hearish cables from Liverpool on Monday. Prices follow:

NEW BANK FOR BOULEVARD LINK ON NORTH SIDE

Organization of a new bank, the Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, to be located in and serve the near north shore district, was announced yesterday. The new bank, which will start with capital of $250,000 and surplus of $50,000, is being organized by a number of business and banking interests, including Col. Robert R. McCormick, Frederick H. Rawson, president of the Union Trust company; W. V. Kelley, president of the Miehle Printing Press company; J. C. Cox, treasurer of the William Wrigley Jr. company, and S. E. Thomason, chairman of the board of the West Town State bank.

The bank will erect a building on the new boulevard link at Michigan avenue and Ohio street, but it is planned to open for business about Nov. 1 in temporary quarters in the immediate neighborhood until completion of the bank's new home. A charter for the institution has been granted, but officers and directors have not yet been chosen.

The new bank is designed to serve the needs of a district which is showing rapid growth as a commercial center of Chicago as well as a residential section. Its territory will include the important industrial district adjacent to the mouth of the Chicago river and the growing residential district along both sides of the Lake Shore drive.

Land Speculation Does Damage.

A bulletin recently issued by the agricultural department at Washington indicates that the present speculation in corn belt farm lands is being conducted on "shoestring" margins. As there is no machinery for selling short the market lacks the steadying influence that a bear party always gives to booms in stocks, and the advance can only run its course unchecked till it collapses.

The method is for the buyer of a farm to pay down a small part of the purchase price, the balance to be paid and possession given on March 1 next. The buyer, perhaps, knows he will be unable to make the final payment and depends on reselling at a higher price before March 1. After the farm has been sold several times in this fashion nobody knows who will own it on March 1, and the occupant, whether he be the former owner or a tenant, cannot make plans for next year. As a result improvements are neglected. Another bad effect is that the profits from many of these successive sales go to bankers, merchants, or real estate men in towns and cities and must ultimately be paid by the farming industry.

Mortgage houses of long experience, of course, are not misled as to the basis of this speculation, and its principal effect on loans thus far has been to widen the margin of safety required. This makes the purchase of land by tenants or young farmers much more difficult and decreases their chances of success.

Wis.-Minnesota Light and Power.

H. R., Manchester, Ia.—The Wisconsin-Minnesota Light and Power company's refunding bonds are junior to a relatively small amount of underlying issues. Interest on them was earned one and one-half times in 1918. Gross earnings have been showing a steady increase, but expenses have grown faster, and net earnings have declined somewhat. The company has strong backing and its refunding bonds are well secured, but not of the highest grade.

Brief Answers.

P. F., New York.—Any short term note of a very strong corporation will answer your requirements. One of the best is the issue of the War Finance corporation, due April 1 next. Those notes can be bought at about par. Victory loan bonds would also answer your purpose.

C. M. H.—Lack of space makes it impossible for this department to publish more than the main facts about a company. If you want data of some particular detail send stamped envelope for private answer.

COFFEE MARKET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—There was a sharp advance in the market for coffee futures here today, owing to more encouraging advices from Santos and a moderate demand from trade sources. The close was at a net advance of 66 points. Spot, steady. Rio 7s, 15½c; Santos 4s, 25¼@25½c. Receipts at the two Brazilian ports were 28,000 bags and Jundiahy receipts, 17,000 bags. Cable advices from Santos say the government has prohibited operations in futures between calls. Sales of futures in New York, 22,750 bags. Prices:

Master Salesmen

with executive ability wanted

A manufacturer must secure a distributor in Illinois who will build a selling organization for the purpose of marketing a product with a known market.

The distributor who secures territory must have financial responsibility, previous merchandising experience, be capable of building and managing a sales organization and willing to visit the factory to become thoroughly conversant with the manufacturing and selling problems.

The product is superior in merit to any of its kind. The profit margin is large enough to assure the distributor of a proposition that will present itself attractively to his salesmen and at the same time provide a very profitable business from their efforts.

The General Manager of the Company will be at the address below, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Applications for appointment should be made by letter only.

This item was larger by $12,554,997, or about 11 per cent. On commercial paper the banks increased their borrowings by $6,657,-198, or, roundly, 11½ per cent. The total increase in loans was $19,211,706.

Borrowings by other reserve banks showed a decrease of $3,405,000. The reserve bank itself made a small increase, about $3,000,000, in its purchases of United States certificates of indebtedness.

In addition to the loan expansion the reserve bank put out $7,010,445 more reserve notes, bringing that item up to $457,058,610.

Figures for Week.

The treasury department increased its deposits at the reserve bank by $8,886,-198. Apparently the statement as a whole reflected further absorption of treasury certificates in the district. The figures:

The New York associated banks made a further gain in the excess reserve, the increase being $21,182,860. The surplus now stands at $39,605,740. Its upward movement had not been predicted; on the contrary it was thought that the reserve would show a decline, this being given as the excuse for the high interest rates that obtained on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The loan expansion was rather large, $94,343,000. Loans are now around the high point, standing at $5,391,817,000. The banks have loaned not only the full amount of their deposits but $1,192,703,000 of their capital and surplus.

Good Gain in Cash.

There was a good gain in cash for the week, $31,932,000. The treasury department drew down on its deposits by $24,-961,000. However, the item still stands at $273,347,000. The figures:

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Cotton goods today were steady, with weaving yarns higher. New percale prices will be announced early next week. Linens were very dear and sold moderately. Burlaps showed an easing tendency in the lighter weights for spot delivery. Wool goods held firm.

A small run of hogs resulted in mostly 25c higher selling, despite the fact that about half the packers were out of the market. Fewer choice lots than usual were on sale. Top hogs, at $16.85, was 50c above low top for the week. Average price for the day, at $15.55, was 10c higher than Friday, $1.00 lower than a week ago and $2.95 lower than a year ago.

While Chicago's hog supply was smaller, the eleven markets received 29,000, against 25,000 the previous Saturday and 37,000 a year ago. For the week the eleven points received 390,000, being 26,000 more than previous week, 74,000 less than a year ago, and 6,000 more than ten year average for same week.

Week's Hog Average $15.75.

Average price of hogs for the week was $15.75, being $1.25 lower than previous week, $6.45 lower than record made ten weeks ago, and lowest since July, 1917, however standing $4.90 above eight year average for same week.

Cattle receipts for the week totaled 13,000 more than previous week, yet demand improved and prices advanced 25@50c. Average price of good beef cattle for the week at $16.00 was highest since week ending Aug. 16. Sheep prices scored uneven gains during the week, smaller arrivals and better demand being factors.

Although cattle and sheep prices advanced, calves at the close were around $2.00 lower, traders claiming that because of light receipts and keen demand they have been out of line and more liberal receipts in the near future are counted on to allow an adjustment of prices.

Monday's receipts are estimated at 23,000 cattle, 27,000 hogs, and 30,000 sheep, against 28,833 cattle, 31,366 hogs, and 51,664 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 74,000 cattle, 115,000 hogs, and 110,000 sheep.

NEW YORK PHONE COMPANY TO RAISE.

New York, Oct. 4.—Telephone rates will be increased throughout New York state on Dec. 1, with the exception of New York City, according to an announcement by Division Commercial Manager Spaulding of the New York Telephone company.

CHICAGO STOCK TRANSACTIONS

Stewart Manufacturing was the feature of trading on the local exchange. The price advanced 3½ points to 54½. The buying was unusually heavy for that stock and at the close there were unfilled orders in the market.

It is understood that there will be shortly some news announcement that will account for the advance in the shares. The business of the company is reported to be constantly expanding.

Swift & Co. stock was up 1¼ points at 133. The buying was considered good and there was a rather strong rumor of an important announcement next week. This, however, can only be presented as a rumor.

Swift International was about steady. Libby-McNeil showed a fractional gain.

Stewart-Warner showed an improvement of one point, though the buying was not large. Carbide was rather dull but firm.

The Strength of a Great Company Is Behind the Wonderful New Six

YOU, whose interest is aroused over the coming of the remarkable new Six cylinder car to be produced in quantities by the Willys Corporation, will be equally interested in the company behind it—for a strong organization gives assurance of a good car.

The Willys Corporation is one of the large concerns in the automobile industry headed by Mr. John N. Willys—who to date has built and marketed more than 650,000 automobiles.

Though one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the industry, the Willys Corporation, hithertofore, has never manufactured an automobile. It has confined its operations to the building of Auto-Lite starting and lighting systems; Willys Light sets, for the lighting of homes and farms; and New Process Gears for automobile transmissions and differentials.

The strength and magnitude of the Corporation can be realized by a glance at the dimensions of the Auto-Lite unit alone.

The Electric Auto-Lite business was organized in 1911 to build electric starting and lighting systems. Its main plant is located at Toledo, Ohio, and covers 10 acres of ground with a total of 422,000 square feet of floor space. A second plant, purchased from the Duesenberg Motors Company, is located at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

In 1912, the business amounted to 100 sets per day; the present capacity of the plant is 2,500 outfits per day, with orders and specifications on hand for 4,000 outfits per day beginning January 1, 1920—by which time production will have been increased sufficiently to turn out that number.

The Auto-Lite unit also manufactures the Willys Light. The market for this is in thousands of individual farms, homes, stores, churches and other small-community buildings. Mechanically, the Willys Light has a unique advantage, being operated by the Willys-Knight engine.

This great unit, together with the New Process Gear plant, of the Corporation, located at Syracuse, N. Y., will be sources of supply for the new Six.

The factory of the new Six, itself, is at Elizabeth, N. J., the Corporation having purchased the plant, patents and other resources of the Duesenberg Motor Corporation at this manufacturing and shipping point. This plant had reached large size during the war for war-motors production.

It is now being vastly enlarged and augmented—for never before has a light weight Six cylinder car been brought out for big production.

With its lightness of weight, new spring suspension, and other new features made possible by radically new principles of engineering, the new Six marks the greatest advance step in automobile construction since the invention of the pneumatic tire. It will fill a gap, which has always existed in the automobile field; and will become the car of those, who, heretofore, have believed that ownership of a six cylinder car was permanently denied to them.

Anyone desiring further information about the plans and car program of the Willys Corporation should write for our booklet.

The Willys Corporation
Fifty-two Vanderbilt Avenue, New York

N. B.—This is one of a series of advertisements to acquaint the public, automobile trade and buyers of motor cars in general with the present scope and important plans of The Willys Corporation

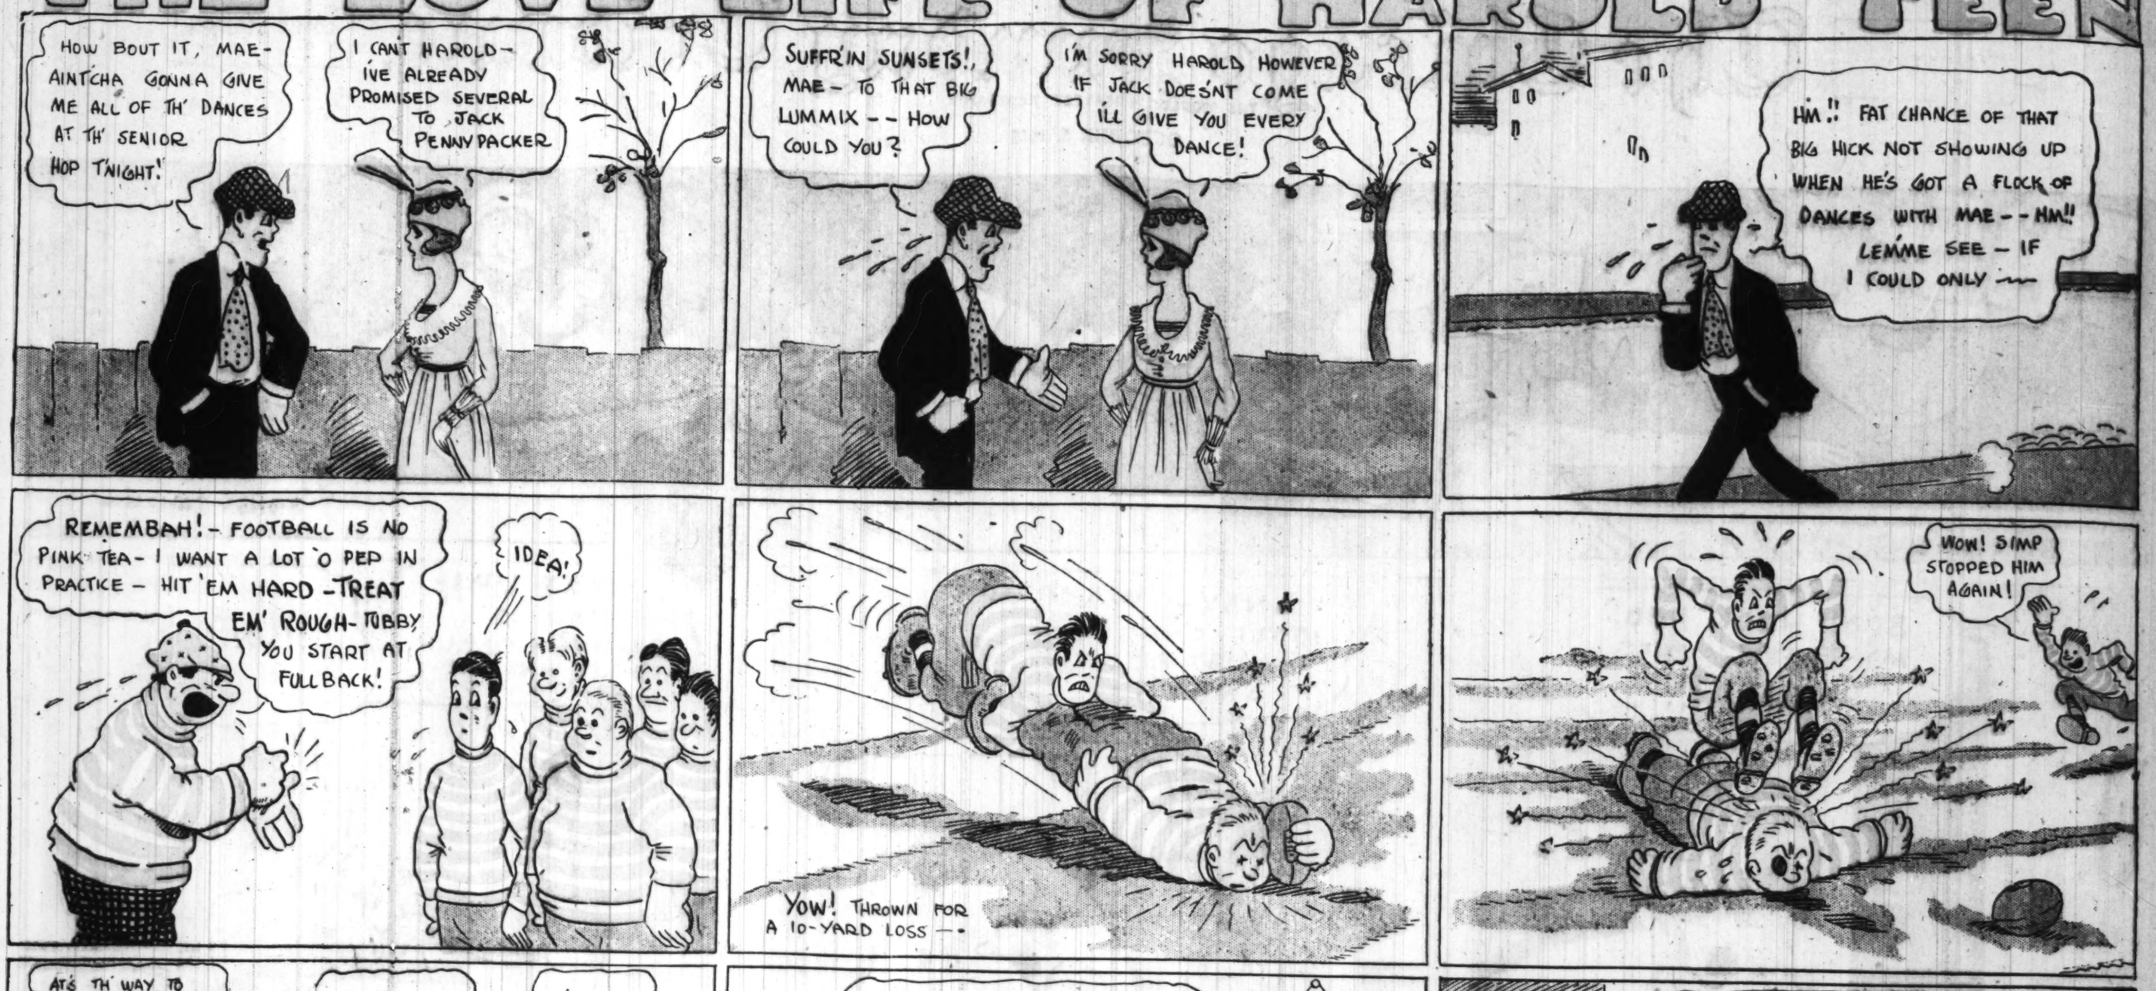
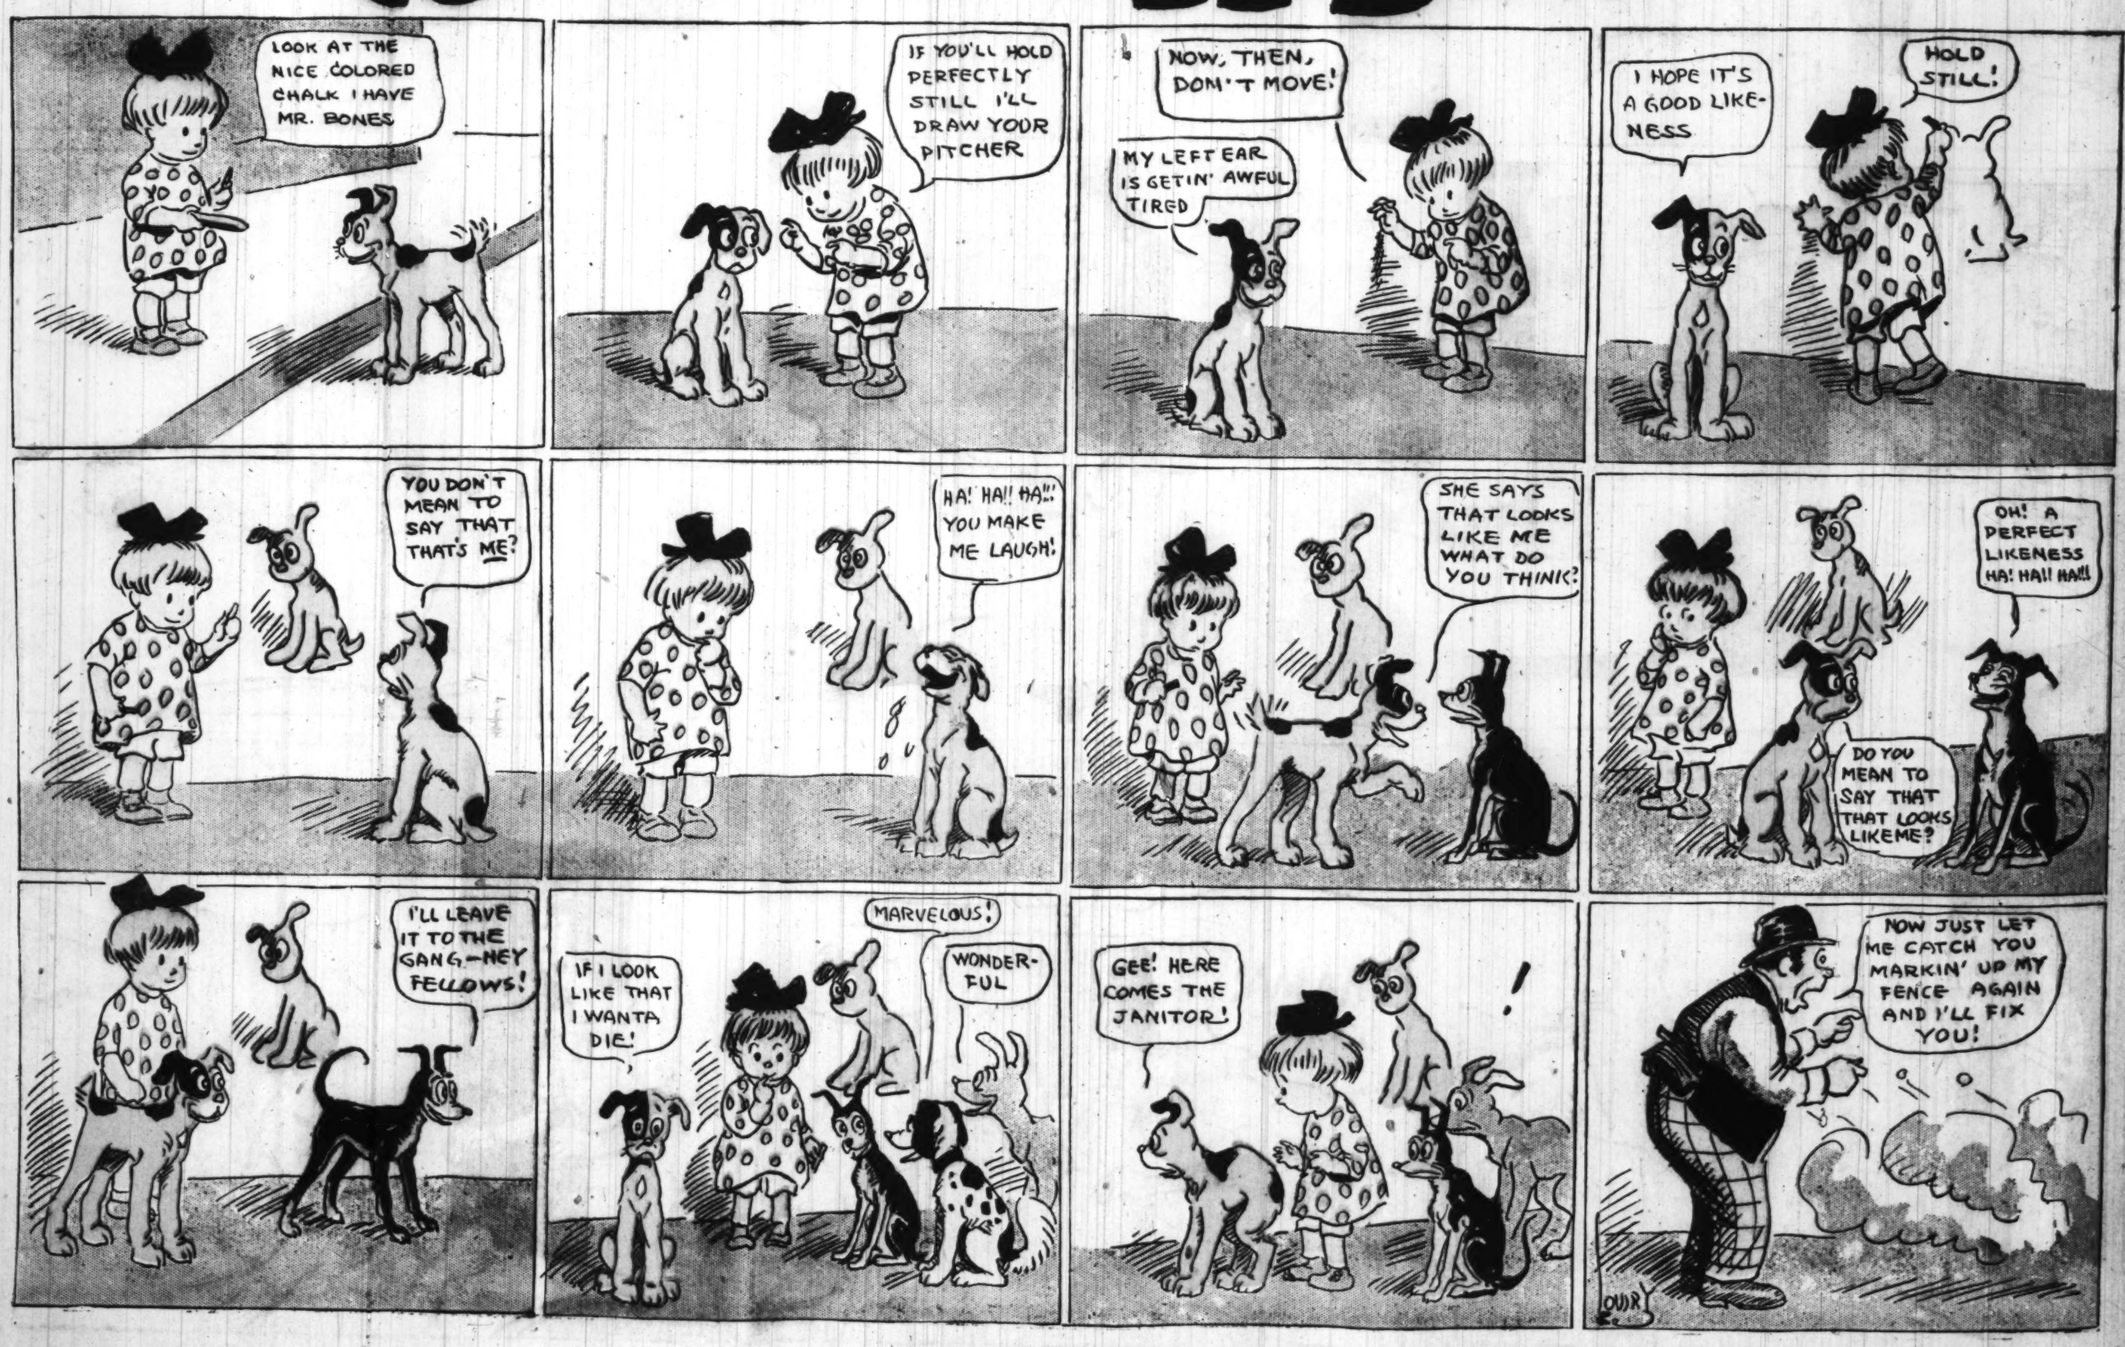
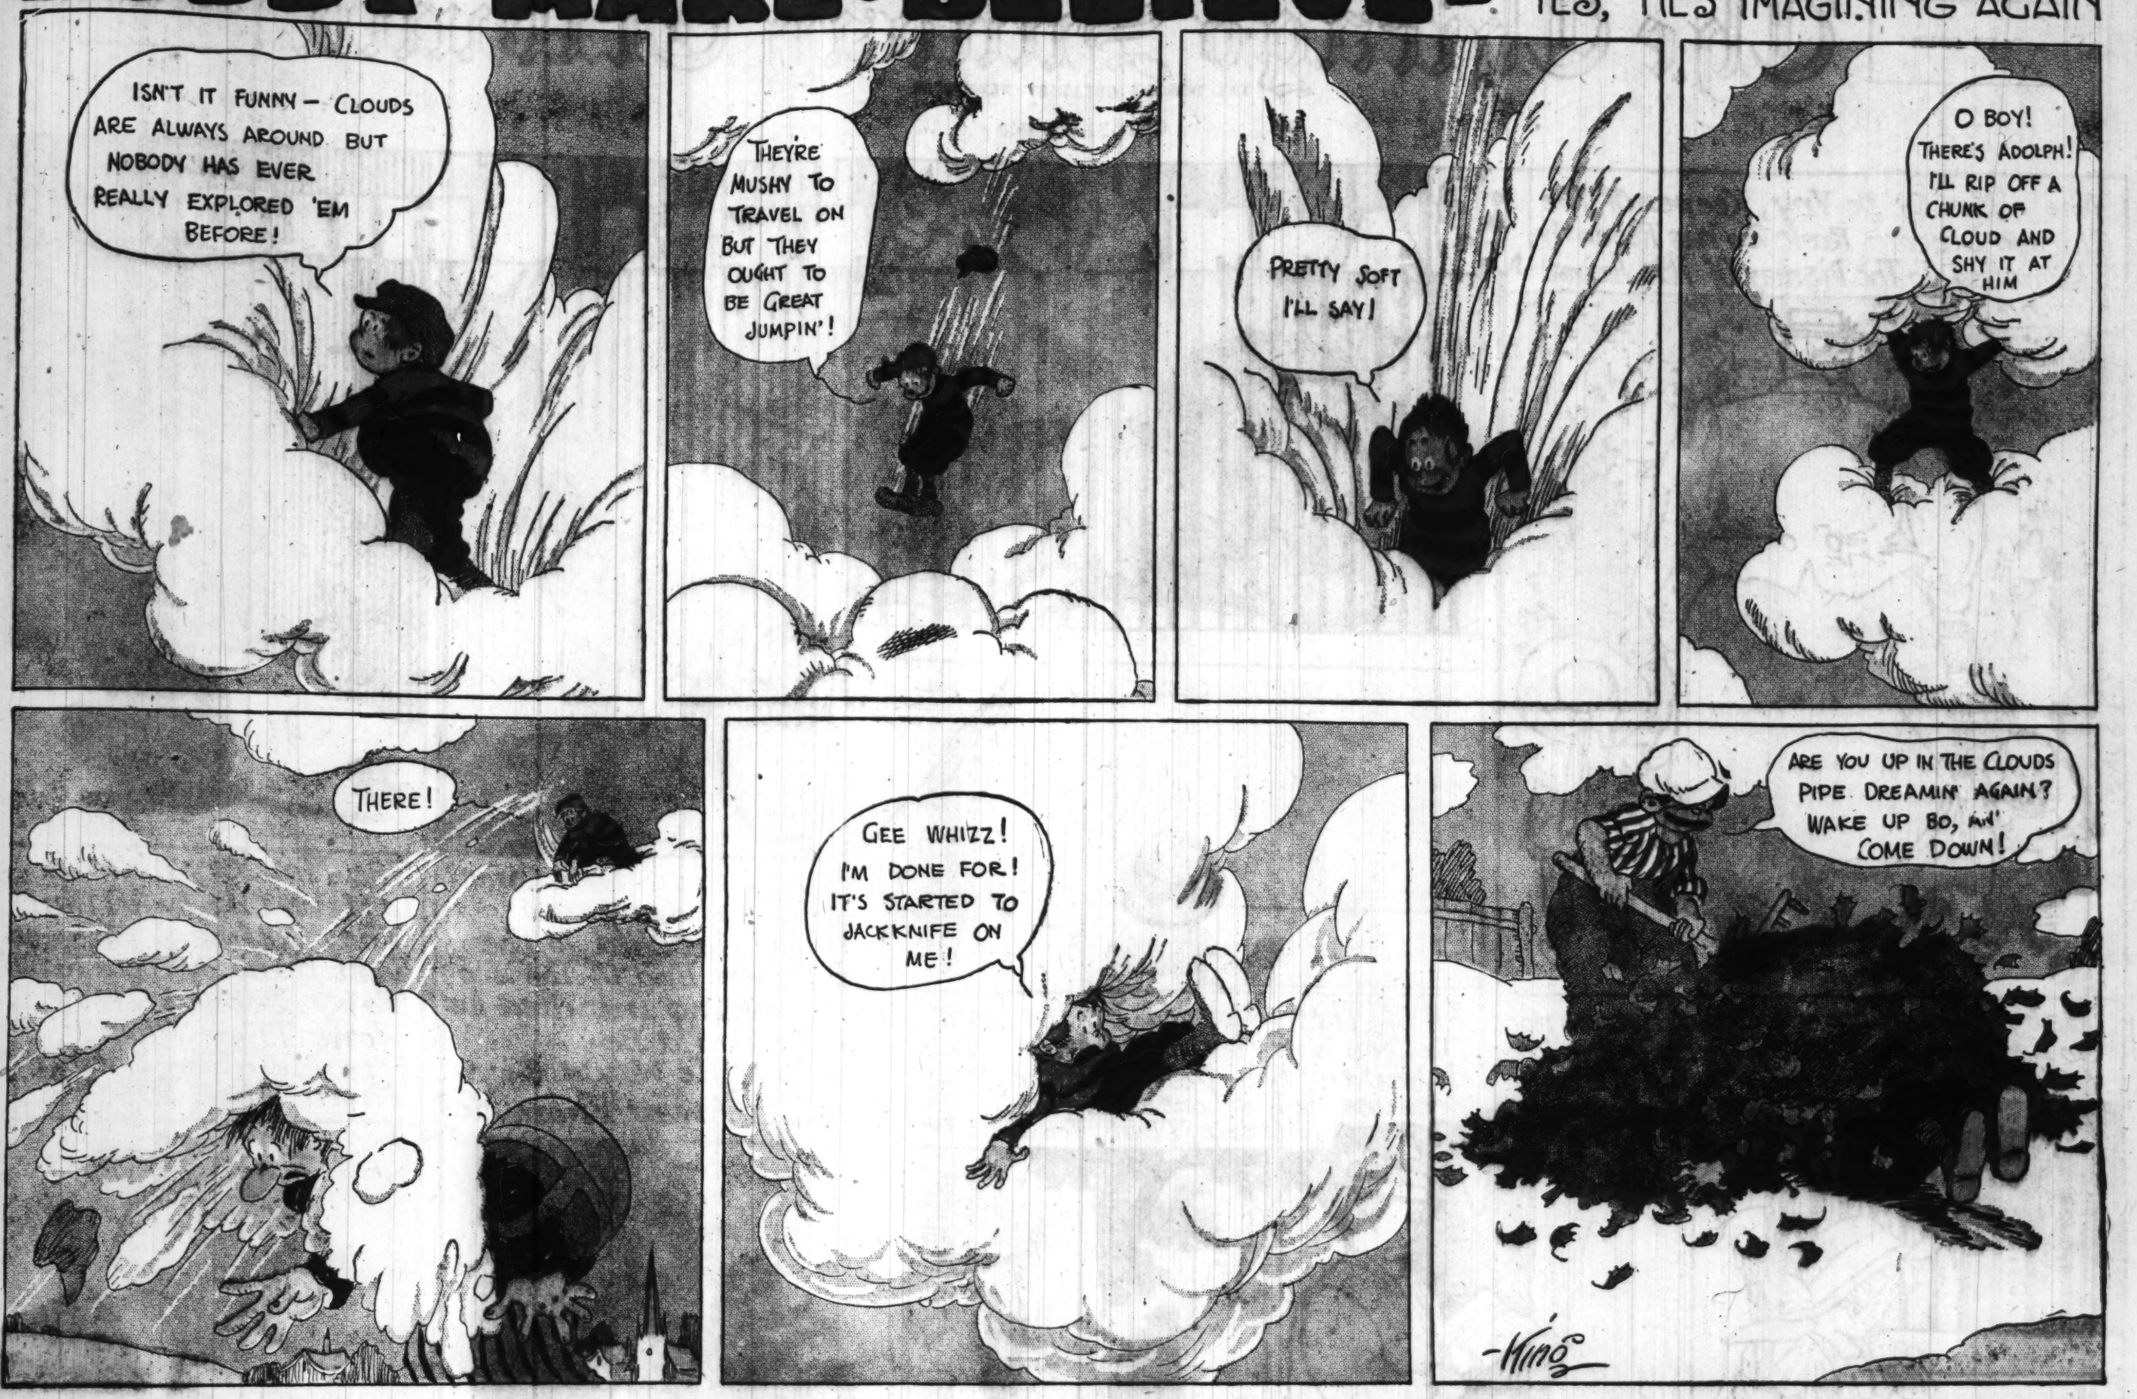
THE LOVE LIFE OF HAROLD TEEN



And his name is "Mr. Bones"



BOBBY MAKE-BELIEVE— YES, HE'S IMAGINING AGAIN



THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE DUNCE DOES A HIGH DIVE. By DONAHEY.

THE water tank which the Teenie Weenies had built was not big enough to supply water in case of fire, so the little folks were forced to place several tea-cups under the rose bush. The cups were placed quite near the tiny houses and then filled with water, which was never to be touched except in case of fire. With their powerful fire engine the little people could quickly throw the cup of water on their houses and that was quite enough water to put out the most stubborn fire.

It was mighty lucky for the Dunce that one of the fire-cups happened to be handy, for that young gentleman was in need of one and he needed it badly.

One morning the General ordered the Teenie Weenies to clean up the dead leaves about the tiny village and burn them. The little folks enjoyed the work and they loved to watch the leaves as they burned.

"I 'speck they ain't most anything I like better than burnin' leaves," remarked Gogo as he threw a big oak leaf onto the fire.

"Betcher life it's fun!" agreed the Dunce, who was standing quite near the fire.

"Well, there will be somethin' that ain't near so much fun if you don't move away from that fire a little," growled the Policeman.

"Ah, I guess I know when I get too near the blaze," muttered the Dunce, glaring at the Policeman.

"You had better move, Dunce," said the Lady of Fashion. "You are standing awfully near and you might get afire."

The Dunce only laughed at the little lady and moved a trifle nearer the fire in order to tease her, but presently he let out a great yell, for the seat of his trousers burst into flames.

One of the fire-cups stood only a few feet away and the Dunce made a great leap and dived into the water with a big splash.

"That young man ought to have his sittin' down place warmed," growled Grandpa as the Dunce climbed dripping out of the cup.

"I think it's warm enough already," smiled the General.

The poor Dunce had burned a hole in the seat of his trousers and he was pretty badly scorched, too, so the General thought he had enough punishment, although the Lady of Fashion thought he ought to be sent to bed for his foolishness.

The Dunce will be more careful in the future, for he learned a good lesson, and although the accident happened over a week ago, he is still taking his meals standing up.

ANNA'S ANGEL CHILD

Note :- Mr. Cy De Vry, Keeper Of The Chicago Lincoln Park Zoo Was Recently Dismissed To The Dismay Of His Animal Friends.)

Baby Had Never Seen A Kangaroo
So Esther And Baby Went To The Zoo.
(Of Course Nurse Had To Tag Along!)

All Of Them Stopped By The Lion's Cage
The Lion Was Having An Awful Rage.
He Wouldn't Eat - Only Bellow And Cry -
Because He Was Lonesome For Cy De Vry!
(Wasn't That Too Bad!?!)

And When They Came To The Kangaroo
He Marched To The
Other End Of The Zoo
Looking Insulted As He Could Be
Like He Would Say-
"Get Away From Me!"

The Monkeys Were
Letting Out Awful Wails.
They Refused Peanuts-
Just Hung By Their Tails.
Baby Sobbed-"Why
Won't They Play
Wiz Me When I Visit Them This Day?"

"Lookit Here"-Said Esther
-"This Won't Do.
'Tis Awful To Have Such A Sad Old Zoo!
Baby We'll Slip Away
And Try
To See If We Can't Find
Cy De Vry."

So While Nurse Read
A Novel Near
The Children Slipped
Away My Dear.
Where They Were Going
They Didn't Say.
Just This They Knew
-They Were On Their Way

At The Park Gates
Stood A Kindly Man
Said Esther,-"Sir
Do You Think You Can Tell Us How To Go To Try
To Find That Mister
Cy De Vry?"

The Man's Kind Eyes
Grew Quickly Dim.
He Said-"Why, Youngsters,
I Am Him.
I Like To Hang Around
You See.
I Love The Beasts And
They Love Me."

"Come Back And See The Lions, Quick!
And See The Monkeys. They Act Sick.
The Kangaroo Acts Funny
Too.
'Come Back!'-Said Esther-
"O Please Do!"

What Happened Then, O It Was Big
The Beasts Joined Hands And Danced A Jig.
The Birds Flew Gaily Everywhere.
The Fish Turned Somersaults In Air.

And Then They All Sat Down To Sup-
And Then; O Dear, Esther Woke Up!
